TORONTO.

PROVISIONS.—The upward trend of live hogs which has been so marked for some time has at least come to a halt, and as a result the feeling in pork products is not so firm. Not that the situation can be said to be easy for this is not the case, but the same degree of strength is not apparent as last week. This will mean several firms have made no change in quotations which is rather unusual when compared with past month. There is a firmer feeling noted in short cut pork, however by one house which is quoting up to $26 per barrel. Taken as a whole, however, the market can be said to have probably reached the top.

During past weeks hogs have been up and down but on the whole show a net loss. Deliveries have become freer. "They need to," said one man. "We have to have the hogs to get the products."

BUTTER. — As far as quotations go there is no change in butter. There is a fair volume coming along at unchanged figures. While the feeling in Montreal at present is firm, there are not a few local men who expect an easier turn here before a great while, when factories begin to change from cheese to butter. This is generally around Nov. 1, but we hear a couple have already made the change finding butter more profitable. It is hard to tell how much butter is held in storage here but wholesalers apparently feel the total is fairly large.

EGGS.—Egg prices show no change. Last week's warmer weather stimulated production to some extent but of late receipts have on the whole been showing a falling off and it was feared that if they continue to drop away at the same rate that storage stocks would shortly have to be called into service.

A feature of satisfaction is the better quality stock which has been coming along this month, showing an improvement over September.

CHEESE.—Production of cheese has been quite appreciable and market shows an easier tendency. A peculiar incident is that country boards in Western Ontario were ¼c. or more above eastern. "Just a case of nerve on part of buyers," was the way one man accounted for the difference. Most factories change from cheese to butter about Nov. 1, but some are already doing so, induced by higher prices of latter product.

POULTRY.—An easier feeling again marks the poultry market and lower prices are being paid for live poultry. Most of the goods are now going into storage. Demand for dressed is slack. There will be an enlivened demand for fresh dressed, especially turkeys around Thanksgiving.

Poor and Effective Provision Displays

Winnipeg Grocer Shows the Difference—His Displays Appeal to the Palate—Showing a Whole Ham too Prosaic, He Claims—Prefers to Cut it and Place on Platter With Some Greens.

There is a great deal in knowing how to display an article properly. Display begets purchases but we have all had the fact demonstrated to us that there can be a big difference in the manner in which an article is shown.

For instance, two men may take the same goods and place them in similar windows but the resulting displays may differ as widely as day and night. One will appeal in such a manner as to create sales. The other will fail to arouse interest. It depends not so much on the goods shown as how they are shown.

Difference in Housewives' Tastes.

This is particularly true in the case of meats and provisions. For instance, you have seen two housewives prepare a platter of meat for the table. One will be so tastily arranged as to at once appeal to the appetite while the other will fail in this respect. So it is with meats shown in the grocery store. Proper display will get business where careless and untidy arrangement would not. Therefore the keynote in display to be observed by the dealer is absolute cleanliness, as well as neat and tidy arrangement. These are essential.

Winnipeg Dealer's Opinions.

There is a certain Winnipeg grocer who is particularly strong on the value of proper display. "I always try to display a piece of ham or bacon in such a manner that it will fairly make the customer's mouth water for a meal off that particular piece," he said recently. "That is the way to appeal to your customers in order to make sales, in my opinion. Attractive presentation so as to appeal to the eye and palate of the public is the big asset in promoting the sale of provisions."

The first thing is that it be displayed prominently, and therefore it is wise to have the provision counter situated where the goods will constantly be under the customer's eye. Always arrange the goods so that customers will be impressed and if they do not buy at the time. it may pave the way for purchases at some future time.

The Too-Matter-of-Fact Display.

"The appearance of a plain whole ham or roll on a counter or in the window," says this Winnipeg dealer, "does not particularly appeal to a customer's appetite. It might make a sale if the customer had intended to purchase, but the idea of the dealer is to appeal to the customer's appetite in such a way as to make the desire so strong that he or she will purchase. Now, instead of showing a whole ham or roll on the counter, I cut it in two, lay the two pieces on a platter; place some lettuce or other greens alongside and it presents a very appetizing appearance."

Green Decorations Help.

This is a good idea as everyone knows how appetizing the juicy end of a cut ham looks. The use of greens assists materially in adding attractiveness. We all have evidence of this in a platter of meat prepared for the table with the aid of greens.

Willie—Say, paw, what's the first maxim a business man should learn.

Paw—That mailing bills ain't collecting money.

Canned Vegetables

With Corn and Tomatoes it is now entirely a weather market. The reports are that if we get no frost for the balance of the month there will be a fairly good pack of both these staples. In the meantime there is not much business doing at firm prices, waiting is the order of the day.

Salmon

We are doing an extraordinary business in the Nansen one pound flat pinks which we are selling at one dollar per dozen. The quality is really marvellous for the money and many buyers who have had deliveries and examined it have re-ordered extra supplies. You who have had some, look into it at once; those who have not had any, order a sample lot also at once, and get some of the best value in salmon that has been put out in this market for many a year. We sell it as pink but it's as good as a great many brands that are sold as reds.

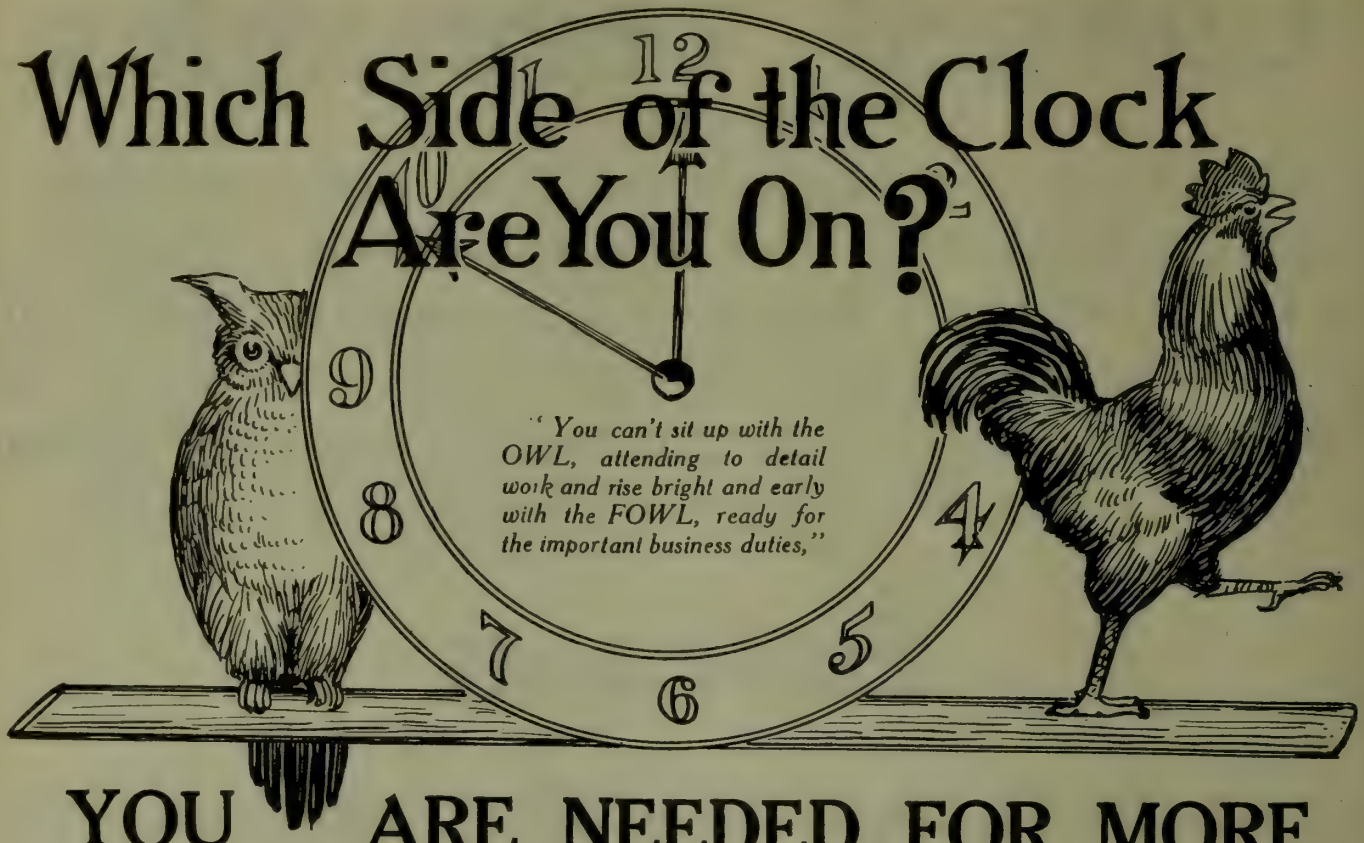
Which Side of the Clock Are You On?



" You can't sit up with the OWL, attending to detail work and rise bright and early with the FOWL, ready for the important business duties,"

YOU ARE NEEDED FOR MORE IMPORTANT WORK

Your time and energies are too valuable to use in attending to the necessary (?) evil—books, keeping tab on your charge accounts, and the hundreds of detail duties which come up every day in any business, no matter how small.

Your best efforts are needed in business hours in attending to the more important duties, such as buying, selling, etc., and your health is too precious to spend your evenings in drudging over detail work.

Let the McCaskey Register attend to details

McCaskey Register Closed

—the keeping of accounts, keeping tab on "bad pays," keeping "good pays" straight, etc.

The initial cost is moderate, the cost of operating is little, but the earnings are tremendous. It will pay you to look into this. Drop us a card and let us demonstrate the McCASKEY SYSTEM.

EFFICIENCY IN DELIVERY

Eggs delivered in the SELF-LOCKING CARTON ensure neatness in dispatch, accuracy and promptness in delivery. More than this, when the dealer is once known by his patrons to parcel his orders for eggs in a SELF-LOCKING CARTON, customers will be more inclined to carry them—thereby saving trips of delivery. EGGS ARE EXPENSIVE — BROKEN EGGS ARE A LOSS.

SELF-LOCKING CARTONS are not only an economy, but a necessity. Made of heaviest Manilla paper, no staples or hooks, so simple in construction that a child can fill them. It is the only ventilated carton; can be placed in the refrigerator with every assurance of the eggs keeping fresh.

They increase the sales, not only of eggs, but of every other up-to-date article.

With the proper system of account keeping you can put an end to accounting worries and know the amount of accounts outstanding at a glance.

The ULLMAN Account Register

is the safest, simplest, quickest, surest to charge and most satisfactory of any system on the market. It satisfies the customer as well as the merchant. There is a decided advantage to the grocer who uses an Ullman Account Register. The customer knows, every time he makes a purchase, how much he owes, and naturally tries to keep it as low as possible. Put in an Ullman Account Register and stop the incessant night work and worry of retail book-keeping.

Send for illustrated booklet or ask for demonstration.

Dinah and Her Jell-O Dessert

Dinah doesn't make Jell-O desserts because they are "easy", as many less competent cooks do, but because they are good. With all her experience and skill, she couldn't make anything finer than that splendid Peach Jell-O dessert —and she made it in a "jiffy".

JELL-O

makes it easy to serve good things on the table with little expense and no work, and your women customers are discovering this fact.

With a good demand and a good profit for you, Jell-O must be on your "gilt-edge" list.

THE GENESEE PURE FOOD CO.,
Bridgeburg, Can.

The name JELL-O is on every package in big red letters. If it isn't there, it isn't JELL-O.

Printer's ink is unquestionably an excellent advertising medium. But it is well to remember that no amount of it can take the place of Merit.

The success of Fels-Naptha soap is based on genuine value. Back of all our advertising is the fact that Fels-Naptha really saves women heaps of work on washday; and on other days.

You CAN'T handle credit customers WITHOUT losing money unless you DO use Allison Coupon Books. Thousands of grocers all over America find it mighty profitable to use them.

How They Work:

A man wants credit. You think he is good. Give him a $10.00 Allison Coupon Book. Have him sign the receipt or note form in the front of the book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with ten dollars—no trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten-cent coupon, and so on until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10.00 and gets another book. No pass books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes—NO LOSS OF MONEY. ALLISON COUPON BOOKS are universally recognized as the best.

Why Don't You do Like Him?

H. J. Buckley, of Moberly, Mo., who bought a No. 84 Kingery Corn Popper with Peanut cylinder extra for $94.00.

He writes that the machine is doing fine. I pay $40.00 per month rent and have four people employed, and machine pays rent and help.

Now to get at his profits in this little, big business, let's do a little figuring. Rent $480 per year. Four clerks at $5.00 per week each, $1,040, total $1,520, or 15 times the cost of his machine. Did you ever add anything to your business that beats it? In some cases they have earned more net profit than that of the business of the entire store. Furthermore, its attractiveness turns the eyes of passersby upon your store. Often it is the agent of sending them in. It helps the business in the store. The Kingery Peanut Roasters and Corn Poppers are of many kinds and styles—Steam, Electric, Spring and Hand Power. Ranging in price from $8.50 to $350.00. Sold on liberal instalments.

PAILS

THE WOODEN DAYS

Nothing Quite as Reliable as Wooden Utensils.

After all, who can suggest anything that will take the place of well-made woodenware and give the service and satisfaction.

The wooden tub holds the heat and keeps the wash water hot longer than metal or any other kind of tub.
No chance of woodenware rusting clothing that comes in contact with it after standing.

Cane's woodenware is well made and is guaranteed to be just as we claim it to be.

When Table Salt is asked for —merely show this bag—no argument is necessary—a glance at the name satisfies any customer—no time is lost, and you are sure of repeat sales.

WINDSOR TABLE SALT

is favorably known to nine out of ten of your customers—and used by that number—it is dry and fine—never cakes or hardens—contains absolutely no grit, and flows freely and evenly from the shaker.

Think of the many dishes in which absolutely pure salt is essential—in soups and sauces, on meats and vegetables, in bread, cake and pastry, and in many fancy dishes—it should dissolve instantly and leave no taste of bitterness.

WINDSOR DAIRY SALT

Makers of choice butter insist on a salt that lends flavor and keeping quality to their product. To command the highest price they use the purest, richest cream obtainable, and, to make each pound of uniform flavor and strength—Windsor Salt.

WINDSOR CHEESE SALT

Our fine Canadian Cheese is noted the world over, and Windsor Cheese Salt plays an important part in this reputation. Windsor Cheese Salt dissolves slowly, salts the curd thoroughly, evenly, and gives a smooth, rich cheese that commands approval—and the highest price.

REPEAT SALES COUNT

The success of many a meal depends upon the salt used—see that you contribute to that success—and to repeat sales—by making Windsor Salt your leader.

Coles Machines embody in quality of materials and workmanship, a construction, guaranteeing a long term of service. They are very economical to operate, due to their great simplicity and design. For instance, to grind one pound of coffee requires no more power than to burn an ordinary electric light for three minutes, or, in other words, one-fiftieth of a cent.

Again, by comparison you will find that in every instance there is a considerable difference in favor of the COLES. Combine these facts then, Price, Endurance, Economy, and they will present three very good reasons why the COLES is the one logical machine for you.

Judge for yourself

Some of your customers will insist on getting certain brands of tea, which you doubtless know are not as good as some other one; but some of these customers have very decided opinions and must be humored. The great majority, however, are influenced by your opinion, and these are the very ones whose trade you are most likely to hold, providing they find that the goods you recommend are always to be relied on.

Tea is one of the most important of the many things sold in a grocery or general store. You know from experience probably that a customer who complains about tea, soon complains about other things and is dissatisfied all round.

You have also found that some customers who did not like the tea you recommended did not complain but went to another store when they needed to buy again.

To come right down to the point. Do you think it pays to push or recommend any tea until you are satisfied yourself that it is the best tea on the market?

Nothing but the best is good enough for your customers.

Now, we believe Red Rose Tea is the best tea on the Canadian market, and we believe any independent expert judge of tea will back up this opinion.

If you are not selling Red Rose Tea and feel that the best is none too good, order a sample case. Then form your own opinion; don't be persuaded one way or the other by our travellers or any one else.

Judge it for yourself

If it is the best you will continue to buy it; if it isn't you won't.

MONTREAL—CARDINAL—TORONTO—BRANTFORD—VANCOUVER

Fall Fair window which appeared in the store of Lequime Bros. & Co., Kelowna, B.C. All the fruit was sold and orders taken for six times as much.

New Business with a Fall Fair Window

Kelowna, B.C., Dealers Trim Window with Home-Grown Products and Make Many Extra Sales—Lasting Advertisement as Well as Direct Seller—Exemplifies What Can Be Accomplished on Special Occasions.

A few weeks ago The Grocer contained an article on the advisability of getting the most out of the fall fairs. The fall fair is an important event in the life of the community. It attracts a large percentage of the people from the surrounding district, brings practically every householder in the town out on the streets and even draws in visitors from a distance.

Such events always mean considerable extra money in the pockets of the merchants. The size of the "extra" money depends largely on the degree of aggressiveness the merchant puts into his selling plans.

Attractive Home Grown Fruit Trim.

From Kelowna, B.C., comes the above Fall Fair fruit window. It appeared in the store of Lequime Bros. & Co. in connection with the exhibition, being dressed by W. Kirby, one of the store's salesmen.

A glance at it shows a display that would rival the arrangement of fruits at some of Canada's big expositions. The object of the window trimmer was to show "Products of Kelowna District" as the top show card intimates, and therefore was most appropriate for the occasion. The background is built principally of canned fruit in pyramid style with fresh fruit shown on the top of each exposed can. As the fruit used was of the choicest it was forcibly connected up with the quality in the can.

The main feature of the window, and the one that would be first observed by the onlooker, was the attractive boxes of fruit systematically arranged from side to side. This showing of colors proved an effective drawing card. In front of these boxes was a row of canned fruit with an apple placed on each while the rows of apples and pears towards the front of the window carry out the idea of abundance of the harvest. Bunches of grapes and large fruit are shown on the floor with a few boxes of cigars in the centre.

There were various kinds of apples used, including McIntosh Red, Wealthy, Maiden's Blush, Alexander Warner's King, Gravenstein, Cox's Orange Pippin and Hyslop Crab, while there were three varieties of pears.

The question may be asked: "Did the window sell any goods?"

Here is the statement of Lequime Bros. "The window attracted a great deal of attention and we sold all the fruit displayed and in addition secured orders for six times as much more, mostly to people who were visiting the fair."

Besides being the means of making many direct sales, such a window is an advertisement that will hold its influence for a long time. Scores of people who saw it will, later on, make purchases and some of these are bound to become permanent customers. No better opportunity than the Fall Fair could be presented to get the attention of these people. In fact, it can be secured in few other ways.

Taking advantage of the Fall Fair also suggests taking advantage of every special occasion during the year. If the town has a horse show, an athletic meet, a political gathering, or any other special event, the window should be made to work overtime. Even if some time has to be spent on the work of trimming, it is usually time most profitably spent.

Thanksgiving Importance to the Grocer

Its Approach Suggests the Use of the Display Window as Creator of New Business—Background Suggestions Appropriate for the Occasion—Attention of the Public Should Be Early Secured to Get Best Results.

It is only proper and fitting that we should feel thankful to Providence that bestows the good things of this life upon us. We would hardly be human if we did not. While this spirit of thankfulness should dwell within us at all times, it cannot help but become more apparent after the fruits of the year's harvest and of the year's labors have been garnered and safely stored away. It is then that our thankfulness can be said to have reached its effervescent state. Since the world began, there has been a time after the annual harvest when people have felt like special rejoicing, and so has developed the custom of setting apart one day each year "to acknowledge the goodness of God for the dispensation of His bounties." It is well that it should be so.

October 28 the Day.

This year it has been decreed that Monday, October 28, shall be the day of general thanksgiving in Canada and that day has been proclaimed a public holiday. There is a special reason why Canadians should be particularly thankful this year. Crops have been generally good in all sections, employment has been plentiful in our cities and in fact there is general prosperity.

The merchant has good reason to be thankful for this is all working to his advantage. In addition, Thanksgiving in itself is something to be thankful for because it affords him an opportunity to secure some extra business. In keeping with the spirit of the period people can be expected to be freer with their money. They will want the table adorned with specially good things. This is one method they use to show they are thankful and the grocer who works in unison with that spirit is going to be greatly benefited.

Use a Thanksgiving Window.

One of the necessaries in arriving at this end is a window trim appropriate to the occasion. The grocer should not by any means allow it to pass without taking advantage of it. Another special occasion which follows a few days after and which would also serve as a subject for a window trim is Hallowe'en. Coming so closely together again this year as they have for the past four, a good many merchants will probably as heretofore combine them into a single trim, making it cover both. While there is a similarity which will allow of the combining of the two, still there is range enough for two separate displays if the dealer so desires.

Early Display Advisable.

At any rate he should at least have one display and it should be arranged early. The value of this is that it inspires the people to a greater degree with the spirit of the occasion and this will all be felt by the grocer in increased sales. Some attractive displays may be arranged with the fruits, grains and vegetables of the season's harvest, the trimmer having something to work on that should be possible to construct into a display pleasing to the eye.

In a Thanksgiving and Hallowe'en display, the whole window may be devoted to making up a trim in keeping with the occasion or merely an appropriate background may be arranged and the balance of the window given up to goods which sell at this time.

A Suggested Trim.

Here is a suggestion for a window. The floor is covered with colored paper. The word "Thanksgiving" is spelled out at the front with some kind of grain. Then come pyramids of fruits and vegetables interspersed with smaller pyramids of grain. For the background, the centre piece is a pedestal of wood. A common log sawed square at both ends will serve the purpose admirably. It is surmounted with a pumpkin. Two smaller pedestals at each side are fitted the same and connected together by a fancy cord on which are pinned bunches of grapes. This display will serve for Thanksgiving and may be turned into a Hallowe'en display by transferring the pumpkins into Jack o'Lanterns and the addition of any other Hallowe'en fixtures the trimmer may desire.

Many grocers will want to devote only the background to this purpose, using the rest of the window for appropriate groceries. In that case the above described background will serve the purpose.

The Background Important.

Here is another suggestion for a particularly attractive background which, while it will mean considerable work, will without doubt warrant it in its attractiveness. A platform 1½ feet high and one foot wide is built at the back of the window. It may be constructed of boxes of a uniform height. End pieces built up three or four feet higher support a heavy board which extending across the top forms a shelf. This whole framework is covered with colored paper ready to add the trimmings. Along the top shelf is placed a row of pumpkins interspersed with bunches of grain tacked on the outer end of the board. Beneath the pumpkins are tacked cobs of corn, the husks drawn back and tacked up in that manner. Fancy cords hang down from the centre and are caught up on either side by the ends being nailed to the side board. Bunches of grapes are pinned on these. The side boards themselves are trimmed with maple leaves. The bottom platform has a series of pyramids of fruits and vegetables. The front of the platform has the word "Thanksgiving" spelled out with cranberries. This is done by putting a pin through the cranberry and tacking on the side to form the letters. The trimmer before he starts to work would do well to make a sketch of this trim and then proceed to arrange it. If the goods shown in the window are to be built up to any height, it might be best to raise the whole background up a little higher.

Goods That Will Sell Easily.

In regard to the goods to be shown in such a trim, most any lines could be displayed, but the lines which will be mostly in demand are those peculiar to any holiday season, and those which border on the luxury class. People will want something a little extra. Nuts, fruits, confectionery and higher-priced bottled and package specialties are all appropriate lines. This is also the season when the turkey makes his grand debut and cranberries take a step into the limelight.

Why Cocoanut is Scarce and Market Higher

Demand for Nuts Apparently Getting Above Supply — Difficult to Get Supplies—Shippers Will Rarely Give Written Contract—Negro Growers Very Independent Since Prices Went Up—Interesting Facts About Growth of the Nut.

Cocoanut is one of the articles sold in the grocery store that has of late joined the higher cost of living squad. Just recently a firmer feeling has developed and several manufacturers have increased their prices. Cocoanut has advanced more during the past year than for a long period back. Ordinarily it is of a staid sober disposition, little given to fluctuation, and for many years it remained at practically an unchanged figure. But probably resenting being left behind in the general upward movement of prices, it decided to also get in line.

Hard to Get Supplies.

Apparently conditions will warrant the higher figures that have been asked for this article by manufacturers during the past dozen or so months. In fact one dealer puts it stronger and says that "conditions not only warrant the higher price but make it necessary." Not only have manufacturers to pay a higher price but are meeting with great difficulty in securing supplies of the raw material. As a result, at the present time cocoanut is decidedly scarce.

Many Uses of the Cocoanut.

Cocoanut is an interesting article aside from the higher prices that are now being demanded of the grocer for it. Not only should it hold much of interest for the grocer but to his customers as well. Mrs. Jones probably is aware that cocoanuts grow on trees, but does she know that the same tree that produces a decoration for her prize layer cake, also produces a mat upon which her husband may wipe his mud-bespattered boots before he enters her clean and freshly washed floor. The fibrous casing of the nut is used for door mats and other matting of various kinds. The inside of the same nut gives to us our shredded cocoanut as well as our cocoanut oil. Indeed, there are few articles of commerce that can be put to more uses than the cocoanut. Down in its native country, the natives get liquor from the sap, vegetables from the small roots, sewing material from the stems of the leaves and also considerable of their food.

Growth of the Tree.

The tree takes about nine years to get to the proper fruit bearing stage and is good for 50 years or more, during which time each tree will produce about 50 nuts annually. These nuts take about three months to ripen. They fall when ripe, after which they are collected by the natives. The home of the cocoanut is in various parts of the tropics.The tropics as is well known, are frequently visited by cyclones and several plantations have been destroyed in this way in past years and it takes new trees nine years to attain a bearing stage again. The nut that comes from Jamaica is considered as highly valuable for shredding purposes by manufacturers. Here as elsewhere it grows on a palm tree, whose round trunk rises unbrokenly from 20 to 50 feet, terminating in a cluster of leaves that are universally admired. The nut as we know it, is enclosed in an outer casing which makes the complete nut as large as a pumpkin. This casing is broken when the nut falls on becoming ripe and protects the inside fibrous casing from damage.

Negro Grower Not Dependable.

The path of the manufacturer in the way of securing supplies is strewn with many difficulties. In the first place the shippers in Jamaica will seldom tie themselves down to a written contract. The shipper has to depend on the negroes to bring in supplies and the negro is not always a dependable person. When he wants to work he can work, but he is usually as lazy as the proverbial mule. If it rains he sits in his hut and smokes his pipe and as it takes very little to keep him alive, he is under no incentive to work.

Then again nuts have gone up in price so much the last few years that the negro will sell whenever and to whomever it suits him. Cases have been known where a sloop loaded with nuts coming down to a central point to be sold under agreement to a certain party, has been stopped within hailing distance of that party and every nut sold to another buyer who offered a slight advance.

Thus it will be seen that the securing of supplies is often pretty much of a gamble, thus accounting for the present scarcity and high price of the shredded product.

THE NOVA SCOTIA DISTRIBUTORS.

J. W. Gorham & Co., Halifax, N.S., are the Nova Scotia distributors for The Hills Bros. Co. of New York, importers of Camel figs. The name of J. W. Gorham & Co. was by error omitted from the list of Canadian agents in The Hills Bros. Co. advertisement in The Grocer of October 4 on the back cover.

Giving the clerk a "call" in front of a customer is not good business. Wait till the store is empty.

FARMER ADVISED TO DEAL AT HOME.

Some good advice is given farmers on buying at home in preference from mail order houses in a recent issue of Farmers' Magazine. The article is signed by the "Hired Man," and in the course of his remarks on the betterment of conditions in general on the farm he makes the following observations:—

> "These big guns (referring to financiers), have mergers on everything us farmers use. Why not start farmer's socities in every township in Canada? I don't mean societies like the Grangers we had here forty years ago whose sole object was to see if their blacksmith could not be cut down from a York shilling to 10c. for shoeing a horse or to buy tea from the grocer at 23c. instead of 25c. This picayune, little, small stingy business is not good, simply because our villages and towns are just what make our farm homes attractive so that when we help our home merchant or mechanic it is this fellow that helps pay our taxes and chum with us. It isn't the fellow to whom we send our money 100 miles away that knows us and helps us. He wouldn't speak to us if he did."

If all farmers' papers would follow out this example, a good work would be done for the country as a whole. Farmers would see the desirability of buying their necessities from their home-town merchants, and thus help raise the value of their own farms.

WORKING TAIL END OF SEASON.

While early business in any line is desirable, the tail end of the season can often be turned to good advantage. Some grocers are inclined to give up pushing a line while possibilities for its sales are still quite large.

For instance, many grocers began to forsake the fruit trade a couple of weeks ago. One Toronto grocer felt that there was still considerable business possible as many people are tardy in getting their requirements. He decided to put forth one final, supreme effort with this line. He went down to the fruit market and purchased the largest amount he has bought at any one time this year. Naturally buying a larger quantity he got a closer price. He displayed them profusely inside and outside his store and found that there were many people who had not yet got their full requirements.

Thus, is shown the value of never giving up until you are sure all opportunities are at an end.

PAYING THE MERCHANT.

In a recent issue the MacLeod (Alberta) Advertiser gives the following straight talk to its readers:

"The clerk of the weather permitting, this week will see the virtual conclusion of harvesting operations in this district, and all indications point to a much more expeditious threshing and shipping of the grain than was the case a year ago. It all means that the tide of money will again begin to flow in this direction, and that a good many people who have been somewhat strangers to our national medium of exchange will find themselves reintroduced to the dollar of our daddies. Delighted, we're sure. Of course it will be a nice thing to have even a modest credit balance on hand after the bank advance has been met and the implement dealer's lien has been paid off. The temptation will likewise be strong to pitch in and buy some of the things whose lack has been sorely felt for a good many months past.

"But, Mr. Farmer, don't forget the local merchant who has been 'carrying' you all this weary time. He has uses for money, too. He, too, has notes to meet and drafts to protect, not to mention such little incidentals as food, rent clothing, meals, and shoes for the kiddies. The moral of all this is: remember your debts as you remember those indebted to you, and see that some of the grain money gets into circulation here at once, and the whole community is benefited thereby."

This is excellent advice, and it applies to all sections of the country. The local dealer is too often allowed to wait when customers who have been "carried over" for more or less lengthy periods, spend their money extravagantly or in mail order purchases. It is a good sign that the press is beginning to awaken to the duty it owes the merchant. If more papers would second this advice, the results would be beneficial.

How about clipping this out and showing it to your local editor? It may induce him to insert something to the same effect.

PASSING ON INFORMATION.

Some dealers even yet have the feeling that the less the clerk knows about new ideas and news of the trade, the more satisfied he will be with his salary. They act accordingly, by not giving the clerk the privilege of studying grocery conditions and withholding ideas that would mean money if properly executed.

With others the order is entirely reversed. Clerks are given every opportunity to learn more about the business. Their employers know that the more they know, the better will it be for the business. One of our Western Canadian representatives relates an incident exemplifying the force of the latter. A dealer in Edmonton, Alta., whom he recently called upon, stated that he always passed The Canadian Grocer around among the clerks. "There are many good ideas," he said, "for the clerk on courteous treatment towards customers," and intimated that the more the clerk knows in this regard the more valuable will he be to the store.

Every large store has from three to five or more clerks. They are going to sell more goods and come in contact with more people than the dealer himself, and therefore should be just as well posted on salesmanship ideas and treatment of customers.

It is a mistake not to give the clerks every chance to improve their selling power. If by this power they increase sales, the dealer makes more money, and they are justly entitled to consideration in respect of salary.

TOMATO AND CORN PRICES.

Opening prices on canned tomatoes and corn are out, and from the quotations it is evident that the late, wet season has not been conducive to an extra heavy pack although it is fair on the whole.

Tomatoes have opened at $1.37½ as compared to $1.17½ of last fall. It will, of course, be remembered that the opening price of 1911 was not long held to. Those dealers who had not ordered ahead had to pay much more for their tomatoes later on account of the short crop.

This year the delivery amounts to about 60 per cent. with the Dominion Canners without having to go outside their own factories. Last year this percentage of delivery was only 40 per cent. so that this year's pack is evidently substantially ahead, with an increase of 50 per cent. This would indicate that prices will not take the big climb above the opening figures that they did a year ago. Whether this will be true or not remains to be seen.

Corn has opened at 97½ cents, same as a year ago. Last year the percentage of delivery, however, was somewhere around 89 or 90 while this year the canners announce 75 per cent. The late season must be held accountable for the decrease. Corn, therefore, to apply the above reasoning, should firm up a little more than in 1911.

With pumpkin prices opened at 85 cents per dozen, 15 cents less than a year ago. This should insure a large sale for pumpkin and if sold at 10 cents straight means a good profit to the retailer.

KEEP PACE WITH SEASONS.

A great deal of business is lost by many grocers by not realizing the change of seasons quickly enough and taking advantage of the new opportunities presented by each.

The past few months furnish sufficient examples of this being the case. When the late fruit preserving season commenced, the live grocer was off with the sound of the gong, putting forth his strongest efforts to corrall the best portion of the trade as early as possible. The less progressive man in due time awoke to the fact that fruit was being sold by his neighbor for preserving and also began to push it. By this time the best trade had been secured by the more aggressive dealer.

Then when he was still drumming along on fruit only, the progessive man noticing the advance of the season had switched his greatest efforts to pickling supplies and was off with a goodly portion of this trade before his neighbor got under way.

The two may be likened to woodmen in the pioneer forest. One forges ahead and secures the best timber available. The other follows in his work taking the less valuable stuff. Thus with business. The one dealer puts his efforts behind a line when it is most seasonable and secures the cream of the trade. The less progressive follows and has to be satisfied with what is left.

Just at the present time, the important fact for the grocer to remember is that summer has once more passed into history and that fall with its demand for goods peculiar to that season is now here. The man who hopes to lead in the race for business must keep pace with the seasons.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

No real salesman will make a promise he knows he cannot fulfill.

Pass the trade paper on to the clerk. If he is industrious he will make it worth your while.

The best patronage comes from satisfied customers, and broken promises do not make satisfied customers.

One of the most important things for a young salesman to learn is that courtesy is an essential factor in selling.

The razor-backed hog can be easily selected from the swineherd. He will usually be found against a tree, "stropping" himself.

Let the grocer get his staff as enthusiastic over business as the rah-rah boys are over the rugby game and the cash register will play a livelier tune.

Thanksgiving is the next special event. The window will not have much to be thankful for unless it is so appropriately trimmed that it will attract the crowd.

With the cold weather comes the season of hot drinks. Cocoa is one of the most delightful cold weather beverages. The grocer would do well to suggest it frequently to his customers.

Someone is reported to have invented a shoe polish that will shine black, red or tan shoes. If this be true we may possibly see the extremist in dress wearing a 'boot of many colors,' thus going our old friend Joseph, of Biblical history, one better.

The time the apiarist attacks the hive is when it's full of honey; the time to catch your debtor, is when he has the money. The apiarist some time ago commenced his autumn work; the grocer who now wants his own, should not his duty shirk.

The rugby season is on. Besides affording the example of exercising lungs, the business man can glean many valuable lessons from the game. For one thing it demonstrates the value of team work. Let the grocer take the cue and get his staff pulling together for a record fall trade. Enthusiasm is an essential feature.

Organizing Routine Inside the Store

The Only Way to Manage a Store Methodically—Brainwork Is Up to the Proprietor—Regular Duties Laid Out in Schedule Removes Considerable Every-Day Worry from the Management—How Many Managers Really Manage?

*By Henry Johnson, Jr.

As a sequel to the story of my auto experience let me tell you about my plans for inside organization. There are certain things that must be done about a store every day. Being such routine tasks, it is folly to direct them specially every day. Yet that is what hundreds of alleged "managers" do. How far can anybody expect to advance in the work of organizing a business who looks after all details every day himself? Answer: Not very far.

An Introspection Suggested.

When I hear a man say that he "cannot get good help" I wonder whether he deserves it. I generally conclude that he does not. I find usually that he "has trouble getting people to take an interest in the business." Then I find on every hand ample evidence that he himself is not manifesting any great amount of interest in the way his store is run. Often he is arbitrary and frequently erratic. He tells somebody to do a thing, but he never tells him why it is done. Usually, he has no general plan, but goes it haphazard every day from the opening of the door to the buying of insurance. Make no mistake. If you do not "take an interest" yourself, you cannot inspire much interest in another.

"The four-flusher fools nobody but himself," as Butler correctly says: Many a merchant is a four-flusher who does not himself suspect it. Introspect a bit on this and see whether you are measuring up to your job.

Organize the Routine Work.

The first step in organization, as I see it, is to get certain things regulated so they will run automatically for the most part. To do this, you must plan; and it must be YOU that plans, for that is your special business. If you will take the bull by the horns and lay out certain work for everybody to do, then you stand some chance of getting it off your mind. If you get details of everyday routine out of the way you will have time to devote to original work—to the advancement and growth of your business. This means more planning all the time; but, as I say, planning is your one best bet so far as your own occupation is concerned. Here is a little of my stuff in this line. It was composed after careful consideration of each man, boy and girl—their places, their capacity and the suitableness of the work for each. It runs along now that it has become established, though it required a few hours during the first few days of its incipiency. Now I hardly think of any of these things, but am free to plan other things.

RULES AND DUTIES—JOHNSON & SON.

We ask for the hearty co-operation of everyone to the end that these RULES may mean something. They are designed to make the work systematic and therefore really easier for each of you.

Punctuality is essential. If the hour is seven, be here at seven. If the time is eight, be here at 7.50 so that you may be all ready for the day's work absolutely on time.

It is desirable that all cleaning and straightening-up be done before 8.30 a.m. No washing or scrubbing can be done anywhere in sight of the customers after 8.30 a.m. Thus it is imperative that everyone be at his post ON TIME, and get right at the daily duties—else the whole scheme falls down.

These rules will be amended from time to time. If you think of ways to improve the work your suggestions will be more than gladly welcomed. But DO NOT CHANGE ANYTHING unless you have the order in the regular way—then all will go smoothly. Let us consider and amend; but let no change occur until there has been full consideration and the change has full authority behind it.

Yours for Better Work,
JOHNSON & SON.

Believer in Schedules.

These are samples of the minute detail into which these directions go. The rules for conduct are similar in that they go into matters of dress, politeness, cleanliness, care of stock, care of premises, etc., according to the person for whom intended.

We are so far from perfect that I feel only limited satisfaction in what has been done; but that little has helped a lot—and we are said to have a presentable store. I know, too, that I get time to do more work outside of my store than most men do in their places of business. Yet nobody who finds me in my store will care to say that I seem to be idle.

I am a believer in system and schedules. I know they work because I have worked by them successfully for years. Maybe what I have outlined will prove helpful to some of you. I hope so.

Vote Goes Against Early Closing By-Law

Ratepayers of St. John, N. B., Reject Proposal — Defeat the Bill by Big Majority—Laboring Classes Vote Strongly Against It—Why Plebiscite Was Taken.

St. John, N. B., Oct. 15.—(Special)—The little corner grocery and its right to keep open as late as the proprietor was willing or his customers demanded, was the chief issue in a plebiscite which was taken in St. John on Tuesday last. The vote was for or aginst the adoption of a proposed early closing law and was of unusual interest on account of its being the first time to call into operation the provisions of the new city charter which provides for the initiative, the recall, the referendum and the other modern improvements which usually accompany the commission form of government adopted here last spring.

Incidentally the result was not encouraging to those who expected to achieve their ends by this means as the Early Closing bill put before the people in this way was defeated by a decisive majority.

Partly as the result of changing business conditions and partly as the fruit of the agitation carried on from time to time by the clerks, many of the larger stores close at six o'clock and most of the larger groceries at 6.30 or 7 o'clock. In many parts of the city, however, chiefly the residential sections and more particularly the districts peopled by working men and their families the smaller stores think it necessary to keep open later.

Last Year's Law Repealed.

Efforts had been made by the Early Closing Association, composed chiefly of clerks, with a few of their employers, to make the early closing more general and when persuasion failed they sought to succeed by law. An Early Closing law limiting the hours of closing was passed last year, but proved unsatisfactory and was repealed. The Association drew up another law, with some changes to meet the objections which had been made to their first effort, and presented it to the city commissioners. The commissioners decided against its adoption and the association then petitioned for a plebiscite on the matter under the initiative clause of the new charter. They succeeded in getting the required number of signatures, 1,400, but the vote went against them by a majority of 481.

Workingmen's Strong Opposition.

The opposition was especially marked in the workingmen's part of the city, although it was carried by two to one in three of the north end sections where the agitation had its birth and waxed the strongest.

Following items are from the issue of The Grocer of Oct. 21, 1892:—

"A Toronto broker wrote to one of the largest tea houses in London, Eng., for the agency at Toronto. They replied that they were negotiating with another gentleman to represent them at Toronto, but if he would be their agent at Ontario they would appoint him."

Editor's Note.—Twenty years ago the geography of this country was evidently not very well known. But to-day it would be difficult to find a business man in the Old Country who was not acquainted with every province of Canada.

Senator Ogilvie, Dr. Reid, M.P., Mr. Benson, president, and Mr. Thompson, secretary of the Starch Co., whose factory is situated at Cardinal, Ont., waited on the Minister of Railways and Canals the other day about the water power at Cardinal, by which their machinery is run. The canal improvement interferes with the power which is supplied by water from the canal."

Editor's Note. — The Edwardsburg Starch Co. was not only in business twenty years ago, but for over 50 years. In 1909 the 50th anniversary of the founding of the company was celebrated.

"Canadian dairy butter appears to have recovered its position as an exportable stock. It has now had two good years, the last one better than the first."

Editor's Note.—It is different to-day. There is mighty little butter being now exported from Canada as we need it all for home consumption. This is one forcible evidence of the great advances this country has made in the last two decades.

Montreal, Oct. 17. — Wholesalers are now in the midst of the fall business and a general good trade is reported on all sides.

The opening prices for tomatoes are placed at 1.35 to $1.37½ but the actual selling price is $1.60, so that the former quotations had hardly time to dry on the paper before they were changed. Corn opened at 95—97½ but actual selling price is $1 to those who had not booked ahead.

Rice, subsequent to favorable crop reports, has declined considerably.

SUGAR.—Locally, demand for sugar is fair, refiners receiving the usual seasonable business.

There was a slight stiffening in the European market owing to the war scare but things have eased again owing to good reports about growing crops. The continuance of fine weather has of course tended to encourage sales on the other side.

DRIED FRUITS.— Just what effect the Balkan situation will have on the market here cannot as yet be gauged, though it is perfectly evident that it will seriously hamper negotiations with those countries producing fruits for shipment to this country. As code cablegrams will be denied transmission to the affected area, it can readily be seen what trouble will arise.

Both Smyrna figs, and Sultana raisins will naturally be affected, while prunes from Bosnia and Servia and Greek currants must also feel the pressure. It is reasonable, therefore, for us to predict higher prices all round.

It is evident that coast packers are counting on the near East situation to bring about a decided stiffening, as a strong situation now exists for California prunes and raisins. They are evidently arguing that any interference with shipments from Turkey and Greece will mean a falling back by most countries on the coast for supplies.

COFFEE.— Coffee, following reports of damage to crop, and lack of news of favorable opinion about flowering, has started an upward movement in price and it is likely that a further advance will be scored if the present bullish feeling continues. Of course, the primary advance has so far had no effect on local prices. Market here rules steady with a good amount of business doing.

NUTS.—Sicily filberts have advanced this week according to prediction in a recent issue. The market is still firm and further advance is likely.

Sicily almonds on the other hand according to cable from Palermo are a little easier, in spite of strong feeling prevailing last week. Locally the demand is good, and a number of lines are moving freely.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Rice—Rangoon down 15c per cwt.

Sugar—Still easy.

Opening prices on balance of canned goods.

Toronto, Oct. 17.—Trade this week is reported of a fair order, volume of business being quite up to standard for season. Most of it is for immediate requirements but some shipping of goods beyond the lakes for early winter requirements is being done. How ever this business has not really got under way. In fact many of the new lines of goods have not yet come to hand.

With the wane of the preserving season, retail demand for sugar has slackened. Prices on sugar remain unchanged, but there is an undertone of easiness as conditions of the growing crops are extremely favorable.

The opening prices on tomatoes and corn and other late canned goods not previously named have been announced. Tomatoes are $1.37½ per dozen for group A, which is 20c per dozen higher than last year. Corn has opened at 95 to 97½ cents.

SUGAR. — Refined sugar shows no change from week ago, $4.95 being quoted in Toronto. The situation remains about the same, an undertone of easiness still ruling. Demand is now back to normal basis and with conditions still favorable, it merely means matter of time until lower quotations will be felt in refined prices.

Excellent reports come from Europe regarding beet crop while Cuban cane is proceeding well. It is felt that the Cuban crop will likely exceed the highest yet produced if all cane in the fields can be turned into sugar by favorable conditions of labor and weather.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES.—The cool weather is proving beneficial to trade in corn syrup. According to manufacturers both wholesalers and retailers are taking hold and trade is getting off to a good start. DRIED FRUITS.—One of chief features in dried fruit market is low prices which are being quoted on California seeded raisins. Prices opened at extremely low level but there are still lower figures being quoted. "Unheard of low prices are being quoted, especially on 1-lb. choice," said a dried fruit broker this week. "We have low prices but are being underquoted. Prices are being offered on coast now that would allow seeded to be sold to the retailer at 6½ to 7 cents, thus allowing them to be sold at 3 lb. for 25c." Local wholesalers bought considerable when prices were higher than to-day's figure but apparently recent low prices have brought additional business. The high prices for Valencia raisins are seemingly not having any steadying tendency on California. Said one broker this week: "I don't suppose there is one box of Valencias being sold this year to 10 last year."

War cloud in Europe is causing some speculation as to whether dried fruits will be affected. It will probably have a tendency to interfere with natural conditions in all Mediterranean fruits, but most of big cargoes have now left the East.

New crop dates will soon be on market and will meet with good reception as stocks of old goods are cleaned up here.

COFFEE.—A fair tone of steadiness is maintained in coffee both here and elsewhere. While local jobbers may not make any immediate change in quotations, steadiness is expected to prevail.

Continued unfavorable news from Brazil concerning growing crop acts as stimulant to general markets. There is another feature in the decreased receipts compared with the same date last year, the deficiency being in round numbers about one million bags. New York markets continue to fluctuate to a considerable extent.

SPICES.—Some companies have reduced price of celery seed to 40 cents. In fact some firms did not go up to record price that primary markets really warranted. It is probable that price will not go below 35 cents. Cloves still hold their firm position, while peppers, both black and white, are steady. There is a fair volume of trade at present time. Requirements for pickling season are pretty well to an end but there is a fair call for general purposes.

NUTS.—Cooler weather always instils more life into nut trade. It brings with it season of evenings around the fire in the home and the consumption of nuts is naturally increased. The Thanksgiving holiday will also mean a larger demand for this line, and dealers would do well to feature them during the coming week.

There is a general steady tone to prices on practically all lines of new crop nuts. The first shipments of new crop Tarragona almonds are due in a few weeks. New walnuts are expected here by end of month. Brazil nuts still hold their firm position.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.—One of the unexpected happenings during past week was a 15-cent reduction in price of Rangoon rice. Reports which have been current did not lead wholesalers to expect this move. However, it has come and locally this grade is now quoted at $3.83 per cwt. Somewhat better prospects in Far East is said to be cause of reduction. High prices have slackened purchasing to some extent and decline may cause a little move activity.

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.—The opening prices on tomatoes, corn and other lines hitherto unannounced, have been named. The rear guard of canned good prices for 1912 have features of both joy and sorrow. Pumpkin, for instance, has opened at 85 cents for 3's which is 15c lower than last year. The feature, however, is the high price at which tomatoes, the big canned goods line, has opened. This year's opening price is $1.37½ for group A, which is 20 cents above last year, and a record figure. It cannot be said that this was or was not a surprise as dealers had little idea of what figure prices would open at.

With increased factory facilities in Ontario, and the loads of tomatoes which vines carried this year, prices have opened at a higher figure than ever. Canners state that the weather conditions interfered with the packing and that the cost of packing was high this year. The delivery will be 60 per cent. Last year it was 40 per cent. Last year prices opened at $1.17½ and were immediately jumped up to $1.40 to $1.50 by jobbers.

There is an inclination on the part of some houses to jump prices again this year. One firm said they would have no more than would fill orders and that they would ask $1.45 for any new orders taken. Others would sell at the opening figure.

"I will give you all you want at that figure," said one jobber. "The speculative value on tomatoes this year is going to be nil. The man who has loaded up without enough tomatoes to carry him over until next fall, stands to lose the amount it costs him to carry them. I don't think tomatoes will go above the present figure. Last year with a 40 per cent. delivery, we only had to import a small quantity from the States, while this year the percentage is 60. That means that we have 50 per cent. more tomatoes as well as many new factories' output. There is another feature in that British Columbia can get tomatoes from California at a lower figure than they can bring them from Eastern Canada."

Those retailers who ordered tomatoes from firms at $1.10 per dozen certainly got in right this year as it will mean 50 cents per case extra profit on their goods.

Corn opened at 97½ for group A which is same as last year. The delivery is 75 per cent. Squash and succotash are also the same as last year.

Pumpkin pie should be a more general article of diet this year, as canned pumpkin is 15 cents per dozen below last year's price. There will probably be a full delivery.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

POINTERS:—

Sharp reductions in canned apples, pears, peaches and blueberries.

Winnipeg, Oct. 16.—Good progress is being made in the threshing and marketing of the Western grain crops and receipts of wheat are now averaging the enormous amount of 1,000 cars a day.

Trade conditions are favorable.

Wholesale merchants report that their men on the road are securing large orders for winter supplies and spring orders are already coming in volume.

Industrial conditions remain excellent, there being plenty of work for all workers and the volume of cash trade still maintains its high record.

In groceries there is little to report. Prices are steady, and business active. New prices have been announced locally on some of the new pack of canned goods. Apples, pears, peaches, plums and blueberries are lower. Other lines for the present are unchanged.

The demand for sugar is still heavy but it can hardly be expected to be maintained at the present rate much longer.

Collections are somewhat slow but will undoubtedly improve now that the crop is moving out in earnest.

SUGAR.—Sugar prices have taken a drop of 10 cents per cwt. since last report. This is in sympathy with the Eastern market which is weak. The Western consumption of the commodity is still very heavy.

CREDIT MEN'S ASSOCIATION GROWING.

Winnipeg, Oct. 17. (Special).—At the last meeting here of the Association of the Canadian Credit Men, it was announced that a branch of the Association had been opened in Regina, in Montreal and St. John, N. B., with a secretary-treasurer in charge at each city. It was further announced that the general manager, Henry Detchson, would attend the next monthly meeting of the B. C. Canadian Credit Men's Association in Vancouver to make final arrangements for the inclusion of that Association in the Canadian body. The British Columbia Association has signified its desire to join the Canadian Association and when this is completed the Canadian Credit Men's Association, Ltd., will operate in every province in the Dominion.

The legislation committee announced at that last meeting also that the "Bulk Sales Act" was to be passed by the provincial legislature in Alberta at its next legislature and the Federal Minister of Justice at Ottawa has definitely promised his attention to the amendment of the criminal code governing false statements.

STRENGTH OF QUALITY TEA MARKET.

With regard to a Ceylon tea auction, the London Grocers Gazette of Sept. 21 says:

"The auction, this week, we find showing vast improvement as regards quality, and this being appreciated, smart advances were paid. There was evidently strong support in the room from more than one important quarter and the tone ruled very firm. The poorer medium offerings, as well as common, were on the down grade. There was again some appalling rubbish among the lower grades which everybody could quite well do without.

"There is a fair-sized sale for next week, but quantities from now onward are expected to drop off very rapidly, and no doubt the prospect of this is tempting the buyer to come in while he can."

Chilliwack Merchants' Business Problems

R.M.A. of That Town Holds Banquet and Invites the Business Men—Value of Organization Pointed Out—One Speaker Suggested Couldn't Limit Credit Time to 30 Days.

Chilliwack, B.C., Oct. 14.—A complimentary luncheon given recently by the Retail Merchants' Association, was attended by some thirty local business men.

The object of the gathering as intimated in the invitation card, was to outline the aims of the association in its effort to solve the problems which confront the business man, to raise the standard of doing business, to improve the fraternal relations, which would permit and make easier to obtain the best results from organization not only in regard to matters of more immedate concern, but also as affecting other interests in the city and valley.

In the addresses and discussions these were well set forth, and the advantages of the business interests of the city being united for the common good, emphasized, showing the benefits which could and would accrue from a success of the asociation along these lines.

A luncheon was at first held after which the meeing was called to order by President W. L. Macken, manager of F. J. Hart & Co. He addressed the gathering on the subject of "Business Men and their Relation to Each Oother, or our Common Interests."

He pointed out particularly the necessity for the creation of a spirit of fellowship, a discussion of common problems, and united action in the furtherance of mutual interests.

G. H. W. Ashwell, of G. R. Ashwell & Son, gave a brief outline of "Our Association, its importance, its worth and how to use it." Mr. Ashwell spoke of the value derived from attending the regular meetings, and the improved conditions and benefits shared by the members and urged all present to become actively associated.

The fact that one of the speakers was C. A. Barber, the editor of the Chilliwack paper shows a wise move on the part of the merchants. If all merchants secured the thorough co-operation of the newspapers in their town much good could be easily done towards keeping trade at home.

"The place and part our Association should take, in the larger interests of the valley," was the subject presented by Mr. Barber. Interests in which the Association should make its influence felt and in which it could be of practical benefit were civic life and civic government, educational matters, the Board of Trade, public improvements in the municipality, the production, marketing and sale of the products of the valley, pointing out that in co-operating with these various interests, the merchant would not only render great benefit, but would also in so doing assist in the solving of his own problems.

The subject of the marketing of fruit drew forth considerable discussion, J. H. Ashwell, manager of the Chilliwack Canning and Preserving Co., emphasizing the need of co-operative handling of the fruit products. F. A. Hewer, G. P. Chamberlain and W. L. Macken also spoke on the question.

J. Burton of Denmark Q Burton, answered the question "Can we make our Association a success and how?" decidedly in the affirmative. Mr. Burton had only one answer and that was an enthusiastic "yes" and pointed out how it could be done, in a way that was clear and concise. He advocated organization, co-operation and modern business methods.

"The credit business and its perplexities," met with earnest treatment by J. Hammar. Mr. Hammar essayed a large percentage of sound sense and enthusiasm and there was lots of "meat" for thouhgt and action in the "jaw bone," as he termed it, as dispensed by a man who has had considerable experience with the methods employed by big concerns and agencies in this phase of business. Mr. Hammar advocated a 30-day limit to small credits. The credit business was poor business for both the business man and the customer, he declared.

H. J. Barber laid stress on the important features discussed. He was gradually getting his business on a cash basis by educating the people to the fact that a cash business paid both parties best.

M. H. Nelems addressed the meeting briefly on the points of the benefits possible to such an organzation, and the needs of co-operation in furthering the interests of the city and valley.

SMUGGLING CHARGE MADE.

Individuals Accused of Taking Orders For Goods Sold By U. S. Department Stores.

A charge comes from Deer Island, New Brunswick, and is made by a merchant, that a number of individuals there are taking orders for goods sold by one or two United States large department stores and smuggling them into Deer Island. In a letter to the Grocer the merchant says:

"I wish to ask you to write the Customs Department regarding the business being done here by individuals who are canvassing for and smuggling goods over from Sears Roebuck & Co., Chicago, and also from Larkin & Co., large dealers in toilet articles, drugs and sundries of every description.

"This business is not being done by merchants but by families who are daily on the road with order-sheets from these firms. They are a hard people to deal with and as they sell very cheap goods, it makes it difficult for us to compete."

The Grocer has placed the matter before the department as requested by the merchant and developments are now awaited.

Just before going to press The Grocer received the following letter from John McDougald, Commissioner of Customs: "The Editor, Canadian Grocer,—

"I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 11th instant respecting alleged smuggling of goods at Deer Island, N.B.

"The complaint will be thoroughly investigated as soon as possible and is being referred to the chief preventive officer for this purpose."

Delay in Manitoba Flour Price Change

On Account of Unsettled Wheat Market Due to Balkan Trouble —Reductions Announced in Western Canada However—Shortage of Rolled Oats at Some Centres — Big Demand for This Line.

Once again has the unforeseen interfered to delay the expected. There has been no change as yet in price of Manitoba flour as anticipated. At least there has been no general change, although there are some reports from the West of reductions by some mills, ranging from 30 to 50 cents per barrel in keeping with the basis of new wheat. A week ago dealers expected that some of the mills would lead the way at any moment, but so far there has been no announcement. The reason assigned for this is the uncertainty that has prevailed in the wheat market of late. One of the outstanding reasons for this has been the Balkan trouble in Europe which has served to somewhat upset present conditions.

"In the face of present conditions," said one miller this week, "we would be foolish to make any change, at least until things become more settled. We must take the future into consideration. There is no use in making a reduction to-day and then have to change it in a week or so to meet the changes in the raw material market. Flour was booked for a reduction but this trouble in Europe has caused millers to hold off."

The quality of the new wheat is good and much in advance of last year. East of the lakes its use is not yet general but is becoming more so. Those mills situated in the centre of supply in the West are of course able to get new crop wheat in advance of those East and this may account for lower prices being announced out there first. One of the large Canadian banks after a comprehensive examination of crop conditions in the West estimates the wheat yield at 196,000,000 bushels, and that of oats at 224,500,000 bushels.

New oats are badly needed in many parts of the East and millers will be glad when supplies begin to come along in good quantities. On account of the lack of raw material there is a shortage of rolled oats at some centres. Toronto, for instance, is particularly bad off in this respect in both package and sacks.

The demand for rolled oats has been specially good so far this fall, the cooler weather that has set in proving beneficial to trade. Dealers who are pushing rolled oats at the present time are getting good results.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR.—There is no change in local situation. There is a steady feeling in market for old crop wheat flour and no change is anticipated immediately. Towards the first of next month a reduction may take place but this depends entirely on market conditions. A good demand is coming from country points to replenish stocks which have run low owing to hand to mouth policy till now in force. It is learned that some mills have made a big hole in their stocks in order to fill demand.

Little is being done with new crop wheat flour as buyers are awaiting developments before placing orders.

TORONTO.

FLOUR.—No change has been made in price of Manitoba flour on this market as yet. A week ago it was thought probable that a change might come at any time but the trouble in the Balkans is given as a reason for delay in readjusting prices. Miller say there is no use setting a price until future of market becomes more settled. The use of new wheat for grinding is not yet general and this is also a cause for delay.

Winter wheat flour shows no change during the past week and there are no special features to report. Delivery of wheat is tardy and there is not much flour offered.

CEREALS.—A shortage of rolled oats still exists on this market and with some companies situation is quite acute, and they are far from able to fill their orders. This is the case in both sacks and package. Milling companies have run out of old oats and are unable to get any appreciable quantity of the new crop. Supplies from the West have been late and slow in coming forward.

MILL FEEDS.—There is no change in prices of mill feed, bran still bringing $23, and shorts $27. Steadiness prevails as demand exceeds supplies.

WINNIPEG.

FLOUR AND CEREALS.—The flour market is in an unsettled condition. Some of the western mills have already announced a reduction of 50 cents per barrel, others of 30 cents. The initative it is understood has come from one of the large milling interests in Saskatchewan. A general reduction of 50 cents per barrel is not improbable.

Experiments have been conducted this year in shipping fresh figs from California to the New York market. They arrived in first class condition. Unlike some of the other deciduous fruits, figs cannot be picked before they are ripe —they lack flavor if matured after they have left the tree—but these experiments show that ripe figs, carefully handled and quickly cooled, can be shipped across the continent in refrigerator cars. It opens the field for another fresh fruit.

Rot In Potatoes Causing Some Concern

Wet Weather Has Affected Potatoes on Low Land — Hopes That Later Stock May be Alright—New Grapefruit is of Excellent Quality—Big Crop This Year — Florida Oranges Will Also be Big Crop.

At the present time, reports of rot in potatoes from several sections are causing no little concern as to probable situation during coming winter. It is well known that the yield in Canada is large this year but there are some fears entertained that rot may reduce the amount of saleable stock considerably. Much wet weather has caused rot to set in in many low districts, at least in the early potatoes. The first shipments from New Brunswick were unfavorable in this regard and now Ontario is finding fault for the same reason and prices are firmer. It is possible that the later and better matured stock may not be affected. At least this is to be hoped.

The first shipments of Florida grapefruit received on Canadian markets were of excellent quality and this combined with low price expected this year should mean a greatly increased consumption of this line. Further reports confirm the news of a large crop. The Citrus Exchange estimates that about five times as much grapefruit will be shipped from Florida this year as last as the crop will be fully 50 per cent. bigger than any previous year. Hundreds of acres of groves which are bearing for the first time this year will ship, and the old groves, moreover, have heavy yield.

Oranges are not coming forward yet but will shortly. The orange crop is later than usual this year, being about three weeks behind last season. One estimate puts the crop fully 50 per cent. greater than last year, which would make the yield between 7,000,000 and 8,000,000 boxes as last year's yield amounted to nearly 5,000,000.

Next week should be a brisk one in fruit in anticipation of Thanksgiving. Fruit always sells more freely around a holiday. Preserving fruits are on the wane, grapes now being the prominent line and selling well.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS. — Fruits are still moving along though the basket variety is not asked for as much as during previous weeks, due to the late preserving season being practically over. Lemons are somewhat firm while the other lines are also in a strong way.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS. — Peaches for a long time held the centre of the stage on the local fruit market, but the position has now been usurped by grapes. For the past week or so the supply of peaches has been dwindling, and this will continue until the zero mark is reached. Grapes are in good supply at 18 to 20 cents per basket.

Grapefruit made its appearance on the local market towards the end of last week. Florida being the source of supply. The advance shipments are of excellent quality. They are selling at $5 per case of 80 and 96. Florida oranges will be in shortly and will be reasonable in price this season, as will also grapefruit.

VEGETABLES.—The big feature of the week is the firmer feeling in potatoes. It is well known that there is a large crop of potatoes in all sections of Canada this year. The strength in market is due to rot which is showing up in many sections. The first shipments which were received from New Brunswick did not turn out well. The stock from Ontario is also showing signs of the same thing and dealers are wondering if the low prices which were expected this year are not going to come. Much of the stock received so far has not been fully matured and it is still possible that the later ones may not be affected. It is to be hoped so.

Cucumbers are about a thing of the past. Tomatoes are selling at 30 cents per basket. Green corn is now up to 15 cents per dozen.

CHEESE SOLD BY SHOW CARD.

You can't expect to sell the goods unless people know you have them. Grocers have been advised of the possibilities in the sale of fancy cheese but putting in a stock of itself will not work up any extensive trade. You must let people know that you have the several different varieties.

One Toronto grocer last week determined to do this by means of a show card. It referred to the different kinds of cheese handled giving their names—Pimento, Swiss, Roquefort, Gorgonzola, Limburger, Stilton and cream. This was being hung outside the door so as to catch the eye of the passerby as well as regular customers. Results were good.

A WEIGHTY PROBLEM.

Great was the pride of the old salts at St. Andrews in their ability to figure. A summer visitor pasing by while a group of fishermen were listening to one of their number boasting of his prowess in juggling figures, stopped and asked if he might submit a problem, which was:

"If you were to catch two hundred pounds of cod and sold the catch at five cents a pound, how much would you make altogether?"

Receiving no immediate reply he passed on. Coming back an hour later the summer visitor found the fishermen deep in thought. Asking if they had found an answer to his question, he was asked to repeat it, which he did. A look of relief spread over the face of the old salt who had been boasting. "No wonder I couldn't answer it," he said, "all the time I was figuring on mackerel."

No Conformation of Duty Removal Report

More Ontario Canners Heard from and All Deny Knowledge of the Petitioners Who Are Said to Have Made Request from Government—Tone of Statements Intimate that Pack of Tomatoes this Year Will Be Larger than Last.

Since last issue of The Grocer a number of other Ontario canners have been interviewed on the report that canners are alleged to have asked the government to remove the duty on canned goods coming from the United States. Not one of those heard from states that there is any truth in the newspaper report so far as they are concerned.

Knew Nothing of It.

"I knew nothing of the matter," states one canner, "until I saw the rumor in the papers and I know nothing more now."

"There is no truth in the statement whatever as far as we are concerned. Such a step would be simply ridiculous. The canners of Canada are well able to supply all the requirements of the Canadian people with good goods at a fair price."

Still another firm contradicts the rumor.

"One thing is certain," stated a representative, "the canners this season will pack sufficient goods to supply home demands, as the crop is exceptionally good, particularly so in Western Ontario."

"By this time," one firm stated, "you have no doubt noticed through the press that we lost no time in contradicting the report from Ottawa regarding asking for the removal of duties on tomatoes and so far we have been unable to learn who the petitioners are."

Expect Fairly Large Pack.

In referring to the Canadian pack this firm said that while the season had been an abnormal one they believed that when completed it would be found that the pack was considerably in excess of last year.

Cucumbers preserved whole for use as if in natural fresh form are imported from Switzerland.

THE WEEKLY FISH COLUMN.

Some dealers complained bitterly this season about receiving small herring. They should remember that the fishermen do not use a whistle or "fish yell" to bring the big ones to the net.

Did you ever go fishing and get in your mess one large trout and the balance just big enough for one mouthful? Well, it is just the same with deep sea fishing.

The fisherman has no easy task. He expects consumption no matter whether his fish be large or small.

The percentage of consumption of fish in Canada is greater per capita than in the U.S.A., although the latter country can boast of 100,000,000 population.

Don't tell a customer that you can get her some brook trout. The season is over.

It is surprising how few know what a finnan haddock is. It is a fresh smoked haddock and got its name years ago when the first haddock were smoked in Findon, Scotland. The proper spelling would be "Findon Haddock," but some canny Scotchman has dropped the "d" and thus made the pronunciation easier.

If a customer asked you for a few facts about the bloater, could you give her any? A bloater is simply the round herring bloated and smoked, while the Kippered herring or kipper is merely a herring split and smoked.

Fresh halibut is becoming mighty scarce, in fact it will soon be off the wholesalers' lists, but the frozen stock can always be relied upon.

It is a little too early yet to ship frozen herring. The halibut can evidently stand a greater degree of cold than the shivering herring, as it will not thaw out so quickly. Perhaps the medical authorities will realize in the frozen halibut, at that rate, the possibilities of securing fine ice bandages for the head. That certainly would be getting fish on the brain.

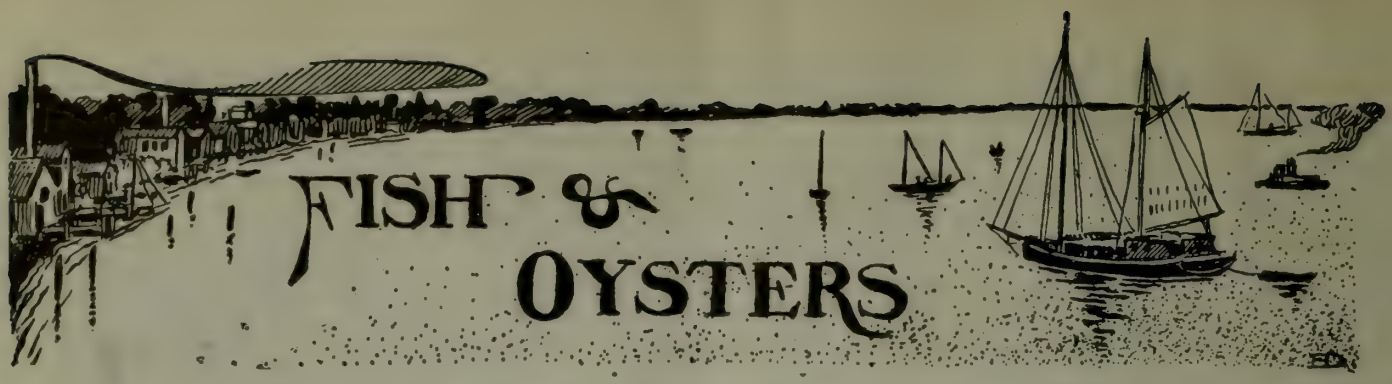
The demand for smoked fish is becoming enormous. We are not surprised. There is a good large profit for the retailer.

It looks as if smoked fish will be in heavy demand the whole year round, instead of in seasons. It is simply up to the retailer to make it so, and he can. The packers will willingly do their part.

Some lines of fish are moving up in price. They believe that the "high cost of living" fiend has no right to make "fish of one and flesh of the other."

The deep sea fishermen don't tell as many "fish stories" as the fresh water anglers, although some will tell you about landing a whale in a net!

Steak cod is very scarce just now. Stormy weather has prevented good catch.



The Oyster Trade is Off to a Good Start

Compares Favorably With Last Year in Spite of Somewhat Unfavorable Weather—Oyster Quality Was Poor at First of Season—Is Now Rapidly Improving — Retailers Have Now More Time to Give to Fish Department.

The oyster trade has already got off to a good start this season, according to reports received from different centres of the Dominion. In fact, on some markets it is stated to be slightly in advance of the same time last year, and that in spite of weather that has not been altogether favorable to demand. It is true also that quality of the oysters was not good at the beginning of the season. On account of the cold summer spawning was late and the oysters were accordingly late in attaining their growth. They are developing rapidly of late, however, and before long will have attained a prime condition. It is stated by one oyster authority that by the middle of November the quality will be better than last year. With improved quality and a run of continued cool weather, a healthy and active tone should set in. Dealers would do well to get behind this line right away, as the possibilities are already large.

There is a more active tone to the fish trade of late. Dealers are finding more time to devote to it, as other lines are not claiming so much of their attention. One dealer in Toronto, for instance, who of late has been giving the major portion of his time to fruit, has now with the dwindling of the preserving season turned more of his attention to fish. This week he received his first shipment of prepared and smoked varieties. He put a display of them in the window with a show card and the first day sold an appreciable quantity. This shows that the people are ready to buy these lines if they are presented to them.

QUEBEC.

MONTREAL. — Fresh halibut is becoming scarce, but there is plenty of frozen stock at reasonable price. Haddock and cod are also arriving freely while the smoked fish are well looked after also. Oyster season is now in full swing, both bulk and shell selling now.

ONTARIO.

TORONTO.—The fish trade has a fairly brisk tone for this time of year, the colder weather proving beneficial. With the dwindling of preserving and pickling season, retailers have more time to give to fish department and this will be to its advantage. Fresh white fish are scarce at the present time, and some frozen stock is being used by local firms. One house reports that it will have to use frozen halibut also in a week or so. Trout and herring are plentiful, however.

It was stated by one oyster man in close touch with the situation, this week that consumption of oysters so far this season compares favorably with that of last year, in spite of fact that weather has not been altogether conducive to demand. On account of the cold weather during the summer the oyster growth at the beginning of the season was backward, but by middle of November it is expected to be ahead of last year.

There is some difference in the prices quoted by different firms on oysters. For instance, selects range from $1.75 to $2.00 per gallon, those asking the higher price claiming that theirs are of better quality.

Speculation as to the Future of Butter

Opinions Vary Considerably—Some Think Large Fall Make Will Ease Prices—Others Think Demand From West Will Prevent any Accumulations—Egg Receipts Falling Off — Hogs Considerably Below High Mark.

There is much speculation as to the future of the butter market and opinions expressed vary to no little extent. A general steady feeling was reported in last issue, and it still continues with a tendency to higher quotations at some centres. There are many reasons given why the market should rule one way or the other during the balance of the fall.

There are those who are inclined to think that with the closing of cheese factories and a turning to production of butter there should be tendency to easiness. The making of cheese is generally given up about beginning of November and if the flow of milk continues on a fair scale there should naturally be more butter made. This will depend on the character of the weather after the first of the month. An open fall might probably mean that these predictions would come true.

On the other hand it is argued by certain dealers that the demand from the West will take care of any surplus stocks in the East and prevent accumulations that might cause easier turn in market. Then against this it is argued that the West has already a considerable quantity in store in the East, particularly in Montreal, and that it is a question as to whether they will want much more as New Zealand will shortly enter as a factor into the Western supply. In fact Vancouver is reported to have already ordered a considerable quantity from this direction. Thus, with so many things entering into the situation it is difficult to size the future up with any degree of certainty.

Egg supplies continue to show falling off at practically all centres and accordingly there is a general steadier feeling at most centres which in some cases is likely to turn into an advance. On all markets it is necessary for dealers to do considerable scouting in order to fill their orders while in some instances it has been necessary to break into storage stocks in order to fill demands. This is certainly starting in rather early on storage stocks and would seem to indicate we are going to see high prices for eggs this year. It will be remembered that prices were well up into the jewelry class last year.

Poultry and more especially turkeys will receive considerable attention during coming week in view of Thanksgiving demand. There are different opinions expressed as to possible supplies. It seems that this holiday comes a little too early for turkeys to be in the best of condition. This is not so some years, however.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS.—Market is steady for all lines and amount of orders being booked is considered quite satisfactory considering. Plate beef has been in request but packers say that with price of beef so high it is absolutely impossible to fill orders at prices mentioned by inquirers. Even at $17 or $18 a barrel packers would hardly come out on the right side.

BUTTER.—The strong feeling which has prevailed in market for the past few weeks is the chief feature to-day and there does not seem any possibility of a lowering just now. Prices are working towards higher level. The chief cause is of course, the dropping off in supplies, over 40,000 packages being the amount of deficiency to date below corresponding period of last year. Of course the population is growing, and consumption naturally increases, but even so wholesalers are at a loss to know just what to attribute the large drop in the make to. Local demand is good and with big demand from outside sources it looks as if higher prices will be in force next week.

TORONTO.

PROVISIONS. — The firmer feeling that was reported in short cut pork last week continues and some firms are quoting still higher figures. One firm reports good demand for this line and quotes it at $26 to $28 per barrel. Supplies are now in somewhat better condition than a short time ago but there is still a shortage of backs and long clear. However, most houses are able to fill orders.

The improved hog movement reported last week has continued and prices have during the week registered decline, being quoted this week at $7.90 at country points. There is still a slight undertone of easiness.

BUTTER.—There is a somewhat firmer feeling in butter this week as shown in just slightly higher figures that are being quoted by a few houses. Creamery prints are this week quoted at 28 to 30 cents. There are still those inclined to think that when factories begin to change from cheese to butter there will be an easier turn in the latter article. Still the opinion is expressed by some that the demand from the West will prevent any accumulations here. The West, however, has a considerable quantity in store in Montreal now.

EGGS.—Egg receipts are not coming along as freely as they have been and it is only with difficulty that wholesalers are able to fill demands. It is reported that some dealers have had to call storage stocks to the rescue but most firms are able to fill orders from current receipts. It is a feature of satisfaction that the quality of present arrivals is better than some time ago. This is due to cooler weather.

CHEESE.—As noted last week there is an easier feeling in cheese. This is shown in lower quotings at country boards but local prices remain unchanged. There will probably be a tendency to change from production of cheese to butter if present basis of prices continues. Indeed a few factories have already made the change.

POULTRY.—Next week will be one of considerable importance in poultry in anticipation of the Thanksgiving trade. Turkeys are particularly connected up with this holiday, but other lines should also be in demand. Dealers seem to be a little uncertain as to how supplies will be as different reports come in from country points. As dealers have just been paying what they thought poultry was worth for storage purposes, the tendency has been slightly easier of late and it is probable that price may show a slight advance during the coming week.

Good Trade in Fresh Sausage Possible

Now That Weather is More Conducive to Their Handling and Sale—Many Grocers Featuring Them — One Village Grocer Has Already Worked up Good Trade This Fall—How His Order Takers Use This Line to Advantage.

There are many grocers who handle fresh sausages during the entire year but there are others who are inclined to give up the handling of them during the summer months. Because of the higher temperature unless the grocer has proper storage and display facilities, he will find it difficult to keep them in good condition and at the same time show them in an efficient manner. At least, this seems to be the case with a good many.

Now, however, with the weather becoming cooler, the season for fresh sausages is opening up in full force again. This time of the year is particularly conducive to the sale of this line and those dealers who handle them regularly are putting greater efforts behind them while many dealers who handle them at no other time of the year are taking them up.

Bring Other Trade.

Most dealers find them an excellent line to carry in their provision department. People are always on the lookout for what they term "a change" in the meat line. This serves the purpose admirably. When people get to know that the dealer handles them regularly, they will make a point of coming for them and generally when they are enticed into the store to buy this line, they find something else they need. Thus they are important from the fact that they draw other trade as well as the trade in themselves.

How Grocer Worked Up Trade.

A dealer in Havelock, Ont., a village 100 miles east of Toronto, has already worked up a considerable trade in fresh sausage this fall. He began early in September to handle this line which he gets in at regular intervals by express. The first shipment moved slowly but he began to announce to his customers that he would be receiving them on certain days each week and he has now no trouble in disposing of them. They are a line that must be sent out quickly or the quality will become slightly impaired. They are generally shown on the counter with a price card attached. A provision ad. which this dealer has recently been running in the local paper also makes mention of them.

Help to Order Takers.

This dealer takes orders from his customers twice a week and his order men find this line an excellent leader in getting an order started. Frequently if the order taker can get one article on his list others will follow when they otherwise would not. For instance, if a housewife thinks she does not require anything, sausages are mentioned to her. Frequently this line appeals strongly and with the order started, other articles will probably follow. "Specials" of this nature can be turned to good use in order taking.

Packed in Cartons.

A new method of packing sausages has been adopted by some manufacturers who are now putting them up in one pound cartons. The feature about such a method is that it impresses customers with the sanitary handling and in addition the grocer is assured that he is selling a pound for every pound purchased.

At any rate perfect cleanliness should be observed by every grocer who handles this line. It appeals to the customer, or at least unsanitary handling has the directly opposite result. Sausage should be kept at such a temperature that the quality will not be impaired. They should be cleared out before this is possible.

For the dealer who has not a set trade, it is best to get shipments at regular times and with which customers are made acquainted so that they may be sold out in the shortest time possible. To avoid the trouble of ordering for each day, most companies book orders to be sent out on these certain days.

The Proper Care of Oysters

There are many false ideas with reference to this subject. There is one thing the dealer should firmly establish in his mind that he does not require expert knowledge, and that he should not fuss with his oysters. All they want is to be left alone with lots of ice on them. There is absolutely nothing else you can do for them; never wash or put fresh water in them, neither should you put your ice among the oysters; keep them in a compartment package, preferably a Display Case, where ice and water will be separated from your oysters. Sell them as you receive them and get a price that will afford your doing so. When you add water to cheapen your oysters, you are short-changing both the customer and yourself. If it was a case where the water simply took up the space on so many oysters, it would not be so bad, but as soon as you put fresh water among your oysters you immediately depreciate materially every oyster the fresh water comes in contact with, so that what you give your customer is not as good; you have really not treated him as fairly as though you simply took a few oysters out of his pint or quart package. The dealers who are making money out of the oyster business to-day are those who are getting the price, and put the stock out the best they know how.

The business of the "SEALSHIPT" Oyster System's Canadian Branch has been taken over by us. We can fill all orders promptly for "SEALSHIPT" Oysters or equipment.

We are the only exclusive oyster house in Canada. We devote our time and energy to the one thing we know best. If you desire information pertaining to the proper handling of oysters, forward us your enquiries. We will reply to the customers of our competitors with the same courtesy that we extend to our own patrons. We are anxious to have oysters properly handled and in this way increase their consumption.

Business Development

¶ Do you ever feel that your present occupation prevents the development of your business talent?

¶ Many a young man is engaged in office or store clerking. Owing to the nature of the business, he has but a narrow range in which to exercise his talent. He cannot relinquish his position to seek one giving better opportunities and paying a larger salary. To do so would be to give up his only source of revenue, and someone may need his support. Yet it is imperative that he increase not only his business, but also his salary.

¶ We will solve the problem for you. We have need of part time salesmen. Men who can devote spare hours to our work and make as much, and in many cases, more money than they can from their regular occupation. Many of these men we develop into regular road men with a high salary. Do you feel that there are latent forces in you, waiting for an opportunity to assert themselves? If so, we want you to let us show you how to discover them. Write at once for the particulars.

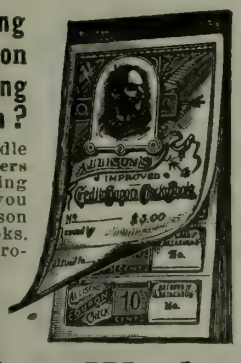
Are You Using Allison's Coupon Books, or Losing Money, Which?



You CAN'T handle credit customers WITHOUT losing money unless you DO use Allison Coupon Books. Thousands of grocers all over America find it mighty profitable to use them.

How They Work:

A man wants credit. You think he is good. Give him a $10.00 Allison Coupon Book. Have him sign the receipt or note form in the front of the book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with ten dollars—no trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten-cent coupon, and so on until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10.00 and gets another book. No pass books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes—NO LOSS OF MONEY. ALLISON COUPON BOOKS are universally recognized as the best.

For sale by the jobbing trade everywhere.

Manufactured by ALLISON COUPON CO., Indianapolis, Indiana

ADDRESS:

The Editor, THE CANADIAN GROCER

143-149 University Avenue, Toronto

Everybody's asking for it.

There's a big demand—especially at this time of the year—for Edwards' Desiccated Soups.

Grocers who lay in a good stock of Edwards' Soups can depend on a ready and steady sale, for these goods are widely and vigorously advertised—and the customers the advertising creates, the soups themselves will keep.

Edwards' Soups take up very little space in your store, they are practically no trouble to stock and there should be on the season's sales.

Send your orders early and be ready to meet the demand which the advertising will create.

EDWARDS' DESICCATED SOUPS

Edwards' Desiccated Soups are made in three varieties Brown, Tomato, White. The Brown variety is a thick, nourishing soup prepared from beef and fresh vegetables. The other two are purely vegetable soups.

You Can Corner the Fig Market

By purchasing the CAMEL BRAND of Smyrna Figs you will be able to secure the fig business in your locality because of the superiority of the goods.

Camel Figs are the only ones put up by the well known packer, Aram Hamparzum. His name on each box guarantees the choice quality of the figs and the absolute cleanliness of the package. Dealers who have had opportunity to realize how easily they sell, and consumers who have tasted the delicious fruit, are alike insistent that no figs on the market equal the Camel Brand.

OILY HANDS CLEAN HANDS

Loss of oil means loss of other articles as well, because oil taints everything it touches, and even the odor will taint butter, lard, bread and many other foods. You will increase your whole business, besides making money on oil when you get a

BOWSER

SELF-MEASURING OIL TANK

because it will please your customers by its cleanliness and accuracy. Unless you have a BOWSER OUTFIT you not only lose money on the oil itself, but you also permit the oil nuisance to drive customers off to trade with your competitor who has a BOWSER. The grocer who uses the old style tank pays for a BOWSER OUTFIT without getting it. The BOWSER OUTFIT does away with measure and funnel, tells the right price to charge for any quantity of oil, tells how much oil is left in your tank. If you want an oil "business" instead of an oil "nuisance," write us for free book No. 222, and full particulars.

The Original

FROM the very details of the feeding of the cattle to your customers' table the Borden vigilance never ceases. The Borden System was inaugurated back in the early fifties by Gail Borden, the founder of the company. Since then it has been perfected to the last degree, forming itself into one endless, strong-linked chain.

The system of producing Borden's milk products under the most sanitary conditions, reaches from the dairy to the home, and the most rigid regulations are observed throughout the entire process of condensing. The result is the best and purest milk products, with the highest awards wherever exhibited. Eagle Brand Condensed Milk is the original. Some of our other Brands are: "St. Charles," "Peerless," "Jersey" and "Reindeer," also Reindeer Brand Condensed Coffee.

"Borden's" means Purity in Milk Products.

SELLING ARGUMENTS

There are selling arguments that are good and there are selling arguments that are better.

In reply to enquiries from the consumer, we have found that it is much more effective to quote oysters in pints, rather than quarts. In years gone by oysters were handled very differently from what they are now. The consumer feels that the price has been advanced, but the value they receive for their money at this time is greater than that which they received ten years ago; that is, they are receiving more solids or actual food properties. The family that required a quart of oysters under the methods that prevailed a few years ago, will only require a pint under the present methods, and will really obtain more satisfaction. There, of course, continues to be more or less watering of oysters, but this method is wrong, and will, as a natural result, be its own undoing. How often the consumer purchases oysters, depends entirely upon the satisfaction obtained in eating them, with the result that it is up to every dealer to put the oysters out in the best possible condition, and obtain a price that will afford his doing so. Obtain the best oysters possible, put them out in the best possible condition, and the trouble of getting a price for your stock will be pretty well taken care of.

We can supply you with the necessary quality; the rest of it is up to you. COAST SEALED oysters stand for more with Canadian trade to-day than all other brands combined.

The business of the "SEALSHIPT" Oyster System's Canadian Branch has been taken over by us. We can fill all orders promptly for "SEALSHIPT" Oysters or equipment.

From a Hard Headed Business Standpoint

Coles Machines embody in quality of materials and workmanship, a construction, guaranteeing a long term of service.

They are very economical to operate, due to their great simplicity and design. For instance, to grind one pound of coffee requires no more power than to burn an ordinary electric light for three minutes, or, in other words, one-fiftieth of a cent.

Again, by comparison you will find that in every instance there is a considerable difference in favor of the COLES. Combine these facts then, Price, Endurance, Economy, and they will present three very good reasons why the COLES is the one logical machine for you.

Not an Enterprise for the "Quitter"

"If there is one enterprise on earth," says John Wanamaker, "that a 'quitter' should leave severely alone, it is advertising. To make a success of advertising one must be prepared to stick like a barnacle on a boat's bottom.

"He must know before he begins it that he must spend money—lots of it.

"Somebody must tell him that he cannot hope to reap results commensurate with his expenditure early in the game.

"Advertising does not jerk; it pulls. It begins very gently at first, but the pull is steady. It increases day by day and year by year, until it exerts an irresistible power."

The Demand Is There---You Simply Have To Supply It

THE EDWARDSBURG STARCH CO. LIMITED

MONTREAL—CARDINAL—TORONTO—BRANTFORD—VANCOUVER

Last year's Christmas window in the H. O. Kirkham store, Victoria, B.C. This was an exceedingly handsome display.

Pushes Fancy Lines by Window Display

Methods of a Victoria, B.C., Firm for Increasing Turnover in Such Goods—Good Profits in the Luxuries—Something About Their Last December's Christmas Display—Large Provision Department Maintained.

It is a well-known fact that fancy lines of groceries give the most substantial profits to the dealer and for this reason a good trade in them is desirable. While a certain business in staple groceries will come of itself, in most lines of fancy groceries some special efforts must be put forth to acquire anything like an appreciable trade. Demand for these lines must be worked up in most cases by special methods.

Many Western Canadian grocers have gone strongly after the trade in fancy groceries in recent years, spurred on by the larger profit and also by the desire to gradually raise the standard of goods sold. One of these firms is H. O. Kirkham & Co., Ltd., of Victoria, B.C., who make a specialty of carrying the finest class of groceries and provisions and also make it a point to sell them.

Selling Through Displays.

One of the methods that have proved effectual in bringing these lines into greater prominence and extending their sale has been attractive window display. This firm have large premises on Fort St., where they commenced business in December, 1910, and here their windows prove of great value as an agent in creating demand for goods. Fancy lines have a way of appealing themselves to customers if they are properly displayed.

Last December this firm had a particularly attractive Christmas window. That it attracted no little attention will be guessed by an inspection of the trim which is reproduced on this page. That it was attractive cannot be denied. Its arrangement, the class of goods shown, the manner in which they were shown with the addition of the floral and other decorations all combined to make an especially pleasing display.

Fancy Lines in Glass.

The goods shown were those which are called for around the Christmas season. One of the features of the display was the showing of many lines such as olives, pickles and fruit in high glass display jars with closed top. Another feature is the shelf which extends along the back, thus considerably increasing the display space and adding to the appearance of the background and window in general. Particular care was taken by the trimmer to guard against crowding and to have the window symmetrically and evenly balanced. The result was a display that appealed to both the eye and the palate, and this is the aim of every grocery display.

Use Efforts to Increase Turnover.

The main thing in fancy groceries is to work the trade up to such a point that the turnover of each line is large enough to well warrant a stock being carried. However, it is not possible to make the turnover nearly as large as in staple groceries, except in the case of some special good selling line. For instance, some fancy imported lines in stock are only turned about twice a year, straight groceries once a month, but meat and poultry is turned over about twenty-four times a year.

Specialize on Provisions.

The Kirkham provision department is quite an extensive one, a big feature being made of poultry as well as choice cuts of other provisions. Display is also an important factor in selling these lines, among the fixtures to allow this to be done to advantage being a long counter-refrigerator display case which keeps the meats in perfect condition, shows them up well and also serves as a counter.

Strive to Give Efficient Service.

The staff employed in office, stores and delivery is now around forty and steadily increasing. The members aim to give polite and efficient service, realizing that it is one of the best advertisements a store can have. Attention is given to delivery as promptness in this department is essential. Regular district deliveries are maintained, and all the horses used by this firm are worked only half a day.

Inducing the Public to "Shop Early"

Christmas is Now Only a Couple of Months Distant and Plans Should be Made Early—Letter on Question of Service Which Had a Good Effect—Advantage in Purchasing Early Should be Emphasized on all Regular Customers.

As regularly as the Christmas season rolls around the cry goes up through the daily press "shop early." No one knows better than the retailer the goodness of this advice—if it were only taken by the general public. But does the average dealer by his own initiative supplement the co-operation of the daily paper by aggressively 'going after' the Christmas shopper and seeing positively that he or she does shop early?

What Methods Are in Use.

These are questions that each and every retail grocer should ask himself: 'What methods do I pursue to get the early Christmas shopper?' 'How can the bulk of the non-perishable goods be got into every customers home long before Christmas eve?'

In the Fall Campaign Number of The Canadian Grocer was an article descriptive of the methods of a Hamilton, Ont., dealer for selling Christmas goods early. He pointed to the power of newspaper advertising and window display and to the importance of announcing the arrival of the first dried fruits, peels, etc., which he claimed were always the best. He hammered home this point about quality with the result that he had the bulk of his Christmas trade in dried fruits, etc., completed soon after the arrival of the first goods.

To get the public to shop early some inducement should be offered them. This Hamilton dealer offers quality. Others, by seizing hold of market features should the crop be short, sell sometimes by pointing out the price advantages in early purchasing. With still others service is made the inducement.

Service is Emphasized.

From the accompanying illustration will be observed one method used last year by Michie & Co., King St., grocers, Toronto. This was a letter sent out to customers early in the season with a view to getting purchasers to shop early. The buyer is appealed to on the service platform. The comparisons on amount of business done during certain days prior to Christmas are forcibly emphasised by the length of the lines. The talk which follows is reasonable and at the same time strong enough to get the attention of a good many customers the result being that more purchased Christmas goods well in advance.

Handicap on the Dealer.

Unless the public can be induced to buy early, the dealer has no chance to efficiently handle his own customers nor those extra ones which always come round at Christmas times. By getting regular patrons of the store to purchase all their non-perishable goods two weeks or a month before the holiday, the dealer is in a splendid position to give adequate service to the "strangers" as well as customers when Christmas week arrives. As it is there is always too much business crowded into Christmas eve.

However, nature is prone to delay, possibly thinking that values will be better just before the holiday. If this idea is dispelled from people's minds, if they can be shown that delay is dangerous both in so far as price, quality, and service is concerned, they will undoubtedly buy much of their Christmas goods early.

"It is a positive delight to meet a man you feel you can trust," remarked the individual with the high forehead.

"Oh, I don't know, I prefer a man who pays cash," replied the man who kept the grocery store.

Display Goods the Hunter Will Require

Deer Season Opens November 1 and Followers of the Big Game Will Want Heavy Larders—All Kinds of Canned Goods Should be Shown—Meat Extracts, Soups, Tobacco, Cigars and Matches are Other Necessary Lines — Displays Ought to be Made Now.

When you emerge into the open these fine fall mornings just as the strengthening sun is banishing the chill from the morning atmosphere, and take a deep breath of the crisp fresh air, where is it your fancies ramble as you betake yourself to your place of business?

If a canvas were made, it would probably be found that the thoughts of most of us point in the same direction. How we wish we were out on our favorite hunting grounds, invigorated by the intoxicating fresh air that is found among the hills and rocks, standing at the rnnway while an alert ear follows the baying of the hounds in the distance and awaits the appearance of the approaching game.

Known as the Buck Fever.

The very thoughts send a thrill of delight through many a person. With some it is the first sign of an approaching fever that cannot be checked and which must be appeased. The wilds are calling and the call must be answered. They know it is so, and so they begin to carefully form their plans to betake themselves to the woods at no distant date.

Such is not the case with every person. It would not be well; but the individual who is a follower of the hunting game and who feels the call of the wilds at this season of he year, can hardly withstand it. He must respond He is all on edge until he once more finds himself in his favorite haunt. Different kinds of game attract him.

Deer Season Opens Nov. 1.

Already this fall, there have been many excursions in quest of some of the smaller members of the animal and bird knigdom, but Nov. 1, marks the opening of the season for deer and moose—the monarchs of the forest—and then the big portion of the fall hunting season can really be said to be here.

"And what has all this to do with the grocer and the grocery business?" the reader may ask of himself. "The grocer is a busy man, his business requires his close attention and he has little time to give to following the monarchs of the forest, no matter how invigorating the exercise may be."

Where the Grocer Comes In.

Yes, it is probable that a good many grocers will not be able to betake themselves to the hunting grounds, but there is nothing to prevent them from thinking of the hunting season; and if they think deeply enough, it will by no means prove a waste of time. On the contrary it will be greatly to the advantage of their business. That invigorating air will develop an appetite of appreciable proportions, which must be appeased during the recess periods when the hunter is not on the trail.

To get down to brass tacks without further preliminaries, the hunter will need an extensive list of food articles along with him and this is the way in which the hunting season is going to prove most beneficial to the grocery trade in general. The hunting ground is generally far removed from any place where food supplies may be secured and accordingly, the huntsman will require a good supply. He will purchase these at the store where he believes his wants can best be cared for, and it is the grocer who shows him the goods most temptingly who is going to get the business.

What the Window Will Do.

One of the best methods which the grocer has at hand of catching the eye, and securing the business of the intending huntsman is by good window displays. Here, the attention of both customers and non-customers may be attracted. One of the most important features to such a display is an appropriate setting that will connect up the goods shown with the purpose with which they are shown. The more realistic this setting is made, the more business it is likely to pull for the grocer.

Suggestive Background Needed.

While a realistic setting is desirable, if the trimmer feels that he has not the time to put in an elaborate one, a simple construction will serve the purpose. Even such a simple arrangement as a few guns in the window, or a deer's head or a picture of a hunting scene will be suggestive. If more time can be expended on the work, a hunter waiting at a runway, gun in hand, might be represented. For the grocery store, a good setting is that of the hunter's camp with a camp fire and a table set ready for a meal.

Goods That Can Be Shown.

The window should show all those goods which the hunter usually takes along with him and some others. The display should assist him materially in selecting his hamper of goods. Canned goods will of course be an important feature. Hot beverages that may be speedily prepared is another item that should not be forgotten. In addition to the staple lines of canned goods such as tomatoes, peas and corn, there are pork and beans, corned, roast, boiled and ready lunch beef, jellied veal, potted tongue and veal. Along the fish line, the grocer has to offer salmon, sardines, herring, smelts, anchovies and lobsters. Cooked ham, cheese and condensed soups are some other lines. Preserved fruits is another item. As stated before the beverage line is an important one. Here there is tea, coffee, cocoa, condensed coffee, meat extracts and a line which should not be forgotten is condensed milk because the fresh article is seldom obtainable near the camp. The list of goods which the hunter might want is extensive and general stores could include such lines as pots and pans, blankets, guns, ammunition, gloves,, boots, etc.

Don't Overlok the Staples.

In fitting out the hunter such incidentals as salt, pepper and sugar should not be left out. Last but by no means least come matches and tobacco. In fact, it would be well to feature the latter line as hunting without plenty of tobacco is almost as bad as lacking in ammunition.

In regard to the arrangement of the window, outside the setting, little can be said. Here, the trimmer can follow his own ideas. In keeping with the "rough and ready" idea of camping, a good idea might be to place a rough finished box or case in the window and arrange the goods on and around this box. It would be well to use show cards to increase the selling power of the window and one feature outlined on these show cards might be the carefulness with which goods are packed so as to carry safely in transit, not matter how rough the road may be.

The Time is Now.

The present is an excellent time for the arrangement of a hunting window. Deer hunters will shortly be betaking themselves to the woods, and windows should be arranged now in order to interest them. There is always much to be gained by timeliness.

Some advertising just at this season in the local paper can be used to good effect. When combined with window display as well as personal salesmanship, the business secured by the three united should be appreciable.

"So you don't want no huckleberries?"

"No; I have changed my mind. I see your cat is asleep in these huckleberries."

"That's all right, mum. I don't mind waking the cat up."

THE ACCEPTANCE OF DRAFTS.

There are yet a great many retail dealers who look upon the draft system of collecting accounts with displeasure.

Why this should be, is difficult to ascertain. No doubt the average reason would be that it is considered a reflection on the credit of the dealer. But there are no grounds whatever to substantiate this. The other day The Grocer asked an accountant closely in touch with methods of banks and financial agencies if the acceptance of a draft had any tendency to lower the credit standing of the merchant in the eyes of these institutions.

"Emphatically no," he replied, "no bank or financial agency would think of such a thing as long as the dealer had money in the bank to meet the account."

In fact he claimed it would tend to strengthen the credit of such a merchant, because if he paid by cheque he might occasionally delay payment and thus possibly lower his credit standing in the eyes of the bank and the financial agencies.

Payment by draft helps particularly the dealer who has not much time to spare in looking after a number of books. When the draft comes in all he has to do, if he already does not know the amount of invoice, is to look it up and accept. There is no doubt many wholesale firms are given considerable unnecessary trouble through this unwarranted prejudice against the draft. It is an easy, sound, business method of disposing of accounts and does not at all reflect on anybody's credit so long as it is accepted.

SHOULDERING RESPONSIBILITIES.

One of Elbert Hubbard's epigrams is, "Responsibilities gravitate to the person who can shoulder them," and The Fra has again as usual expressed himself very lucidly.

Everybody knows too that the man who shoulders the responsibilities is the individual who is most in demand. He is the one who can command a salary instead of a wage, and it is up to the clerk himself whether he advances to the salary stage or remains where he is.

Many of our best traveling salesmen on the road today were at one time clerks in the retail stores. They proved their value by their capacity to shoulder responsibilities and have thenceforth been in demand. Others have developed into some of the most successful merchants of the day.

It is, too, the duty of every employer to see that his salesmen and other employees are given responsibilities to attend to. If he finds their capacity lacking after a reasonable trial, they are a detriment to the store and should be weeded out.

PROPER DEGREE OF FRIENDLINESS.

It is desirable that the merchant and his clerks be friendly with customers. But is there such a thing as overdoing friendliness? One grocer at least believes there is. To explain how, he tells of a commercial traveler who called upon him recently.

"He had evidently got well loaded with information before leaving the local hotel," said this merchant, "for although it was only his second call on me, he walked right up to the desk and said, 'Hello, Bill How are things going with you?' and then went on making enquiries about the several members of the family as if he had known us since childhood. I recognized his aim, but thought that he was overdoing it a little."

In the same way there is probably a possibility of the retailer appearing too friendly with customers whom he has only known a short time and thus defeating his own purpose. The degree of familiarity adopted towards a customer by a retailer should be based on the length of acquaintance and also the kind of customer being dealt with. With some one can be much freer than others. This can only be gauged by a study of the customer.

Friendliness, however, should be more of the genuine character and not that assumed for the time as is frequently the case in order to please the customer and put him in a better purchasing mood.

MEETING BUSINESS.

There can be no contradiction of the statement that business always comes quickest to the man who goe farthest to meet it.

The retail dealer who sits behind the counter in an uninviting store and worries over slackness of trade is responsible for the wrath of stagnant business falling on his shoulders. He must get out and hustle. This does not mean literally outside the store, but he must use every means at his command to attract the trade that is going elsewhere or not being done at all for lack of aggressiveness on his part.

Now that the biggest season of trade of all the year with most stores is looming above the horizon, every dealer has opportunities to "meet" the coming business if he will. An aggressive campaign must be early got under way. Plans for regular window displays should be made at once and advertisements drafted for the newspaper in order that strong announcements can be made at the psychological moment. As soon as new dried fruits are received, efforts should be made to get them into the hands of regular customers.

By going out to meet business in this way, the dealer is bound to sell more goods than by the procrastination method. Delay means loss to the grocer. He must, therefore, eliminate delay.

CLERKS AND NEW SYSTEMS.

System is a splendid thing, but it must always be remembered that the man who formulates the system is not the one upon whom its success depends. It is the man behind the counter who is largely responsible for the success or failure of the plan. It is therefore very necessary to secure the co-operation of the man behind the counter.

Perhaps dealers hardly give sufficient time to advising their clerks of the new systems they are introducing. Such explanations are absolutely necessary to the success of these schemes. How is the clerk to enter into the spirit of the project if it is not properly presented to him?

In different stores the appeal to the clerks may be made in different ways. One large establishment has a recreation club, and at meetings of this, brief announcements of new systems are made, the saving or the better service these are expected to give, being thoroughly explained, and the clerk's co-operation asked.

In another establishment, of smaller size, the proprietor explains his new projects to each clerk. He never fails to get whole-hearted co-operation.

Clerks are generally willing to do their best for the man who employs them, but it is human nature that they will be more thoughtful of their employer's interests if these interests are laid before them in a tactful way. Orders are all very well, but more genuine co-operation is secured by asking, and consulting, than by giving orders. The merchant who succeeds best is the one who can inspire his employees with the feeling that they are working with him but not for him.

BE ENTHUSIASTIC.

"Be a good listener, be honest, study your business, keep healthy, and, of greatest importance, be enthusiastic," were the principal points emphasized by a speaker at a salesman's convention recently.

A great many manufacturing concerns to-day are conducting salesmen schools for the education of men in their particular line. The sole object is that by a thorough and complete education of both new as well as old men, they expect that they shall gain such knowledge and such facts relative to the particular article, to make them enthusiastic.

Why should not the retail dealer aim to create a greater enthusiasm among his sales force, just as do these manufacturing firms? By brief conferences at periods when business is not rushing, hints as to advisability of practising the above points could be judiciously thrown out.

Enthusiasm is based on belief in the goods being sold, and belief in the store itself, and every salesman in the store should study enthusiasm, remembering that an enthusiastic man always gains confidence.

CUT DOWN IDEAS.

All will remember those trousers, which, in the old days served first father, then big brother, then you. They were not discarded because they were too large for you. They were cut down. Strange as it may seem there is a lesson in these old trousers.

A number of dealers to-day are lamenting the fact that their business is small, that they have not a large number of men working for them. They read of a fine business method. "Yes," they say, "that would avoid losses and would help in ordering, but the system is for a man with a big business. I can not use it." Let such men think of those long serving trousers. Let them cut down the methods which come to their attention to meet their own needs. It is doubtful if one man in a hundred gets an idea which is exactly suited to his business. But the idea shows him what his business lacks. He can apply another man's system to his own particular use.

Why, the man doing business on a fairly small scale has a better chance to operate money saving systems than has the manager of a large concern. He can give a closer personal supervision to the operation of the system. Let not the small dealer call a halt, therefore. Let him cut down the ideas of others to suit himself, but let him use them.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Don't be afraid to do more than you are paid to do, and don't shirk responsibility.

The more responsibility placed on the store employees, the more time the proprietor has to develop sales.

If the uncertainties of the grocery business were eliminated, failures would soon be reduced to a minimum.

Unless the exact cost of placing a line of goods in the store is known, how can the dealer intelligently fix the selling price?

Better lose a sale than to make the positive statement that goods will be delivered at a certain time when there is no certainty that they will be.

If you can't go hunting yourself, the next best thing is to get some money from the man who does before he goes. He may never come back.

If any department in the store is not paying interest on investment, spruce up the department instead of eliminating it. Others are making money from it and why not you?

A carpenter without tools to work with will waste an enormous amount of energy in a day. Same applies to the merchant or clerk without present day fixtures and equipment.

System in Management---Store Equipment

Delegate Responsibility on All Employes and Reward Their Accomplishments—By This Means They Develop Their Degree of Usefulness to the Business—Value of the Best Tools and Appliances.

*By Henry Johnson, Jr.

I have the following good letter:

Oct. 4, 1912.

Henry John, Jr.—

Dear Sir,—Your letter on store management, re employing a manager, has been the most interesting of any.

I will suggest to the Dashville grocer in Western Canada, that he make every clerk in his employ a manager over a certain amount of floor space, and teach him to buy the stock and arrange it to sell. Have each one give an itemized account of every article damaged and to what extent. The more responsibility a clerk has the better man he will be. The general manager should know every man personally and direct him personally. By this system you avoid discord —each man is independent of any other. He need take no order from any save his manager.

In this manner all losses would be accounted for and the cause known.

Each and every clerk should be made to feel and to know that he is part of the force that drives a large business to success. And as each of these managers of departments increases the earnings, increase his pay and watch him hustle.

Respectfully,
Chas. E. Sandford.

That is a straight, practical suggestion. It carries some of my own plans, ideas and practices an important step forward over anything I have yet evolved in my own business. I shall work it out in my own store at once.

Responsibility Develops Men.

I will say, however, that I have known for so many years that I have forgotten when I did not know it, that responsibility is the great developer. This has become so obvious to me that I always marvel when I hear a man say that he cannot get good help or he cannot get anybody to shoulder any of his responsibility. The delegation of responsibility should begin when the boy comes into the store and should continue without interruption so long as he stays in the store. To get results, the boy must be set to doing something and only the most general directions must be given to him. Left to his own devices, he will think or he will stop still and wait for further orders. When he waits in this way, I tell him to go ahead and use his own brain. "The Lord gave you a brain to use. If you do not use it, you might as well have a turnip on your shoulders. Go ahead. Make a few mistakes. I'll tell you very quickly if you do not do right. Then you will get it right; then also you will not forget it all so quickly as if I did all your thinking for you."

Not Enough Management.

There is generally too little management—which means too little logical thinking on the part of the boss and consequent disappointment with results which, after all, are of our own making. When I hear a man say that he cannot get organization or system into his business, I think it is his own fault. I further think that there are not less than 180,000 other grocery stores on the continent all of which are running and many of which are making money—yet this complainant is running one only and acknowledging that he fails at the job.

In most businesses the employer does too much work and too little planning, thinking, organizing. I do less work in proportion to the size of my business than, I think, most men do. Yet I daily feel that I do too much as it is. I love to handle groceries. It is a positive pleasure to me to pile goods on the shelves, arrange them neatly and logically and generally make them attractive; but I have to check myself in this, for that is work not only which clerks should do, but which it is their right to do in the interest of their own education. It is my business to lay out their work. I fail whenever I do what they should be not made to do but allowed to do.

Fixture Matter Important.

One of the ways in which we do not do justice to our business is in the matter of tools and equipment generally. For many years I have worked on the theory that the best appliances and plenty of them is the best investment I can make. I know that this may run to extremes. Then we have the fixture fever and lose out on that tack; but most of us can go a long way, a very long way indeed, on this tack and not get into the wind.

Twelve years ago I fitted out my store with the finest kind of oak shelves and counters. There must be no misunderstanding about this. I put in nothing whatever that was merely ornamental; but everything of the best materials and every item thoroughly practical. To-day I am removing that equipment to a new store and, barring some refinishing, there is nothing to be done to it. This is because it was good to start with. Yet in the twelve years my depreciation charge has wiped it all out; so you can see that it was a good investment.

Has Installed Computing Scale.

Twenty-five years ago, in the days of the elder Johnson, we bought some agate bearing scales and later, in my own time, say fifteen years ago, I bought some more of a later design. These are as good, as sensitive, as efficient to-day as the day they were unpacked; but they have been set aside now for the most accurate line of computing scales I have been able to find. These last I am satisfied, will last me about as long as I shall need to use scales—and I feel that the investment will prove to be a good one. I have seen numbers of men fool themselves thus in two ways: (1) Through not having the scales which were accurate enough for their requirements and (2) through not having enough scales. If a clerk has to walk twenty feet to weigh an article, that time and energy is a constant expense to the business. Such waste motion will very rapidly cost more than the price of many sets of the finest scales made.

Uses the Auto Delivery.

I never tried to "save money" on a cheap wagon that I did not regret the step. Only a few wagons of ours have been of the bargain counter type. Mostly they have been specially made for us and have cost accordingly; but they have lasted long, have given good service, have "earned their keep" every day of the year. Now I have taken on auto-delivery, as may be seen any day about my store and in our town; and I have no regrets. I do not think I have got it all yet. I am sure that I shall do better with deliveries and the cost thereof in six months than I am doing now. But I know that we are doing much better than we used to do and I expect to keep right on doing better.

Elevator With Ton Capacity.

It is poor economy to buy a hand elevator. Those things are man-killers and cost extravagantly in time and energy. My elevator will carry a ton to the third floor in less than one minute, taking up a platform truck with 38 or 40 sacks of flour and taking the man along with the load. Thus, one man can handle that flour and do it easily and quickly. Think of the economy of time and labor.

*The writer of this article is one of the most successful dealers on the continent. He has spent almost 30 years in the retail grocery business and is well equipped to answer questions and smooth out difficulties with which others may have met. If a special request is made names of inquirers will be omitted when their letters are printed for discussion.

Beware of Waste Motion.

Every bit of waste motion and energy frittered away in useless hard labor that you can cut out of your business is good management and true economy. First cost may seem heavy, but if you spread it over a term of years, it becomes negligible—and the results are great. Good paper conveniently placed; plenty of the strongest bags properly scattered where they can be reached with few motions; rapid accounting systems—all these things are true economizers. Then let you and me devote ourselves to the really high grade work of planning and making sales, and the business can and will grow beyond anything possible under any scheme of "saving" the needful investment in good tools.

Buying Methods Discussed by Grocers

Some Advocate Hand to Mouth Policy as Best—Breaking Back to Buy Ahead Condemned—Business Tax Up for Discussion—Views on Canned Goods Situation—Association Endorse David Bell as Aldermanic Candidate.

Toronto, Oct. 24—(Special). — The methods which the grocer should follow in the purchasing of his goods was one of the interesting subjects that came up for discussion at the monthly meeting of the Toronto Retail Grocers on Monday night. The opinion was expressed by many of those present that in most cases, on the whole, a hand-to-mouth policy would be the most profitable for the dealer. As one dealer put it, "the policy of the retailer breaking his back trying to finance the purchase of goods which he has bought ahead is a foolish one." But that buying ahead is sometimes profitable is shown by the remark of one dealer, "I have made a good deal of money by buying ahead at the right time. In this way I have made as much as 30 to 40 per cent. on sugar."

"Some years, as for instance last year, we made money by buying our canned goods ahead. This year, however, we will make practically nothing by this policy," remarked one dealer.

"There are many retailers breaking their back trying to finance the purchase of goods which they should never have attempted," was the comment of Neil Carmichael.

Money and Storage Space Used Up.

"Taking one year with another," advised J. S. Bond, "I believe it would pay not to buy ahead. We use up our storage space which is worth something and we have our money tied up and while sometimes we make a little, other times we do not."

"I know grocers," broke in another, "who had the money to buy ahead, but who bought a few cases or boxes at a time and they are the fellows who made the money. Some fellows will buy a car of sugar and nearly have to break their backs paying for it, in some cases having to sell it off cheap to customers in order to get the money to pay for it. A fellow who has to do that is not following the right buying methods."

Business Tax Discussed.

The business tax came up for discussion, being introduced by Frank Johnston. Wm. C. Miller explained that a large number of Yonge street dealers had protested against the high business tax but found that was not in the hands of the city but governed by provincial laws. He understood that the city council would apply to the Ontario Legislature for a change in the system of assessment.

"It affects the downtown district mostly, and not so much the small dealer," remarked one member. "I really think it is not detrimental to majority of small retailers. It catches the fellow who should pay a high business assessment."

"If your property has advanced you can afford to pay the extra business tax," said J. S. Bond.

"But it affects the fellow who has a rented store," argued D. Bell. "I consider it a rank injustice to have the business tax figured on the value of the property instead of amount of business done."

Grocer Endorsed for Alderman.

The Toronto Retail Grocers are going to take more interest in municipal affairs. Wm. C. Miller in a fiery speech, maintained that the retail grocers should be represented in the city council. "Nearly every other department of trade has or has had a representative in the council but this the grocers have never had, at least not in recent years. I understand that members will come forth at the coming election with the purpose of having annulled some of the legislation which the grocers have had enacted during the past year and it is only proper that the grocers should have some one there to guard their interests. It requires a man engaged in the grocery business to understand our needs."

Other members including J. G. Bond, D. McLean, Frank Johnston and Neil Carmichael also maintained that the grocers of Toronto should be represented in the city council and the association unanimously went on record as endorsing David Bell, 702 Yonge street, as a candidate for alderman in Ward 3 in the coming election. Mr. Bell has been in the grocery business in Toronto for 17 years.

Cold Storage on Carpet.

"If prices keep going up at the rate they are now, the consumer will soon not be able to pay the prices we find necessary to exact."

"I wonder if cold storage has anything to do with high prices. I think the government should see that every cold storage is cleared out at least once a year."

"The U.S. law makes it necessary to clear out cold storages every six months."

"I don't think cost of living would be cheaper if we had no cold storage. I believe it is a god send. If there is an overplus of butter in June, it can be put in cold storage and kept there till winter when butter is scarce. I believe on the whole, it decreases the cost of living."

Views on Canned Goods.

"What do you think of the price of canned tomatoes?"

"I don't see why they should be so high. Raw tomatoes are not much dearer than when tomatoes sold at 75c a dozen.

"Look at the larger demand, however. There is a lot of new country to supply."

"I hear one factory made contracts at $1.10 per dozen, and peas at $1.02½."

"Another factory booked tomatoes at $1.25."

"I see one grocer is selling new tomatoes at 2 for 25c."

"I won't sell any at that price. I am getting 18c for an extra fancy brand."

MARKET NOTES FROM HERE AND THERE.

Chili during 1911 exported 8,518,200 pounds of walnuts.

The Grenoble walnut crop in France is showing a prospective outturn of 60 per cent. of the yield of 1911.

The 1912 crop of potatoes in the U.S. is estimated at 396,000,000 bushels compared with 292,737,000 last year.

California planters are elated over the success of the almond crop, the yield having proved the best in the history of the State.

Estimates of the number of barrels of grapes that will be shipped from Almeria this year are now generally placed at 1,700,000.

Selling Goods at Loss is Poor Business

An Instance Where Pork and Beans Costing 60 Cents per Dozen Are Sold at Five Cents Each Tin—Means Direct Loss Without Taking Cost of Doing Business Into Consideration—Value of a Cost Book.

Selling goods at little or no profit is still the big trouble with a great many retail stores. Some dealers seem to have the idea that because they sell an article at a cent above invoice cost they are making 12 cents on a dozen. A great many others cling to the three-for-a-quarter and six-for-a-quarter selling method regardless of any advance that may have taken place recently.

Selling Pork and Beans at a Loss.

Just the other day a dealer pointed to the trouble he was having with customers who claimed they could buy a small tin of pork and beans for 5 cents in some stores. This grocer was asking 6 cents.

"I do not understand," he declared, "how they can exist on such methods. Why, those beans cost us 60 cents a dozen and we would absolutely lose money on selling them at that price taking into consideration only invoice cost plus freight."

As a matter of fact a dozen of these tins at 5 cents would bring the grocer just 60 cents which the invoice shows he paid for them. He is out freight, if any is charged, and his cost in turning them over which in the average store amounts to from 12 to 15 per cent.

If these one-pound tins were sold at 6 cents, the margin above invoice cost would amount to 12 cents on a dozen. Twelve cents on a turnover of 72 means a total margin of 16 2-3 per cent., which in a great many cases would a little more than cover cost of doing business. If sold at 7 cents the margin would be two on seven or about 28½ per cent. on turnover, which might be considered somewhat steep except by a store giving a very high grade service.

What Cost Book Would Do.

But the point is why should any dealer sell this line of pork and beans for 5 cents? It must be because he had not recently looked up his cost. And here is just where a Cost Book, as shown in an article in the Fall Campaign number, would come in handy. A. G. Bain & Co., of Hamilton, Ont., who operate the Cost Book in question, know exactly where to look to find the cost of any article. Pork and beans is tabulated on a certain page and every time a salesman wants to sell them pork and beans, the buyer looks up this Cost Book. If he should happen to forget what they cost him before, the information comes to his attention. With such a book there is little chance for a dealer to unknowingly sell any article at a loss.

No Money On This Salmon.

The dealer above who has had trouble with pork and bean prices is also frequently told that competitors are selling salmon at 15 cents which costs them a fraction over 14 cents a tin.

This system of retailing is what is keeping the grocery trade down. The dealer who sells one article at cost will no doubt do the same with others. He therefore will naturally get a lot of business from competitors on these lines; but if he loses money on them, of what use are the sales? If he loses much money it is only a matter of time till he goes out of business.

Lowering Standard of the Trade.

While such a dealer is getting trade and losing money, competitors have to suffer through no fault of their own. This all checks the uplifting of the standard of the grocery trade.

In the matter of emphasizing the necessity of getting a fair profit on every grocery article, the retail associations are doing great service. Meetings at which this phase of retailing is talked over means time well spent.

Great Care Necessary in Extending Credit

In Address Before Canadian Credit Men's Association Stress Is Laid on Honesty, Capital and Ability—The Greatest of All Is Honesty—National Association Is Proposed.

Toronto, Oct. 24 (Special).—"Honesty, capital and ability are the three important and essential elements to be taken into consideration in extending credit." So said H. B. Buell, of Syracuse, N.Y., at the first fall meeting of the Ontario division of the Canadian Credit Men's Association at McConkey's on Thursday night last in his address on "Credit and Credit Granting." While his remarks were addressed to wholesalers and manufacturers they should also contain much of interest to the re tail dealer.

Credit was defined as the capitalization of reputation. Honesty, capital and ability are the three elements to be taken into consideration in extending it. Unless a man is honest, credit is unsafe regardless of the other two. Too many men to-day are trying to struggle along with too small a capital. With present strenuous competition, unless a man has sufficient capital to take advantage of all opportunities, such as taking all discounts, he has a hard row to hoe. And last but by no means least, unless a man has the ability for proper use of his capital, although he is honest, may prove an unsafe man to whom to extend credit.

Must Be Authentic Information.

Credit should be granted, he said, on specific information and not on intuition or surface conditions. A full and complete statement of financial condition, showing both live and dormant assets, should be required. Fire insurance is important and it should be seen that customers are adequately protected in this regard. Inquiry should be made into the personal habits and integrity of the person to whom credit is extended.

Sparks from the Credit Speech.

"Credit once impaired is hard to regain."

"Incompetence is largely the cause of failures."

"The man who fails will generally find the trouble in himself."

"With two men of equal capital, one may succeed while the other will not."

"Insist that your debtor be sufficiently protected against loss by fire or refuse the credit."

"The man of good habits will make a more desirable customer than he that is not so."

"Be decent to the underdog. He may be on top to-morrow. Help him get there."

National Association.

There was a large attendance at the meeting. It was announced that a branch of the association had been opened at Vancouver, B.C., thus completing a chain from the Atlantic to the Pacific. "The next step," said A. G. Malcolm, the chairman, "will be the formation of a national association."

There are 750,000 acres planted with cocoanuts in Ceylon. Forty full grown Ceylon cocoanuts will produce one gallon of oil. It requires 170 to 200 nuts to make 112 pounds of dessicated cocoanut. One hundred and twelve pounds of copra will produce four or five gallons of oil.

Sugar Declines During the Past Year

How and Why Market Dropped From High Level Last Fall to $1.10 Per Cwt. Less—Figures Show a Gradual Fall—What are Prospects for the Future?—Part Played by the Weather.

A fact in regard to sugar that many grocers at the present time fail to fully realize is that it is at a comparatively low price, especially when compared with the range of recent years or with usual prices at this time of year. It is true that last year this staple of the grocery store soared to a dizzy height but it is also true that gradually but certainly it has been worming its way down to a reasonable level. The price of sugar on the Toronto market to-day is $4.85. Look at these figures ruling on Oct. 25 for the previous three years:—

Last Year's Price High.

This means that sugar is lower at the present time than it has been at this season for a number of years back. A comparison shows that one year ago, prices were exactly $1.10 per cwt. higher than they are to-day. The grocer well knows the story of last year's nightmare experience in the sugar market when exceedingly dry hot weather put a crimp in the growth of the European beet crop and made history by sending prices scurrying to the highest point that had been attained in 22 years.

One year ago this record price, namely $5.95 on the Toronto market was ruling. Then the approach of an appreciable cane crop in Cuba cast a shadow that caused prices to break in December. In fact this was the first downward movement sugar had shown since the previous February. Further concessions followed until the end of January, by which time values had been forced down to $5.45. Then conditions in Cuba took an unfavorable turn, sending refiners scurrying to cover and strengthening refined sugar by 20 points.

Declines Were Inevitable.

But not for long. The yield in Cuba began to show up more certain, estimates had to be extended and gradually step by step, the market had to bow to the inevitable and descend from the high perch it had held. Europe which the year before had played the lion, this year played the lamb. It had nothing sensational to offer; on the contrary, bearish news was prominent so that right through the preserving season a tone of weakness prevailed. This is a very unusual order of things for in past years when demand has been at its best there has ben a tendency to strength. This year declines took place right in the middle of the preserving season. Here are the year's changes:—

Sept. 1, 1911	$5.55
Sept. 8, 1911	5.75
Sept. 14, 1911	5.95
Dec. 7	5.85
Dec. 21	5.75
Jan. 5, 1912	5.65
Jan. 12, 1912	5.55
Jan. 26, 1912	5.45
Feb. 9, 1912	5.55
Feb. 12, 1912	5.65
Mar. 29, 1912	5.55
Apr. 5, 1912	5.45
May 31, 1912	5.35
June 21, 1912	5.25
June 28, 1912	5.15
Aug. 16, 1912	5.05
Oct. 9, 1912	4.95
Oct. 17, 1912	4.85

An Eye on the Future.

But this is all past and gone, and is now merely a matter of history. While the unusual changes which have marked the past year and a half are interesting, another factor of interest is what the future probably holds in store for this particular article. This is something which the grocer would really like to know.

Well, there have been two downward changes of 10 points during the present month but the end is acknowledged to be not yet. While there are always differences of opinion, and while sugar always holds a marked degree of uncertainty, it is held that sugar may probably see another couple of declines or at least the present raw market seems to warrant that. However, by the time they have arrived, the raw outlook may have changed enough to mean still further reductions.

Points to Low Market.

The truth of the matter is, prospects at present looming up are causing the opinion to gain ground that we are going to see low sugar before the end of the Cuban campaign which begins in January. This year's European beet crop is large, in fact it might be described as very large and with the present prospects of being followed up by a large Cuban cane crop, is creating the impression that low prices are ahead.

For instance one authority says that Cuban cane reports continue highly favorable and the crop will likely exceed the highest yet produced, if all the cane in the fields can be turned into sugar by favorable conditions of labor and weather. However, there is nothing of certainty in regard to this. In fact there is much uncertainty. The Cuban crop does not begin its outturn until January, and is, therefore, still in its swaddling clothes, so that it would be nothing but a guess, to predict the course of prices up to February next,, although the present conditions are favorable for reasonable values.

Two Posers.

"How low will sugar go before February next?" one sugar man was queried this week.

"When is the world coming to an end?" was his very pointed reply.

"It is difficult to tell how far the pendulum will swing back," he continued. "I think the tendency is to expect too much of a decline in the immediate future. I would say that the present level of the raw market will probably warrant a couple of declines..

"As to further ahead, it is difficult to predict. Sugar is always sugar. During the last period of high prices in sugar, the high point of 5.75 on the Montreal market was reached in Feb. 1905. Then began a series of continued declines until the low point of $4 was reached in March, 1906."

That was a total decline of $1.75 from the high point. Sugar this time has so far reacted $1.10 per cwt.

OPENING ANNOUNCEMENT.

King Bros., of Wingham, Ont., in announcing the opening of their new store in the local paper say, "We are now settled in our new premises and extend to all a cordial welcome to visit us whether to buy or not. We now have one of the finest and brightest stores outside the cities and it belongs to our customers for trading purposes and we want every transaction to be pleasant and profitable to them." Some of the mottoes used by this firm in their advertising are "Good Goods," "prices right,," "we want your trade."

Customer—"Do you keep coffee in the bean?"

New Clerk—"Upstairs, Madam; this is the ground floor."

The Pulse of the Grocery Markets

Refined Sugar Declines During Week—Now 1.10 Per Cwt. Lower Than Year Ago—Many New Lines of Dried Fruits Arriving—Figs and Dates Coming to Hand—Nuts in Demand for Thanksgiving.

QUEBEC MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Sugar.—Down 10c., now $4.75.

Evaporated Fruits.—Some changes.

Rice.—Steady.

Montreal, Oct. 24.—The week has seen another general decline in sugar, due of course to the fine crops of beets and cane.

In dried fruits there have been a number of price changes, and it is certain that more will be recorded next week, for new shipments of several lines will be then received.

Rice is weak. The belief is that the market may go still lower, and no heavy buying is being done.

SUGAR.—Raw sugar has been reduced in price, and refined has followed by another 10 cents since last report. The decline is of course due to the splendid crops in Europe and in Cuba. The tendency is still downward.

DRIED FRUITS. — Quotations on prunes, given below, are really nominal. As a matter of fact there are hardly any prunes to be had—only a few sizes are available here. Europe is said to be buying heavily.

New dates are expected early in November. These, of course, will be quoted at considerably higher prices than those given below. At present dates are rather scarce. Hallowee loose, indeed, are not available.

New raisins are expected this week. This also will mean a change in prices. Indeed, prices generally are stiffer than for some little time. Part of this feeling is credited to the Balkan trouble.

NUTS.—The coming of the Thanksgiving season has seen the usual increase in demand for nuts. The larger orders, however, have not brought any advance in prices, though such an advance is considered as quite possible. Spanish shelled are especially scarce. Chestnuts, on the other hand, are somewhat more plentiful.

RICE.—Word comes that an advance in rough rice is booked for next month; that the planters' association still holds high ideas; yet there is no future buying noted. On the other hand the impression seems to prevail that lower rice may be looked for. Present prices, even at the decline of last week, are high. Crops are promising. Leaving manipulation out of the question, therefore, a revision downward is deemed possible, at least in some quarters.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS:—

Sugar.—Now down to $4.85.

Dried Fruits.—Many new lines arriving.

Celery Seed.—Down to 40c.

Toronto, Oct. 24.—A fair volume of business in general lines is reported by jobbers this week, and October is expected to measure up well with last and previous years. Trade in fancy lines has been stimulated to some extent by the approach of Thanksgiving and Hallowe'en. Nuts are mentioned as one line that has been benefited but not so much as if the new season's goods had been in. They will begin to arrive shortly.

Many new lines of dried fruits are coming to hand, figs having been added at the first of the week and dates expected at any time. The arrival of new lines gives the retailer a chance to feature them and secure some additional business.

Sugar has declined 10c. per cwt. since our last report as anticipated. Crop conditions continue bright.

There is some shipping beyond the lakes being done, but wholesalers are in many cases awaiting arrival of new goods.

SUGAR.—The decline predicted in sugar in our last issue came into effect before the week was out, a reduction of 10 cents being registered, bringing local prices down to $4.85 as compared with $5.95 one year ago.

With the big yield in Europe which is estimated at about 2,400,000 tons more than last year, followed by the big cane crop which has been figured out on paper as representing Cuba's coming yield, the attitude of the sugar world is to look for lower prices.

As to the immediate future, while quotations are low, a scarcity of nearby sugar is somewhat of a steadying factor.

Sugar consumption is again back to normal. The past three or four months have seen a particularly good demand.

DRIED FRUITS.—Several lines of new dried and evaporated fruits are now on the market while others are close at hand. There will be found several changes in quotations this week, the new figures being on new crop goods. Prices now quoted are all on new goods with the exception of prunes, the first shipment of which will arrive in Toronto about the first of November, and bag and tapnet figs which are not yet in.

New fancy figs are in this week and are selling at about same price as first shipment last year, ranging from 10 to 14 cents, according to size of the fruit. One firm for instance quotes 4 crown at 12½c. and 6 crown at 15c. The first new dates should be in this week. Wholesalers are hoping that they will get in, in time for the Thanksgiving trade. They will be taken up well as old stock is cleaned up and the new fruit is said to be of excellent quality. We quote prices for the new fruit.

Valencia raisins have been in for some time while California stock is not far to leeward. New apricots and peaches are now in and prices show a big reduction from the prohibitive figures of last year and as a result they should be dealt in quite freely.

New currants are at hand and more are on the way from Montreal. Prices are much the same as last year. New peels are, however, high. Evaporated apples are quoted at 7½ to 8 cents.

Seeded raisins continue easy on the Coast and as a result some lower prices are being quoted here on new season's goods. Prunes are by no means firm in California.

COFFEE.—As last week, there is no particular change to the local coffee situation, a steady feeling prevailing. As to the general situation, the current Santos crop unless receipts materially improve in the next thirty days, will not total 8,000,000 bags and the estimate of a 11,000,000-bag yield of Santos and Rio combined is given up as too large.

There is already 45 per cent. of the crop at the coffee ports and as compared with that of last year is over one million bags less and with the same ratio continued there would not be a total of even 10,000,000 bags.

SPICES.—There is a fair volume of trade being done in general lines of spices. Even the sorting orders of the pickling business are pretty well to an end. Interest will soon begin to develop in requirements for the Christmas baking. This is always of a good deal of importance. There will also be shipping of winter requirements beyond the lakes this month, so as to get the lower water rates.

Cloves still hold a steady position and are worth watching. The statistical position of this line is a strong one, and general opinion seems to favor higher prices this winter. Peppers show no change. Celery seed is quoted around 40 cents.

NUTS.—The first of the season's new shelled walnuts should be available around the first of the month. New crop Tarragona almonds are due in a week or so. French walnuts are still held at high prices by shippers on primary markets. Indeed ideas on most lines including pecans, filberts and Brazils tend to firmness.

There has been more activity of late in nuts in view of the Thanksgiving and Hallowe'en trade. They should be given more than ordinary attention during next week.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.—There seems some little degree of uncertainty regarding the future of rice. Last week's decline of 15 cents per cwt. in Rangoon was not altogether expected. Better crop prospects was the cause of the reduction. Even now there is no big buying movement. Even at the decline, prices are high, but it must be remembered that reports from the Far East have been far from bright at many times during the year.

CANNED GOODS.

Toronto. —It is probable that the delivery of corn will be more than 75 per cent. as was announced when opening prices were given out. Canners have in most cases been able to add another week's pack to the amount they had then. Corn opened at 97½c for group A, but fancy will sell at $1.07½ for 2's. Corn on cob in 3's is quoted at $1.80 and gallons at $4.80.

There will likely be a full delivery of succotash and squash and probably also of pumpkin, although not definitely announced. With the latter line 15c per dozen below last year's price, it should sell much more freely this year.

The delivery of tomatoes will not be above 60 per cent. General opinion seems to be that there will be little or no speculative value on this line this year on account of high figure at which they opened. However, gossip on the street says that there was some purchasing among jobbers during past week at about opening prices. "They cannot be brought in from the States for less," said one jobber.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Sugar—Weak.

Figs and Raisins—Strong.

Winnipeg, Oct. 23.—Splendid weather has generally prevailed since last review and business has received quite an impetus in consequence. The great grain crop is moving in fine style and Winnipeg receipts average about 1,200 cars per diem or 15,000,000 bushels. Prices are keeping up well and money is circulating freely. A marked improvement in collections is reported.

Price changes are quite numerous in some lines. In dried fruits, raisins are strong and dried figs are likely to go higher, the new crop being quoted at a sharp advance.

There are also some changes in nuts. Sugar is weak and further reductions are reported.

Merchants, wholesale and retail are optimistic of the prospects of fall business.

SUGAR.—The extremely weak situation in the eastern market has brought about further reductions here. Demand is still good but not as keen as during month previously.

No change is at present announced in figs, but the new crop is quoted at a sharp advance and 6¾ is the price to be for choice boxes.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, N.B., Oct. 22.—Business activity has increased with the fall season and orders are being received by the wholesale trade in a most satisfactory manner. The annual rush of freights before the close of navigation upon the river has begun and the storing of winter vegetables for the closed season is on in earnest. The steamers down the St. John river are bringing large cargoes of farm produce for the local market which grocers find in brisk demand, while they in turn are shipping encouraging orders to the river sections, and best of all receipts are of the best. Potatoes are coming in large quantities and are really much lower than was expected in price, being sold from $1.15 to $1.30 per barrel.

Much interest now centres in the Balkan situation with local grocers. It is feared if complications expected are fully realized in that territory, there will be a difference in the cost of flour. At present outlook for prices seems very bright. In fact, it is thought, that if there is any change at all in Manitoba, it will be downward. The bountiful harvest in the Canadian West as well as in the United States has led local grocers to advise their customers that now or during the next few weeks would be a good time to stock in Manitoba patents as prices will be low. The shortage in the crop of Ontario, however, has forced price of winter wheat flour higher and there may be advances in Ontario patents before long.

Sugar market was weakened considerably this week and a decline of 10 cents in all grades was made in quotings. The beet crop in Europe is a source of much satisfaction while Cuban reports are also encouraging. In molasses, outlook is for higher prices and immediate protection is advised because stocks are reported short. Pork and pork products are advanced and market is much firmer in this connection. The same is true of oatmeal which is twenty-five cents higher, and still in good demand.

The country market is being well supplied with poultry and dairy products. Butter is firm but unchanged in price while the same is true of eggs. Chickens are now being sold by the pound instead of per pair, and are bringing 22 cents, while 18 cents is asked for fowls.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, Oct. 22.—The most important change in local grocery market this week is a drop of ten cents in sugar. Extra standard granulated is now quoted at $4.90, which is $1.10 per hundred pounds cheaper than it was twelve months ago.

Wholesale grocery trade is now brisk. Large orders are being filled for coastal points, and the outlook is good for business until the close of navigation at the shore points.

Fresh laid eggs are scarce at 30 cents per dozen. There is also a decided falling of in the receipts of fresh made butter.

Barrelled pork and beef are in demand. Former is quoted at $28 for clear and $26.50 for lean. Beef (American) is $21 to $22. Smoked hams are selling at 19 cents, the highest price for years.

There is a good demand for potatoes, but most of the stock offering is poor. Island stock is quoted here at 55 cents. New Brunswick potatoes are selling at $1.80 per three bushel bag. The fruit business is good. Grapes are a drug on the market at 25 cents per basket. The apple business is now at its height and enormous shipments are being made to the London market. Over 50,000 barrels were sent away from here this week.

LATE MARKET NEWS.

Toronto.—Live hogs have strengthened during the week on account of heavy demand. Prices went as high as $8.45 at country points and $8.75 locally. Eggs are strong. As to butter, Montreal is said to have made some contracts for New Zealand stock for January-February shipment at 30½c delivered.

Grapefruit is easy and prices are expected to weaken. First shipment of new lemons will arrive first of next week. Price will be high, probably around $6.50 but with additional shipments prices will ease. Good Florida oranges will not arrive for about two weeks.

Honey is reported as a little firmer.

TRADE NOTES.

B. Bookhalter, grocer, of Winnipeg, has been succeeded by A. Wiseman.

A mottled snake of venomous aspect startled the packers in the basement of the Rogers Fruit Co.'s warehouse, Winnipeg, recently, as it was revealed in the separation of two large bunches of bananas. The reptile, when first discovered, was partially coiled in the grooves of the fruit, and stirring torpidly. It was given a wide berth at first, but, as its movements continued sluggish, two of the men present procured a large candy jar; and, while one held the vessel, the other pushed the snake in coil after coil, with a stick. It was about eighteen inches long. It was later transferred to a small glass case, and placed on exhibition in the window of the Rome cafe, near Sherbrooke street, where crowds viewed it last evening.

Making a Profit on Every Department

Number of Retailers Discuss Losses on Broken Bottles in Case of Soft Drinks—A Store Criticized Where all Fancy Biscuits Are Sold at One Price Regardless of Cost.

Careful management of each department of the grocery store is necessary in order to secure a profit. Each department should be made to bear its proper share in the maintenance of expenses and the providing of profits. Profits in each part of the business depend to a large extent on the kind of management.

That this is so was demonstrated quite plainly at a recent gathering of grocers. The article under discussion was bottled water. "By the time the broken bottles are allowed for," commented one dealer, "a person doesn't make much out of the business," and he went on to tell of the number of bottles he had broken and how this clipped the profits on this article.

"Why," spoke up another dealer, "I have only broken one bottle since I began to handle it."

Gets Pay for All Bottles.

Thus, it is shown that the kind of management decides whether a department shall be profitable or not. Another dealer who handles soft drinks recently said: "Two years ago when I began to handle soft drinks, I allowed customers to take the bottles free of charge on promise that they would return them. Some kept their promise but the greater majority did not. I figured that I made very little out of soft drinks that year. When I went around taking orders I found many of the bottles at the customers' homes filled with eating or some other home-made product.

"I decided that the next year they would not get their catsup holders at my expense. I now charge for each bottle as it goes out whether it is to a regular customer or not and refund the amount when the bottle is returned."

At the same meeting of grocers mentioned before, the case of a dealer who was selling all his fancy biscuits at 16 cents regardless of cost, was mentioned.

"That would be alright if a sufficient quantity of the lower priced ones could be sold," commented one grocer, "but this seldom will be found to be the case. You can trust the public to pick out the highest priced ones every time. I don't consider it a satisfactory method of doing busisess."

Reasons for Different Prices.

"You will sometimes find," spoke up another, "that there is a difference in price at which cakes which cost the same amount are sold at different stores. For instance, a cake which costs a certain price will sometimes be sold a couple of cents higher by one dealer than another. Perhaps they are both figuring on making the same percentage of profit, but one man takes into account the broken ones, and other losses while the other does not. The broken and unsaleable cakes and amount lost in weighing, amount to considerable. Some dealers fail to take this into consideration."

Here are some points well worth consideration.

A CRUEL JOKE.

A little girl entered the store, according to the story and deposited four eggs upon the counter.

"Please sir, I've brought these eggs back and muvver says you said they were laid to-day, so she wants to-morrow's eggs, 'cos these are something awful."

Grocers' Reputations in the Housewife's Eye

Women Discuss Service of Respective Dealers—Some Get Poor Reputations While Others Are Boosted—To Which Class Do You Belong?

A number of women were talking about grocers and the service they give.

"I went into Jones' yesterday," said one, "and I was in a terrible hurry too. Jones himself was sitting at the desk, while the boy was perched on a chair fixing the shelves. Both continued with their work, while I waited, all on pins to get my goods and get back home. At last the boy climbed leisurely down from the shelf and said, 'do you want anything?' I wonder what he thought I went in there for. It certainly wasn't to admire their swift service. The other stores will be pretty busy when I go in there again, especially if I'm in a hurry."

"I think the clerks at Blanks are so obliging and nice," commented another." When you go into the store, if they happen to be fixing anything, they drop it at once and come to wait on you. I think that is what gets them so much trade. People appreciate anything like that. I know I do."

"Yes, they certainly are on the alert," agreed a third. "I was passing there a few days ago and stopped to look at some pineapples which were at the door. Immediately, one of the clerks was at the door. 'It's about time to start preserving pineapples,' he said, and went on to explain the different sizes and which were best for putting down. I like clerks to be willing to explain these things to a person."

Apparently little escapes the eagle eye of the exacting housewife, and he who would court her favor successfully, must give attention to all particulars of his service to make it as favorable as possible to his customers. This little dialogue shows that the grocer comes in for a great deal of discussion among the public and it is all advertising, either of a good or bad nature.

Following items are from The Grocer of October 28, 1892:

"A test made at Kingston, Ont., of the use of black pepsin in milk in order to increase the quantity of butter is pronounced a failure. The quality of the butter was injured."

"Next year is expected to be a fat year on the Fraser River. There appears to be a regularly recurring strong run every fourth year."

Editor's Note.—Without doubt there is a strong run every fourth year. The last big salmon run was in 1909 so that we may look forward to a heavy run in 1913.

"The prospect of the Hallowe'en festivities is appreciated by the trade here (Montreal). It is increasing sale of nuts and fruits to a material extent."

Editor's Note.—Here is an idea for dealers of to-day. See that every customer knows of the approach of Hallowe'en and that the attention of all is called to fruits and nuts.

Current News of the Week

Quebec.

George Robertson, deputy receiver-general of St. John, N.B., and a former member of the New Brunswick legislature, who died last week, was for many years a retail grocer in St. John. His establishment was of the highest class, both in appearance, management, and in the goods carried. Mr. Robertson was among the first to import from the West Indies.

The Hon. C. J. Doherty, minister of justice was the speaker at a meeting of the Quebec branch of the Canadian Credit Men's Association in St. Lawrence Hall, Montreal on Thursday last. He expressed himself as in sympathy with a uniform insolvency law for the whole of Canada, and stated that if the association would present the nucleus of such a law he would give it his support. The Quebec branch of the association has now a membership of 140.

At a meeting of the Montreal Merchants' Association last week, the grievance of the merchants against the agricultural interests which control the sale of butter was presented to Hon. J. E. Caron, minister of agriculture for Quebec. A special complaint was lodged against the system of selling butter and cheese by the Co-operative Agricultural Society of the Province, and the merchants charged that the Government inspectors assisted in getting new members for the society. It was also claimed that the society had become commercialized, and that the Government discriminated in its favor by classing the goods of its members. Mr. John McKergow contended that the quality of Quebec cheese commenced to improve long before the society came into existence.

Fruits in Demand for Thanksgiving

Holiday Trade Gives Impetus to Fruits — Cranberries Selling Quite Well—New Crop Lemons and Florida Oranges Will Soon be on Market—Potatoes Promising Better—Preserving Fruits Dwindling.

This week certain lines of fruit have been in better demand in anticipation of the Thanksgiving trade. Around every holiday there is always a better demand for fancy fruits, and thus the activity in several varieties during the past week. This is expected to continue the first part of next week as another occasion when fruit is in a little better demand is Hallowe'en, which comes on Thursday next. Cranberries, an essential part of the Thanksgiving dinner have been moving out well of late.

The season for a number of new lines of imported fruits is here. Grapefruit from Florida made its initial bow on Canadian markets last week. The quality is excellent and with the large crop that is expected this line should have a good year. Reports as to the size of the crop are just as encouraging as ever and there is a tendency to easiness. Florida will shortly be sending forth some new crop oranges, which also promise a good yield, and reasonable prices this year. New crop lemons will also soon adorn our markets. They are now on their way from Europe.

As noted last week, it seems possible that the potato situation may not turn out as discouraging as some dealers would have us to believe. True, it is, that rot has made its appearance in some sections, as a result of the wet weather which was experienced However, the opinion is gaining ground that this is pretty well confined to low ground and to the earlier varieties. Recent arrivals seem to be more free from rot. For instance, the first arrivals of New Brunswick stock on the Toronto market were particularly bad, but recent shipments have been quite good. Dealers are hoping that the improvement will continue.

The preserving fruit season is decidedly on the wane. There are still some peaches coming along in some sections, but shipments will gradually dwindle to the zero market. Grapes are quite a feature just now and an appreciable business is being done in them.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS.—Apples are shaping up better and better. The fruit, it is said by those who have examined many orcharls, is of an exceedingly high order, due largely to the spraying methods adopted.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS. — The local fruit market lacks the hum of activity that marked it a few weeks ago, when the fruit season was in full swing. There are still peaches coming along, but the quantity is dwindling. Grapes are the big feature on the market now, and a good business continues to be done. They will probably last for two weeks more. A certain business is being done in pears and quinces.

Grapefruit, the new crop of which came on the market last week has been fairly well taken up, as the quality is excellent. At present it is selling at $5 per case. New crop Florida oranges as well as new lemons should be on the market before long. Apples are now being given more attention.

VEGETABLES. — It was stated last week that in the face of rot experienced in several sections it was difficult to tell how the future of potatoes might rule. The wet weather caused appearance of rot on low land, but it was thought possible that the later varieties might not be affected, at least not so much. The better quality of recent arrivals would seem to bear out this idea. In addition some further shipments have been received by local dealers from New Brunswick, and are of good quality while the earlier ones were particularly bad in respect to rot.

Beets, carrots and turnips are being quoted by the bag. Storing of these lines will soon commence. Boston hothouse cucumbers are quoted at $1.50 per dozen. Sweet potatoes are coming along in larger quantities, selling at $1.50 per hamper and $4.50 per barrel.

B.C. Fruit Chances in the Prairie Markets

Reason Why So Much United States Fresh Fruit Is Sold There —Buyers Complain of Poor Packing, Slow Transportation and Heavy Freight and Express Rates on British Columbia Fruit— Market Should Be Better Later.

Calgary, Alta., Oct. 21 (Special).—Large quantities of fruit from the Pacific slope are being shipped to Calgary and other points in the West this season and selling at reasonable prices. The crop east of the mountains on both sides of the line is this year quite abundant and of good quality. In British Columbia the peach crop is so heavy that it is said large quantities are being wasted for want of sufficient facilities for handling and shipping.

Fault Finding Reported.

There is some mutual fault finding between the growers and shippers of British Columbia and the fruit handlers in the prairie provinces.

The former complain that the latter are too prone to buy and import fresh foreign grown fruit when just as good if not better can be obtained in their own country and much nearer. On the other hand the dealers in the cities of the plains retort that they would prefer purchasing their supplies from their brethren in the mountain province if conditions were as satisfactory as across the line.

In support of this they say that in British Columbia the fruit growing and shipping industry is not properly or sufficiently developed to give the best results or insure satisfaction to the handlers in the prairie cities. In Washington and the other fruit-growing States on the Pacific the industry is older and it is claimed is better organized than in British Columbia. This year with the abundant crop the want of competent packers, shippers and handlers is severely felt and the consequence is that the fruit does not reach the east in as good condition as it should.

Say Cars Are Slow.

Another complaint is that cars of fruit ordered from British Columbia do not come forward promptly. The chief reason of this appears to be want of good organization for the assembling of the different varieties. For instance, when a merchant in say Calgary orders a car of fruit, it is not likely to be all one kind especially if it is to be consigned to some of the smaller towns. The consequence is there is likely to be a delay in getting together the different varieties required. This is a difficulty the handlers on the prairies say they seldom meet in importing from the United States growers.

Crop Is Later.

Another handicap upon the British Columbia grower is the fact that his crop is two weeks later than that of Washington. One of the chief complaints, however, is the freight and express rates from British Columbia. This is a difficulty over which neither the British Columbia grower nor the prairie handler has any control. From the Okanagan to the prairies there is no competition and the railways and express companies appear to fully live up to the rule of charging all the traffic will stand. On the other hand the shippers from the south have the advantage of some competition.

Comparison of Rates.

To give an idea of the rates from the coast to Alberta a few figures are sufficient. A shipment of 16 crates of peaches from Kelowna, B.C., to Calgary by express cost $7.20 or 45 cents per crate, while 12 boxes of cherries from Lewiston, Idaho, nearly three times the distance, cost $4.62 or 38½ cents per box.

On apples the rate is more favorable to the British Columbia grower. The rate from Washington to Calgary is 95 cents while from the Okanagan it is this year 59 cents, a reduction of 11 cents per 100 pounds.

In looking over the whole situation and considering present difficulties and drawbacks to supplying the prairie markets with British Columbia fruit, there appears to be no reason why there should not be a great future for the British Columbia grower. What is wanted that is now lacking appears to be better organization, more careful packing, prompt shipment and more railway competition. These will soon come and the growing of fruit in the rich valleys of the Pacific Province will be a great and profitable industry, for the markets of the plains can and will consume all that British Columbia can raise and send them for many years to come.

Flour Reduced in Western Canada

Prices Winnipeg and West Reduced 30c. Per Barrel—Some Mills Quoting 50c. Below Former Prices—No Change in Eastern Provinces — Balkan Trouble Causes Delay—Spot Flour Not Plentiful in East.

There has been a decline in Manitoba flour as anticipated, and there hasn't. To make this statement more clear, it might be explained that flour prices in Western Canada have been reduced but in the eastern provinces there has been no announcement of any change.

It will be remembered that last week we noted that reports from the West said that some mills had brought down prices. In most cases the reduction has been 30 cents per barrel, but there are some mills as low as 50 cents below former prices. There has been no definite agreement yet as to just what figures will become general.

Prices in the East are unaltered. It was anticipated that there would have been some change before this in keeping with values on new crop wheat. It is probable that there would have been some change before now if the trouble in the Balkans had not interfered. "We have been expecting a change for the past three weeks," said the Toronto representative of one mill. "They are apparently holding off on account of Balkan trouble. There is no use in setting a price that may have to be altered in a short time to meet changed conditions."

While there has been no announcement of lower prices in the East, contract busines for new crop goods is being done at quite marked concession. This is mostly with bakers. "There is a scarcity of spot flour," explained a flour broker this week. "While you can buy ahead for new goods at considerably reduced prices, you have to pay the top price for spot goods."

In regard to the reduction in the West and none in the East, an eastern miller offered the argument that they could afford to come down in the West as they have been on a higher basis than the East.

The shortage of rolled oats still continues, at some centres of the East, but more so with some companies than with others.

Demand for rolled oats has been quite brisk, taking both domestic and export trade into account. Indeed, one eastern miller stated this week that he had enough business booked ahead to keep him busy close on to the end of the year.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR.—Still there are no changes in prices here. The market is steady, and it appears that it will continue so for some little time. No considerable changes are looked for this month.

This week has seen a good deal of buying, many merchants stocking up. The result has been a somewhat larger reduction of stocks. There is plenty of flour, however ,to meet the probable demand.

Still there is little being done with new crop wheat. Buyers are waiting to see what will develop.

FLOUR.—There has been no reduction in Manitoba flour on Ontario markets, although prices in Western Canada have taken a drop. A decline has been anticipated but the trouble in the Balkans is the reason assigned for the delay. As regards the drop in the West, one miller said this week, "They were high out there and can afford to reduce prices. We didn't go up to so high a basis on this market."

While there is no announced decline as yet, contract business is being booked ahead with bakers at considerably reduced figures. "You can buy ahead at lower prices," said one man this week, "but you have to pay top price for spot goods, which is in small supply."

CEREALS.—Situation in rolled oats shows no change. While some mills are better situated in regard to supplies than others, conditions with some firms are acute. For instance, the Toronto branch of one big mill has not received any bulk rolled oats since the first of the month and only one car of package goods. Needless to say wholesalers are clamoring for supplies. Relief is hoped for by this company in 10 days. New crop western oats are beginning to come forward in more appreciable quantities.

Fish Trade Appreciable for Season

Compares Well With Other Years—More Dealers Taking Hold —Smoked and Prepared Lines Moving Better—Oysters Are in Better Demand—Scarcity of Fresh Halibut and White Fish.

The fish trade appears to be quite up to the standard for the season. This is indicated in reports which come forward from different centres of the Dominion. More dealers are taking hold as they now have more time to devote to this department while those who have already been handling fish are adding additional varieties. There has been a scarcity of fresh halibut on most markets and some frozen stock has had to be used. White fish is also scarce. Smoked and prepared lines of fish are being taken up beter, now that cooler weather has set in.

There has been an improved demand for oysters this week in anticipation of a good trade around the Thanksgiving holiday. The weather is now also more conducive to demand in this line while another important factor is the improved quality. By the middle of November, the quality is expected to be ahead of last year at the same time.

QUEBEC.

MONTREAL.—The week has seen a drop in oyster prices—a drop which comes just when the retail demand is growing rapidly. Those who had their order placed in time will have secured the supply needed to meet the Thanksgiving day trade at this more attractive figure.

The holiday trade, it seems, will be a large one. The early part of October was just a little warm for oysters. It takes cool weather to make people long for stews and fries. Now, however, the cool, crisp days have come. There is certain to be a heavy demand, and indeed this is already reflected in the orders received by the wholesale dealers.

The week sees a scarcity of fresh halibut. Little is to be had, but this lack is partially offset by shipments of frozen halibut. Lake fish is plentiful with the solitary exception of dressed pike.

Haddies, fillets and kippers are to be had in good quantities. Also, there is plenty of boneless smoked herring. All these lines are being largely ordered, the fish trade evidently being largely on the increase.

ONTARIO.

TORONTO.—Local fish dealers report that the fish trade is appreciable for the season of the year. It has not really got under way, but more retailers are taking hold each week and it is fast developing a healthy tone. White fish are scarce and frozen stock is being used. There is not enough fresh halibut coming along and some frozen stock is also being used in this line.

Under the better quality of oysters and the cooler weather, there is a brisker trade being done in this line. The consumption so far this season is said to well up with last year.

Smoked kippers are quoted lower at $1.25 per box, while Labrador herrings in kegs are higher at 3.25.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

ST. JOHN.—The supply of mackerel and halibut fell off considerably this week. Hard blows off the coast with a little rain have been responsible for decline in stocks. The chief shipments of mackerel this week have been from Yarmouth, and they have been retailing at from 8 to 10 cents. It was said this week by a local fish dealer that vessel owners about Lunenburg had conferred regarding fish prices and as a result the cost of bank fish would be increased to about $6.50. There has been a decline in the catch in the waters near Lunenburg this year, the difference being about 25,000 quintals.

NOVA SCOTIA.

HALIFAX.—The local fish markets are becoming a little more active. On the western shore this week some fair catches of mackerel were made, but they are far below the average for season. Prospects are not bright for any large catches. The inshore fisheries are fairly good, but the bank fishing is poor, and the trawlers now out are getting few fish. The total catch of the Lunenburg bank fleet this season is 211,080 quintals, as against a catch of 216,450 quintals last year. More vessels were engaged but the average catch was smaller.

Butter Maintains Its Firm Position

Additional Advances at Several Centres—Demand From West Has Prevented Accumulations Elsewhere—Opinions as to Future Vary—Egg Receipts Falling Off—Poultry in Demand This Week—Little Too Early for Turkeys.

The butter market continues to maintain a firm and interesting position. Although prices now average from 1½ to 2 cents per pound higher than a year ago, strength still continues and values at many centres have been further advanced during the past couple of weeks. The situation is shown by a comparison of prices at Cowansville, Que., the centre of a big producing district. On Saturday last, the ruling price at that place was 31⅛ cents as compared with 29⅛ the previous week.

Although not a single package has been shipped to England this season as against over 133,000 packages to this date last year, prices have slowly but certainly been climbing to a higher level since early July and are now about 2 cents above ruling values of one year ago. Probably the most important factor in bringing this about has been the increased demand from the Northwest and British Columbia. Already there is held a large quantity in storage in Montreal for western account and there are still inquiries.

As to the future there are various opinions expressed. Some dealers think that demand from the West will prevent any accumulations elsewhere. In some quarters the opinion prevails that with cheese factories closing, there will be a larger production and an easier tendency. Whether this will prove true or not depends to a large extent on the kind of weather during the next month. A continued open fall would probably add materially to the make.

In eggs there is also a stronger feeling, resulting from the decrease in receipts. Wholesalers are experiencing no little difficulty in getting enough fresh stock to fill the demand and some cold storage stock is now being used. Egg prices attained quite a record mark last winter and they are certainly getting off to a good start in that direction this season.

Poultry has been in the limelight this week on account of the Thanksgiving demand. Turkeys are supposed to be connected up with this occasion but this year in most districts they are found lacking somewhat in both quality and quantity. Geese are in a better position and in many cases have been substituted, while other lines also came in for their share of attention.

TORONTO.

PROVISIONS.—There is a fair movement of hog products reported by most houses. Scarcity of backs still continues with several firms and there is an undertone of firmness. Some houses are quoting higher. Most prices on long clear rule from 14 to 15½ cents according to the size of the sides. One firm quotes 80 to 100 lbs. sides at 13½ cents, 50 to 80 at 14c., and 55 to 65 at 15 cents.

Apparently farmers did not feel like accepting last week's price for hogs, and quotations had to be increased this week. ruling at $8.10 at country points. Prices have come down considerably from the the high point but further concessions are conceded as possible.

BUTTER. — Again there is a slightly firmer feeling and inside quotations on butter have been advanced. "It is the high figures that Montreal is paying that is causing us to pay higher prices," said a local dealer this week. "Fresh made goods is pretty near keeping us going but creameries point to the prices that are being paid in Montreal and demand the same." The West is a big factor in the situation and the demand from that direction is apparently having a good deal to do with the firmness.

EGGS.—Higher prices are being demanded for eggs this week for the reason that has been pointed out before. Receipts are dropping off to a marked degree and with a few houses some storage stock has had to be used. With prices having attained such a high price so early in the season, it would seem that we are in for a winter of high prices, unless something turns up to alter the situation.

As high as 32 cents is being asked for some select stock.

POULTRY.—This is a week of considerable importance in poultry, in anticipation of the Thanksgiving trade. Dealers expect to be pretty well able to supply demand. The season proves to be too early for turkeys, both in respect to quality and quantity. The dressed article will probably rule about 23 to 28 cents per pound. Geese are in good supply and the quality is also quite good so that they will likely be in good demand. They will sell at about 13 cents per pound. There is a slightly firmer feeling all round in poultry this week.

BUTTER.—From the West has come a large demand, and as the local call has kept up—indeed increased largely—and as supplies have not increased any thing like in proportion, the prices have naturally risen. Indications are that further advances will be struck within another week. Handlers are experiencing a good deal of difficulty in securing supplies to meet the growing demand.

EGGS. — Supplies continue inadequate, indeed as each week passes the difference between the demand and the supply is more striking. The eggs do not seem to be forthcomong. A considerable advance was struck this week in new laid eggs. Handlers are loth to predict, but it seems certain that high prices are to be expected. A further advance is quite possible, in view of the fact that no relief is in sight for the inadequate supply.

POULTRY.—Fowl is fairly plentiful, and it is well that such is the case, for the demand is heavy. To date there has been a somewhat remarkable lack of orders for geese. Few of these are on hand, not so much that they are scarce, as that there is no call. For turkeys, too, the demand has not reached great proportions, though the approach of Thanksgiving has caused a considerable awakening. Chickens and ducks are moving well. Prices are rather lower than they were a week ago.

Good Location Helps Provision Trade

Well To Be Where People Pass — Trenton, Ont., Store Has Street on Three Sides—Right in the Flow of Traffic Where Large Number of People Pass — This Has Helped Provision Trade—Fresh Sausages are Handled.

Location has sometimes a good deal to do with determining the amount of business which a store will do or the trade it will find possible to work up in certain departments. Every merchant realizes the value of being so located that the largest number of people will pass the store. Just what the reason is, we will not attempt to explain but people seem to be inclined to deal at the store which is the least out of the way. Thus, the desire of merchants to be in a location which customers consider as handy to deal at.

Streets on Three Sides.

It is not very often that a merchant has a store with a street on each side of it. Sometimes his store borders on two streets as when he is located on a corner but very infrequent is it that a street passes along each side of the building as well as the front. Such, however, is the singular position of the store of T. McConville, a grocer of Trenton, Ont. His store forms a wedge where two streets converge at an angle of about 35 degrees. Thus he really has a public thoroughfare on three sides of his store.

In the Traffic Zone.

The number of people who pass the store is large, not only because of his location on three streets but also his location in respect to the districts to and from which there is always a heavy traffic. The people from the main residential portion of the town must pass his store on their way to the post-office, while those people in the other section of the town must pass it in going to the market.

A separate department for provisions is maintained in the store and as it is a handy place for customers to call, considerable business is, as a result, done. A counter with two small marble slabs is devoted to the line. On one end of this counter is a case in which cheese is shown, while another display case situated on the counter contains butter. To the rear is a large refrigerator with glass front in which meats are kept.

Fresh Sausages Handled.

One line which is handled in the provision department is fresh sausages. The store does not find it possible to carry them regularly but they are brought in each Saturday and during some parts of the year it is found possible to handle them more frequently. They are, however, brought in each Saturday and customers knowing this do not order other fresh meat for that day.

Now that the weather is becoming cooler, a good many grocers are taking up the sale of fresh sausages and some of them have already worked up a considerable trade this fall. A good many dealers have also adopted the idea of getting them in on certain days each week, customers being made acquainted with those days that shipments come in. As a result many look forward to them. Some grocers have got regular orders from certain customers for a certain amount each time a shipment comes in. A dealer is enabled to work ahead so that by the time the shipment comes in, he may probably have a goodly portion sold, so that they are all disposed of before it is possible for the quality to become impaired.

Ludella

The sale for Ludella tea is steadily growing, for the twenty-five cent retailer there is a quick demand. This popular priced tea is wanted again wherever it has been used, and those dealers who want a good repeater in the tea line and at a price that is within the means of all, try Ludella Blue Label. It retails at twenty-five cents.

Salt

The Diamond Crystal make which we handle is the product of the most modern factory on the continent, or we might properly say in the world. In fact it would be almost impossible to produce any that would be purer. It is made for both table and dairy purposes, and the attractive manner in which it is packed is a big help in the selling.

Liberal Profit to the Dealer

Big Value to the Customer

A good profit is made on every sale of SOCLEAN — it has proven a repeating seller. If you make an initial sale of SOCLEAN to a customer through display, salesmanship, or through the influence of our advertising, you may be assured that you will sell more. The first sale is a profit to you, subsequent sales add to it—then you will notice that SOCLEAN is included in the regular orders of other customers, who appreciate its dust-laying, labor-saving and sanitary qualities.

The customer also appreciates the increased quantity in the 25c package and the reduction in price of the 50c and $1.00 packages to 40c and 75c, respectively. We improved the quantity because we could not improve the quality.

LIVE CURED FISH

ALL Canadian sardines are caught in the famous Passamaquoddy Bay.

FREQUENTLY all packers obtain fish from the same weir at the same time.

SUPERIOR Quality is therefore dependent upon Superior Methods.

GOLDEN RULE SARDINES ARE ALL LIVE CURED

That is—The holds of all our boats are equipped with sanitary brining tanks, so that the fish come,

RIGHT OUT OF THE OCEAN INTO THE BRINE—ALL ALIVE.

Thus we bring our factory to the fish in place of the fish to our factory.

You do not need to be a fisherman to appreciate this advantage.

IT MAKES THE FISH LOOK BETTER—TASTE BETTER—SELL BETTER.

You always lose when you "Money-back" a customer

FIRST—you lose your profit; second—you lose your time; third, you may lose your customer.

Further, your recommendation is weakened in effect, and then there is the annoyance of claiming on the miller.

And when finally you get your money back—why, you are still out of pocket.

Anybody with a new product can "guarantee" to money-back.

But guaranteed flour is not enough, Brother Grocer.

Isn't it enough to sell flour without having to buy it back?

Don't sell on suspicion when you can sell on certainty.

It is immaterial what brand you are selling now, FIVE ROSES flour will bring you easier, larger sales.

It will bring you a greater volume of net profit.

Because it is more than merely "guaranteed"—it has established a belief.

A guarantee is based on promise, but a belief is based on performance. Since 1888, housewives have tried FIVE ROSES, tested it every way. And now they KNOW.

Sell a flour that needs no "guarantee," Brother Grocer. Packed in sizes to suit YOUR trade, ask your jobber for FIVE ROSES or write our nearest office.

The buyers of quality have a particular desire for Thistle Brand fish — they serve the appetite with such delicious satisfaction that to "try" even to sell another brand to one who has already tested Thistle Brand would be useless. FOR THE CHRISTMAS BAKING

Every home-cook wants her Christmas puddings, pies, cakes, sauces, etc., to be extra good. It is a good time to introduce to her. She will be glad to know about this real extract of Mexican Vanilla Beans. Glad to know that it will make her Christmas dainties even more delicious than they were last year. The real Vanilla flavor will be a revelation to many women, since most women are used to the inferior and somewhat harsh taste of chemical imitations of the genuine Vanilla flavor.

Shirriff's

Other delicious Shirriff Flavoring to introduce to her are — Lemon, Almond, Rose Pineapple, Strawberry, Ratafia, and ninety others.

There's a good margin of profit in Shirriff's Flavorings. And it adds to a dealer's reputation to sell and recommend them.

If your customers knew that a pound of 40c. quality of Red Rose Tea would make over two hundred cups of tea, as strong as most people like tea, and of a flavor more pleasing than cheaper teas—(much more pleasing, we think) would they continue to use cheaper, poorer teas? We think they wouldn't—and we are fully of the opinion that the only reason people continue to use 30c. tea is because they have not tried 40c. Red Rose, and do not know of its fine quality and that it is so economical to use.

We are sure you would like to sell 40c. tea. We believe you can if you will tell your customers the simple facts.

HELP HER WITH THE BAKING.

The majority of women take great pride in making fine cake, bread or pastry—they like to have them of even flavor, baked thoroughly but evenly and, above all, tasty. Give them

SELLING ARGUMENTS

There are selling arguments that are good and there are selling arguments that are better.

In reply to enquiries from the consumer, we have found that it is much more effective to quote oysters in pints, rather than quarts. In years gone by oysters were handled very differently from what they are now. The consumer feels that the price has been advanced, but the value they receive for their money at this time is greater than that which they received ten years ago; that is, they are receiving more solids or actual food properties. The family that required a quart of oysters under the methods that prevailed a few years ago, will only require a pint under the present methods, and will really obtain more satisfaction. There, of course, continues to be more or less watering of oysters, but this method is wrong, and will, as a natural result, be its own undoing. How often the consumer purchases oysters, depends entirely upon the satisfaction obtained in eating them, with the result that it is up to every dealer to put the oysters out in the best possible condition, and obtain a price that will afford his doing so. Obtain the best oysters possible, put them out in the best possible condition, and the trouble of getting a price for your stock will be pretty well taken care of.

We can supply you with the necessary quality; the rest of it is up to you. COAST SEALED oysters stand for more with Canadian trade to-day than all other brands combined.

The Demand Is There---You Simply Have To Supply It

THE EDWARDSBURG STARCH CO. LIMITED

MONTREAL—CARDINAL—TORONTO—BRANTFORD—VANCOUVER

An attractive window of Christmas goods shown by Grant Bros., Prince Albert, Sask., last year.

Good Displays Easy at this Season

New Goods Coming in Now Lend Themselves to Attractive Display—Prince Albert, Sask. Window Gives Some Ideas for a Trim—Xmas Necessities Should be Featured Early.

Some good window displays are possible in the grocery store at this season of the year. For the past few months preserving fruits have been an important item, and windows have to a large extent been given over to them. They usually lend themselves to most attractive displays but not more so than the many lines of goods now arriving on the market. New pack canned goods and the new season's dried fruits are now coming in and with these lines, some attractive and sales-creating windows can and should be arranged.

Western Xmas window.

The West, although a comparatively new country, has realized the value of good window display and taken it up strongly. Herewith is reproduced a window display in the store of Grant Bros., of 1st avenue, west, Prince Albert, Sask., in which dried fruits and canned goods are shown in an attractive trim.. This was used last year and attracted a great deal of attention and sold a considerable quantity of goods for the store.

The main feature of the window was the showing of dried fruits and peels. The number of different lines shown was quite extensive, including several fancy varieties, which because of yielding a more appreciable profit should be pushed by every grocery. Canned goods were worked in so as to make a good background while nuts and confectionery are among the other lines shown.

The outstanding feature in regard to the arrangement of the window is the manner in which it is built up. Many displays fall down in the fact that they are too flat in appearance. Not so this window which was built to set the goods out so that they would attract the eye of the passerby.

As can be seen by the presence of the Christmas crackers and the season's greetings on the show cards, this was a Christmas display. Several additions outside of the goods themselves shown have been made in order to add to the appearance of the trim. The rear lattice work, the fancy paper decorations and the palms at the front all give an artistic touch to the display.

While this window was a Christmas display, there is no reason why the same plan or idea should not be followed at any time during the next couple of months. All these lines are now available and it is time they were being pushed by the grocer.

Some dealers give little attention to dried fruits and nuts until the Christmas season is close at hand. This is certainly a mistake. When the new season's goods first come in is an excellent time to sell them as the fact of them being the first of the season is a great inducement to customers to purchase.

The Buy Early Habit.

In addition, it is well that the dealer get customers started buying Christmas requirements as early as possible. By getting as much of this trade over early it gives him a chance to work the opportunities of the last few weeks to the greatest advantage.

The earlier the dealer gets the housewife thinking about her Christmas baking and gets her purchasing her supplies, the better for both of them. One of the best possible ways in which to do this is by good window displays.

How to Enliven Trade in November

Methods Grocer May Use to Boom Business—Feature New Dried Fruits and Nuts as They Come in—Cold Weather Opens up Opportunities for Meat Extract, Cocoa and Soups—Attention Should be Given to Fish Department.

One season does not make a year nor does a splurge of business-like methods by the dealer during one season make a successful year for him. During the past few months, grocers have in most cases been devoting a good deal of attention to the sale of preserving and pickling necssities and in most instances a particularly good season has been experienced. The rush in these particular lines is now over but it is by no means a signal for the grocer to rest on the oars. He has been pulling hard during the past few months and thanks to favorable conditions, in many cases has been able to get sales up to a point that compares well with last year. Like the man in the stream, if he now rests on his oars he will find himself losing the ground that has been gained. Like the man rowing against the current, the man in business cannot stand still. If he is not going up, he will be drifting down.

No Lack of Opportunities.

The grocer should by no means slacken his pace at this time. The end of the year is fast approaching and it is the aim of every dealer, or at least it should be to make the best possible showing in point of sales for the year. This is one reason why he should maintain his business-like methods and he has no reason to slacken them for want of opportunities.

For one thing Christmas is already looming up large and it is by no means too early to begin to think and plan about the festive season. It is well to get the campaign started as early as possible. There is much to be gained by so doing. Besides relieving the strain of the last few weeks, it gives the dealer a chance to work the opportunities of the season so as to get much better results. If by starting to cultivate the Christmas trade early, he makes to spring up two blades where only one would have otherwise been, he has certainly gained much.

Feature New Season's Goods.

As to the opportunities presented to the grocer in the month just opening, the arrival of the new season's dried fruits on the market should be taken advantage of. Every grocer knows that the new season's goods in any line always assist materially in its sale. This is taken advantage of in dried fruits by many grocers but there are still those who do not work it to its full extent. Currants, Valencia raisins, apricots and peaches are now on the market but some dealers have not yet received their first shipments. Other lines now coming in are figs, dates, prunes and seeded raisins. Sales in all these lines may well be promoted by acquainting customers with the fact that the new goods are procurable. The season's supplies of all those lines which enter into the make up of the Christmas cake will soon be at hand and every thing will be in order for the dealer to touch the match to his Xmas campaign.

Nuts and Confectionery Sell.

As with dried fruits, so can the sale of nuts be extended by featuring the new goods as they arrive. The season of big consumption of nuts is now here. The colder weather means that people will keep more to the house and as a result there will be many gathering around the hearth and nuts is one of the lines to be benefited. The cooler weather also brings with it a greater number of social gatherings and such lines as nuts and confectionery should sell well. They should be featured by every dealer. It is the grocer who displays and advertises them who is going to get the business.

Cold Weather Helps.

One of the important points around which trade in November is woven is the fact that the season of colder weather has arrived and it naturally brings with it a change in the lines of food which the public will want and the grocer should feature. It does not seem long since cooling drinks were the important theme, but now the story is different. As the temperature moves downward, a drink that will give warmth to the body is wanted. In addition to tea and coffee, cocoa should sell well. This is a line to which many grocers do not give the attention that they should. Cocoa is certainly a delightful cold weather drink and suggestion of it to customers should bring good results. This is also the season for meat extracts and in addition to being a seasonable beverage, they also possess nutritive properties that should commend them to customers. Many of them are acknowledged as a valuable aid to digestion and a great body builder. These are all important arguments which may be used in pushing their sale.

A somewhat kindred line for which demand is now in full swing is canned and condensed soups. Besides the seasonable weather now in evidence, the demand for this line is steadily on the increase. The housewife for a long time did not think it possible for anyone to put out in this form, a soup that could be compared with the product of her kitchen but this prejudice is fast disappearing. Soups can be recommended by the grocer both for their flavor and their nutritive value. During this month, counter displays of soups backed up by the personal salesmanship of the clerks should increase the sale of this line to no little extent.

Fish to the Fore.

With the arrival of the colder weather and the approach of Advent and the season of greater demand, the fish and oyster department in many stores will be given increased attention. There are some dealers who are inclined to neglect the fish department until the Christmas rush is over, but if such dealers will analyze the problem they will find they are following a wrong policy and losing a great deal. From now until the end of the year there is going to be an appreciable consumption of fish, including four weeks of the Advent season trade. They are losing all this trade but in addition and probably equally important is the fact that some other dealer is getting the public going to his store. People are generally inclined to continue dealing at a store which they have become accustomed to patronizing. The grocer loses a great deal of prestige by neglecting to give his attention to fish during the early part of the season.

Many Oyster Suppers.

One of the most fruitful portions of the oyster season is from now on to the first of the year. The quality of oysters is now excellent and many oyster suppers should be the result. Those dealers who featured oysters around Thanksgiving and Hallowe'en found gratifying results and the same efforts should be continued during the whole of November.

Canada is in a very prosperous condition this year, the amount of money circulating in the country at the present time is perhaps larger than ever before and it is without doubt a time when the grocer should put forth his best efforts to secure the best out of the opportunities at hand.

Maintaining the Freshness of the Egg

Farmer Should be Shown That Greater Care Means More Money and Markets Should Eliminate the "Cut-Throat" Competitive Policy, Maintains Reader—In Other Words Price of Eggs Should be According to Their Quality.

Editor Canadian Grocer,—In looking through the fall number issue of Grocer my attention was arrested by the fresh egg article. It strikes me, Sir, that it is impossible to make the farmer honest to the extent of keeping back, stale, dirty and undersized eggs until it is made profitable for him to do so. The problem is how is this to be done while there is such a scramble among the merchants themselves to secure what eggs are brought in. If one is a bit too particular as to condition of eggs offered, Mr. Farmer has only to go across the road to the competing merchant to make a deal. The question is what can be done to prevent merchants bidding one against the other as they are doing in order to get a quantity for shipment, and induce them to purchase only what are worth purchasing. Much resolves itself to this: When merchants stop buying worthless eggs the farmer will stop bringing them in.

E. A. KENDALL.

673 Gerrard street, east.

Toronto, Oct. 17, 1912.

The above letter of Mr. Kendall's was a welcome one because it creates further discussion on this all-important question of the maintenance of the fresh egg. Mr. Kendall hits the nail on the head in two statements made. When he says the farmer will continue to place on the market stale and rotten eggs until he finds it profitable to sell them when they are fresh, he is undoubtedly right. The millenium in the selling of eggs off the farm will be reached when the farmer realizes that he is losing money in not giving the matter his careful attention. If the buyer rejects bad eggs or declines to pay full market value of fresh eggs for them, he is doing much to convert the careless egg raiser.

Unity Among Merchants.

The other point is the unity of the retail merchants in buying eggs according to quality. It is detrimental to the egg trade to have merchants competing so strongly for trade that they will accept all kinds of eggs and pay full price for them. Farmers are wise enough to know the "easy marks" and those farmers who are careless of their honor will take advantage of them.

The article in the fall number which Mr. Kendall referred to, dealt with the problem from the merchant's standpoint. It showed what some are doing to help eliminate the great waste that annually befalls us. Those who have made a study of the question realize that it is almost impossible to make great headway against this loss by the education of the farmer. There are too many of them and, as Mr. Kendall intimates, they work one merchant against the other so successfully at times that they have little difficulty in getting their price..

Reform Lies With the Retailer.

Authorities now realize that it is entirely up to the merchant to prevent this great annual loss. To do this every merchant must study the egg problem and particularly the testing of the egg. Then, knowing the exact character of it, he must pay only for what it is worth.

This method will surely promote care among the farmers in handling eggs. The farmer gets paid for his trouble and loses for inattention to the gathering of eggs.

Sending Out a Circular.

It might be suggested that every buyer of eggs from the farmers use the information in the article in the fall number to send out a circular to all his country patrons, pointing out the fairness in paying for egg-quality. This circular might include suggestions on the proper handling of the egg from the time the prospective egg producer is getting in its tail feathers until the egg is laid down in the grocery store. Consider the beneficial effect this circular would have, if every merchant in Canada were to send it out simultaneously!

Following items are from Canadian Grocer of Nov. 4, 1892:—

"W. J. McHenry, a prominent grocer of Brockville, Ont., died a few days ago. The deceased gentleman had served terms as an alderman and was prominently connected with the fire brigade and other public institutions. His loss will be much regretted. He was in the prime of life, being only 42 years of age."

Editorial note.—The McHenry store is still in business to-day after the lapse of 20 years.

"The shipments of eggs to the Old Country this fall will exceed anything in the history of the trade. On Oct. 26 one boat took 110,619 dozen of eggs, most of these being from Western Ontario. On Nov. 5 the Lake Winnipeg will leave port and her cargo will embrace ten carloads of Ontario eggs. Each car contains about 100 cases and each case 114 dozen, so this week's ship will have not less than 114,000 dozen in her hold."

Editor's note.—It's funny the difference just a few years make. To-day Canada is sending very few eggs to the Old Country, in fact scarcely any at all. Canada's population has so greatly increased that they are all needed at home and even then they are scarce.

The issue of The Grocer of Nov. 4, 1892, gives a report of the annual meeting of the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild which was held in Hamilton. There were present on that occasion the following members: From Montreal, Messrs. C. P. Hebert (president), Childs and Geoffrion; from Toronto, Messrs. Blain (vice-president), Ince, Davidson, Sloan, Eckardt, Larkin, Smith, Wills (secretary); from Hamilton, Messrs. McPherson, Turner, Bristol, Stuart, Balfour, Harvey, Gillard; from Berlin, Mr. Roos; from Brantford, Mr. Watts; from London, Messrs. Masuret, Smith and Screaton.

Many of these names are still familiar ones in the wholesale grocery trade but the bearers of many others have long since departed to the great beyond. On this occasion the late Wm. Ince, who was the first president of the Guild, was presented with a silver cabinet. Mr. Ince had prior to that time given up the presidency which he had held for seven years.

The Swift Canadian Co., Ltd., have opened a new wholesale market at 17-21 Water Street, Vancouver, B.C. The building is six stories high.

Mr. S. Festing, a Hamilton, Ont., grocer, narrowly escaped serious injury when a new automobile he was driving crushed into a street car. The machine was badly damaged.

A pineapple preserved whole in a heavy syrup is an importation from Havana which is now on the market and offered to those on the outlook for some new attraction for dessert. It is put up in a can and one Canadian retailer sells at 90c each.

SAVE MONEY ON FREIGHT RATES.

The lowering temperature gives us warning that the winter is fast approaching, and in view of this the trade would do well to direct their attention to the possibility of saving some money on freight and express by getting in many lines of staple goods before the close of navigation. This applies particularly to those who have a choice of boat routes.

With the close of navigation, freight rates in general take an advance. The dealer who knows ahead what goods he will require during the winter or a part of it, and who is able to finance the purchase of them now, will find that he will be able in many cases to affect a considerable saving in this way.

In addition, with the coming of the winter, there are many lines which freezing affects that cannot be brought in by freight and of course express rates are on a considerably higher scale. For this reason the grocer would profit by looking over his stocks of such lines and getting in his supplies by freight while the temperature is still such as to make it possible. For instance, there are mineral waters, pickles, catsup, olives, wines, vinegar and many other liquid lines which cannot be brought in by freight during the winter.

Those who are able to take advantage of the lower rates will affect a saving that should make it worth while.

INFERIOR QUALITY REDUCES DEMAND.

Early reports from the south indicated a good crop of grapefruit and these appear to have been well substantiated. Grapefruit has been coming to the Canadian markets for some time now and while the exterior appearance is fine, complaints are being heard about the flavor and the pulpy character of the interior due to too early plucking.

Dealers also say that this inferior quality is having a detrimental effect on the demand. When the consumer of this kind of fruit is fooled once or twice, he does not readily respond to further attempts on the part of the retailer to sell him again.

Herein lies a lesson for every retailer. The dealer should be ever mindful of the effect inferior quality has on customers. Take the case of tea. Unless a tea drinker is in a position to purchase the same flavor and quality in his tea every time, he will be likely to transfer his tea business elsewhere. The same applies to butter, eggs, coffee and practically every article the grocer sells.

No dealer can afford to take chances on good customers. It should be his aim through thick and thin to see that quality goods only are handed out. If he does not, he is bound to lose the confidence of his clientele.

TIME TO PUSH FISH SALES.

The time has arrived when every dealer should be directing a good deal of attention to his fish department. The weather is becoming cooler and more conducive to the handling of this line, conditions are already favorable for an appreciable trade, while the Advent season, with its increased demand, is now only a few weeks distant. As for supplies, the market is well enough supplied to give the dealer plenty of scope. The varieties of fish now available are extensive enough for the retailer to be able to easily fill the varied wants of his customers. Besides fresh and frozen lines, there is now a full range of smoked, prepared, salted, canned and pickled varieties to be had.

Many retailers have been featuring fish for some little time now. They realize the advantage of getting an early start and it is considerable. Not only do they get all the earlier trade, but they establish themselves firmly with the public as handlers of fish, and the lead which they secure on the dealer, who is inclined to hold back, is generally held throughout the entire season. If one can get the people coming to the store for fish in the early part of the season, they will in most cases continue to favor him with their patronage.

Fish should sell easily because the grocer has forceful arguments to present to customers. Compared with many other lines of food, prices are reasonable, and in addition, the food value of fish is acknowledged as high. This latter point is one which grocers should not fail to impress upon their customers. It is one they should consider seriously in purchasing.

IMPORTANCE OF STORE LOCATION.

When a retailer has in mind the consideration of a new store or a change in location, he should give serious thought to the advantages and disadvantages of the site on which he expects to locate. Going blindly into business in a district where the number of possible purchasers is very limited, is folly. When the question of a new site arises why not give the matter scientific study?

There are certain large retail firms on this continent which make the decision of locations one of their chief, if not their chief, object. They do not go hap-hazardly into the question, but determine as closely as possible the number of possible purchasers of their goods. Men are stationed at the proposed sites to count these probable customers as they pass. The company therefore know just what they are to expect when a store opens for business.

A good location means much to the grocer, as will be seen from an article in this issue on "Value of a Good Location Demonstrated.'' This Galt dealer explains how he has increased his business to a large extent and attributes much of this increase to a change in location. Undoubtedly his experience is that of scores of others. The location certainly counts for much.

TEAM WORK IN THE STORE.

The rugby season is at present in full swing. The game affords many pointers of value to the merchant. It demonstrates most plainly of all the value of team work. It is an essential part of the game if the team is to be successful.

It would be well if more of this team work were introduced into business by the retail merchant. By team work, results have been accomplished in various lines of business which would have been practically impossible to produce otherwise.

Team play is merely another name for co-operation. Unless there is co-operation among all members of the staff and among the different business-creating departments, the best results will not be secured. The average merchant does not give the attention to the fostering of co-operation among his staff that he should. The efforts of every person connected with a business should be enlisted in producing the best possible results.

The idea is to get every clerk interested in the welfare of the store and to realize that success for the business means success for him or her. Many people striving towards the one end are much more likely to produce results than if only one were really doing his best and the rest putting forth no real effort.

Team work means every person pulling together in a combined manner to accomplish a certain result.

SYSTEMATIZING WORK.

Said a traveller of a certain merchant—''He comes to his office at 10 o'clock in the morning and goes away about four. He does not seem to do a great deal while he is here, yet I know he has a perfect knowledge of what is going on. Indeed he IS what is going on. He directs everything.''

This merchant has his business running in a proper manner. As a concern grows, the owner, or the manager, can not hope to do everything himself. But he can be in every thing. He can direct. But to direct, system is necessary.

The dealer to whom the traveller referred could work such short hours, and keep in such perfect touch, because everything done in the store was tabulated. A few slips of paper, left on his desk, showed him what was being done. From these he could quickly decide what needed doing—what lines should be bought—what lines should be pushed by special sales. A few talks with those in charge of the various departments enabled the completion of a plan of campaign.

As men get older they feel the need of shifting a part of their work to younger shoulders. To direct they are more capable than ever—but hard, long-drawn-out work is for the young. Dealers should realize this. They should so arrange their business that they can know what is being done without actually doing it themselves. They should make men responsible for certain work. Thus they have more time and energy for supervision—which, after all, makes a business grow in volume and in profits.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Now for the last two months of a record year.

The Christmas trade is beginning to loom up large to the grocer.

Are you announcing the arrival of the new dried fruits?

Some dealers say it is all rot about the potato rot. Some think not. Time will tell.

November is rich in opportunities for the grocer who is willing to take advantage of them.

Only the well-to-do can butter their bread on both sides these days. Butter is higher than usual at this season.

If the grocer goes after the hunter's trade with as much zeal as the hunter goes after the game, he will get good results.

The armies in the Balkan provinces were not the only ones that attacked Turkey during the past week. An army of Canadians did their part at the dinner table on Monday last.

It is bad for the good of the fresh egg trade to have one merchant declining to pay for rotten eggs while his neighbor on the other corner will pay full market price for everything regardless of quality.

A thief entered a store in an Ontario town while the person in charge was in the cellar and stole $40 from the till. Wouldn't the installation of an electric bell and cash register be a good thing when a person is alone in the store, and where it is sometimes found necessary to visit the cellar or storehouse?

Treatment the Traveling Man Deserves

He Should Be Seen on Every Occasion—His Business Is Just as Legitimate as Yours—He Carries Information That Will Be Valuable to Your Business—Various Experiences Showing Different Types of Receptions.

*By Henry Johnson, Jr.

From time to time there is a wave of discussion about the elimination of the jobber, and each time that talk starts up, it sounds as if it had never been heard before, as if it were new; whereas the fact is that such discussion is periodical and has been going on all the time.

To any thoughtful man the conclusion must come home that the jobber will last just as long as he is useful, collectively; and that the individual jobber who is not useful, because he fails to fulfil his mission, will be eliminated automatically—so we need take no thought of him. In this respect he is like the rest of us; successful and permanent if he does his work well—a failure and evanescent if he shirks his duty.

Goods Supplied as Required.

Meantime, he is here as part of the established order of things, and there is no important sign that he is being eliminated or is liable to be dropped out in our time; so let us reckon with him. He has been a good friend to each of us, individually; is the close personal friend and adviser of the best of us to-day. Not only does he supply us with the goods we need as we need them, but in all lines he is the source of much of our reliably accurate information.

Many of us are so often "too busy" to gather enough information for our own good that we cannot afford to overlook the direct intelligence that is brought right to our counters, daily, by the emissaries of the jobber, the traveling salesman.

Occasionally this emissary is a poor specimen. Many times he is like a parrot in the way he repeats by rote what he has been told to say. Sometimes, though seldom, he smokes cigarettes, and more frequently, though still seldom, he goes out nights and is apt to be "shakey" in the morning. Sometimes, too, I regret to report, he thinks the only expressive, forceful language is a complete vocabulary of cuss-words. But take him by and large, the traveling man is an honest worker who leads a monotonous life, with plenty of hardship and discomfort and none too much pay; and on the average, he is a source of information worth cultivating.

*The writer of this article is one of the most successful dealers on the continent. He has spent almost 30 years in the retail grocery business and is well equipped to answer questions and smooth out difficulties with which others may have met. If a special request is made names of inquirers will be omitted when their letters are printed for discussion.

What the Business Man Should Read.

Here I want to wedge in a remark on the too evident reluctance of the average grocer to keep himself informed; to look about him with open eyes; to read what most closely and nearly concerns himself. It has been my fortune to pass months in big cities, riding in and out daily to and from business, and it is the exceptional sight to observe a man reading anything but the newspaper for the half hour going or coming. It has always seemed to me that it should be a kind of duty, a remarkably pleasant duty thankfully performed, for the retail grocer to use the morning half hour to read his trade paper, look over consular reports and study import lists so as not only to prepare his mind for the day before him while his brain is rested and fresh, but to save those moments. He might thus put them to such advantageous use as would enable him to get through the day without the need of doing anything of that kind during the active hours of business.

Going home at night, with the busy day behind him, he might very suitably glance over the day's news and thus have time to associate with his family instead of reading and smoking in the corner in surly silence.

Travelers Abide by System.

But to get back to traveling men.

Make it a point to see every salesman, if possible, and give each caller a courteous word if it is really impossible for you to see him. If you have some system about this, you can see just about every one of them, and you will find all of them ready to conform to any system you establish.

If one calls during your busy time in the morning, do not ignore him and keep him waiting while you run around at your work. If you know him and his line, have somebody look up your stock and give him your order promptly—his time is money, too, you know. If you know you do not want anything, stop long enough to greet him and promptly tell him how you are fixed. It will not take a minute. If he is a stranger to you, take a minute to ask his line. Then, no matter whether you think you are supplied or not, if he has any new proposition to offer make an appointment to see him later, and you will find he will be there. This will not take a minute of your time and may be worth dollars to you—certainly will be worth many dollars to you during the year.

A Part of Good Buying.

It is not necessary that you buy from every man who comes along. It is not necessary that you buy a single thing you cannot advantageously use, even after you have heard the man's full story. Very few salesmen will get "sore" because you cannot see their proposition; and the few who have the idea that no buyer is at liberty to refuse to buy after having heard the tale can well be counted out. These last are mostly green specimens who will learn better as they go on.

What I am getting at is that it is just as much a part of good buying to see all salesmen and treat them courteously as to order goods needed for your sales.

Another thing: If you could fully appreciate what a contemptible figure you cut in the eyes of every well-informed, experienced salesman when you are rude, discourteous, "grouchy," "short" or "swelled up" with your own petty importance, you would come down to earth in short order. Your conduct which now seems dignified to yourself, would look pretty much like boys' play from the outside. You know how you feel toward the customer who acts like a baby about some petty occurrence and proceeds to take out of you all the accumulated griefs she has had to bear from servants, washerwomen and others whose position renders them more independent of her than the poor grocer. Well, just reverse all this and apply to yourself from the salesman what you are now thinking of such a customer.

Big Men Easy of Access.

My experience has taken me to both sides of the counter. I have sold goods to all classes of buyers, so I know how it is. I have invariably found that the big men—the men who really do things every day—are the most accessible, the easiest with whom to do business, the readiest to listen to and consider any proposition that is made to them. True, these men are quick to decide. They give the answer on the dot and it is final. But that is only because—note this carefully—they are thoroughly informed on all points not only of their own individual business but on general conditions as such affect their business. That is what I am trying to get you to see and to follow.

I recall with pleasure a visit to a fine, high-grade merchant in a very high-grade residence town. He was very busy with the morning trade. Yet he stepped to me as courteously as to any customer and listened to my outlined proposition.

He excused himself as courteously whenever he had to leave me, and then came promptly back to close the deal. We traded without the interruption of his work and when I left we were both gainers. I recall, too, with some indignation a call I later made on a man in a small town who had "no time" to listen to me. My proposition was new to him and I knew it would be wanted if understood, so I asked for a later appointment, seeing him busy at the time. But no; not a word; "no time"; and his conduct so rude, coarse and insultingly discourteous that I could only leave and determine that I would never call on him again. Another firm in the same town was equally busy, but with actual business; but my proposition was so good that the three conservative partners were each in turn persuaded to give it a trial. On a subsequent visit all of them individually thanked me for having placed the goods with them. I took some pleasure in reflecting how much the first boor had lost through his discourtesy to a salesman.

Many times, too, I have not sold my goods to men with whom, nevertheless, I have become very friendly and who were always glad to see me. Having time between trains, I have always liked to go back to the man who has been gentlemanly and pleasant, even though he may not have bought, and talk with him between jobs. With such I have always talked on the common ground of the grocer. We have discussed difficulties and problems. Sometimes I have helped the younger man to get his credits in shape. Other times I have been able to suggest to an older one where he might get some article or device for which he had pressing need, but which he could not locate. In each case I have felt that both sides profited by my visit.

What do you think about it?

PURE FOODS AND HEALTHY CHILDREN.

Medicine Hat, Alta., Oct. 30.—In a recent newspaper advertisement Hewitt & Armstrong, grocers, gave a strong talk in the introduction on the importance of quality goods. Here is what they say:

> "Poor quality in food is as much responsible for sickly children as is too little food. If mothers paid closer attention to the quality of their groceries, their children would be better in health and their homes would be brighter and happier. The coming American generation would be better in brain, brawn and muscle and race suicide would cease to exist."

Following up this talk a list of goods with their prices—the latter being in bold type—was published making an effective advertisement.

Thinks Daylight Saving a Grand Idea

Moose Jaw, Sask., Merchant Favors Scheme — Fact That Moose Jaw is Railroad Centre Detrimental to Its Working in That City—Board of Trade Will Try to Get C.P.R. to Adapt Fast Time Locally.

When the Daylight Savings Bill was first introduced in the British House of Commons a few years ago, a good many people here in Canada as well as in other parts of the world, when they read the cabled news in the daily papers, regarded it much in the light of a joke or the product of some eccentric mind or fame-seeking member of parliament. As is the case with any innnovation or out of the usual idea, judgment was in most cases at once passed against it without fully considering either its good or bad points. The idea of saving an hour's daylight each day during the summer months was a suggestion which on first thought to most people appeared about as practical as the Irishman's suggestion as to how to save much of the tobacco used in making cigars.

His friend was lamenting the terrible waste of tobacco by the throwing away of the inch of the cigar that is always left. Pat, who was of an inventive turn of mind suggested that this waste could be prevented by making the cigars an inch shorter.

Canadians Begin to Study Scheme.

It was in somewhat the same light that the idea was first regarded by the majority of people. Then when a similar bill was introduced into the Canadian House of Commons, the Canadian people began to sit up and take notice, and to study what the proposed idea really meant. If it had the backing of some of Canada's members of Parliament, it must have some good points and be nearly practical at least. The bill did not pass but it started the public talking and thinking. That it has not been without result is shown by the fact that the idea during the past summer has been tried out for a short time in two Canadian towns.

Tried in Orillia.

Orillia, Ont., adopted the idea on June 23. At midnight on that day the clocks were turned forward an hour, so that the citizens rose an hour earlier than usual, went to work an hour earlier, stopped work an hour earlier and had an hour more of daylight in the evening for recreation and amusement. That is the scheme in a nut shell. However, the "more daylight" idea had a short life in Orillia. The drawback seems to have been that laborers got the idea that it was a scheme of manufacturers to enforce a longer day in the near future.

Moose Jaw's Experience.

The other Canadian town to give the idea a trial was Moose Jaw, Sask. Here it had a some what longer life but a detrimental point which worked against it in this case was the fact that Moose Jaw is a railway centre and the railways continued the old time and accordingly their employes had to also.

What one Moose Jaw merchant thinks of the innovation is interesting. N. L. Brown of Kent & Brown, outlined the adoption and good and bad points of the idea to the Canadian Grocer.

"On May 24," he says, "the city power house burned down and to give more daylight, the mayor requested that all clocks in the city be put ahead one hour. Everybody responded except the transportation companies, the government offices and the banks. Later the C.P.R. freight department also adopted the fast time.

"I may say that it was a grand measure and I am of the opinion that we should have fast time the year round. Everything seems to be in its favor and nothing against it. Of course to be a great success as far as both the city and district are concerned, the time should be uniform. Some dissatisfaction is sure to arise from some of the citizens using fast time and the remainder of the citizens and all or almost all the farmers using slow time.

Good Points of System.

"In favor of fast time is the fact that in summer by commencing to work in the cool of the morning and quitting correspondingly earlier when the day is hot permits of a long evening for all kinds of recreation and amusement before dark. In the fall and winter by fast time, 7 a.m. would be much nearer daybreak and 6 p.m. much nearer sundown than at present. Against this measure I cannot find any argument.

Will Try to Get Railway in Line.

"The reasons for the city reverting back to standard time are as follows:—This is a C.P.R. town. The C.P.R. could not see its way clear to change its time. Keepers of boarding houses, etc., would have men coming to meals by fast time and others coming by slow time; perhaps in a private family the same conditions would occur. The Board of Trade has taken the matter up with the C.P.R. and I hope that next season all will be working by fast time."

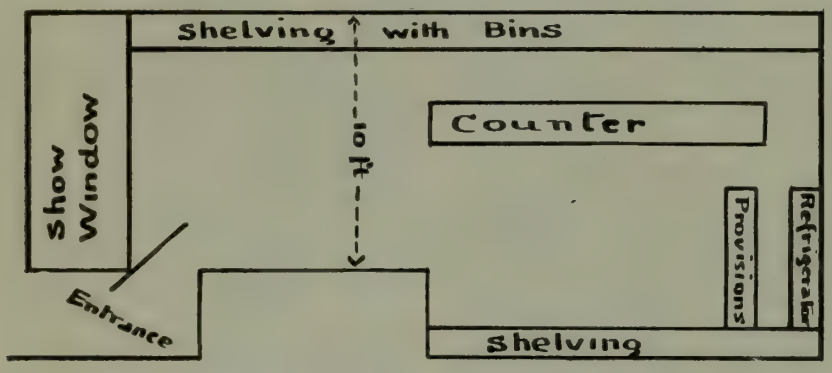
Value of Good Location Demonstrated

Business Increased 50 Per Cent. in Four Months by Change to Better Location —Must Have Goods Where People Can See Them—Ideal Arrangement of Extremely Narrow Store.

"Get a location where people pass. Then put the goods where they can see them."

This is one of the business mottoes of F. A. MacDonald, one of the younger grocers of Galt, Ont. The value of a good location as a factor in getting trade is a question of a great deal of importance. Location can to a large extent make or break a business or at least prove an important factor in it, as is demonstrated in the case of Mr. MacDonald.

He formerly had a store farther up the street where the number of people who passed was much more limited than where he is now. He realized that he was working under a disadvantage in this respect and decided to make a change, so four months ago he moved into his present place of business where the traffic is much brisker.



Arrangement bordering on ideal for so small a store. It is that of F. A. MacDonald, Galt, Ont., and is only 10 ft. wide in one section.

Business Increased 50 Per Cent.

To substantiate his motto and demonstrate that his move was a wise one, it might be mentioned that his business has increased 50 per cent. since the change. This is shown in the sales figures for last month as compared with five months ago.

"You have to have the people pass the store if you want to sell the goods," says Mr. MacDonald. "Now, in my old location I had two show windows but the two combined did not attract as much business as the one I have now for the simple reason that fewer people passed the store.

"I consider the window one of my biggest assets," he asserts, "and hold it responsible to a large extent for the increase my business has shown in the past few months.

"I show seasonable goods in the window—such goods as will appeal to a person's palate and attract them within. When I get them inside, not only do I sell them the goods that were in the window, but try to make sales of other lines as well."

The arrangement of Mr. MacDonald's store, as well as the business that is done, shows just what is possible even under decided handicaps in regard to size and layout of the store. When a person considers that the window, as well as the store itself at the front is only 10 feet wide, especially those who have had anything to do with fitting up a small store will realize what a handicap Mr. MacDonald has been working under. An arrangement bordering on the ideal for the size has been made.

The entrance is from the side just at the rear of the window. At this point the store is only 10 feet wide and there is no counter at this section and only a shelf on one side, for the folly of crowding is recognized. About ten feet back from the entrance, the store widens to 13 feet. Here, there are shelves on both sides and a counter on one side.

In spite of its smallness, there is something outstanding about the store that attracts the eye. Usually a small store is overshadowed but not so here. The window seems to possess a special attractive appearance. The inside of the window is painted white, the ceiling sloping slightly downward and reflecting the light. Plenty of light is provided at night. The background is a fence effect, only about a foot high, but giving a rather artistic setting to the window.

Mr. MacDonald has worked out some ideas of his own in the arrangement of the store. The shelves present a nice appearance being neatly finished. Under the ledge at the front part of the store are open bins in which oranges, lemons and similar articles are shown. Farther back there are closed tilting bins to hold such articles as sugar, cornmeal, rolled oats, etc. Spice drawers are also part of the fittings, while there are also some glass front bins, more of which will shortly be added. At intervals, along the ledge are small sliding platforms which may be pulled out, on which to place a bag when it is being filled or for other similar work. The appearance of the shelves is well maintained in the arrangement of the goods.

Across the rear of the store is a special counter for provisions, flanked by a display refrigerator. Special attention to this department is found profitable as well as a good method of attracting customers to the store.

CHANGE IN COUNT ADVOCATED.

Editor Canadian Grocer,—May I crave space to put before your readers a proposition that has been in my mind for a long time. That is, would it not be a great convenience to retailers if all goods, such as tinned fish, jams, and bottled productions were packed in boxes containing 50 and 25 instead of 48 and 24 as at present. The first objection most likely would be the awkwardness of the boxes, but a little counting would show that the boxes would not be of much different size, there would be five rows of five tins two deep instead of six rows of four tins two deep. For purposes of calculation this system would undoubtedly be of great advantage, the price per 100 being the price per 10 less one nought; also the price per unit less another nought, certainly a much easier process than dividing by 12 from gross to dozen and by another 12 to unit.

"I would suggest the word "dec" or "des" be the name of the standard and I believe if once started the custom would soon become general. Several things are already packed in 100's, viz., soap, cigars and several kinds of tobacco. We never have any trouble regarding the count of them.

Someone must make a start. Who will it be? Answer awaited.

FRUIT TROUBLES IN B.C.

Farmers Claim They are Not Being Paid Well Enough.

Vancouver, Oct. 30—(Special).—The cry raised by farmers recently that Vancouver and the Pacific Coast in general discriminates against fruit of the Kootenay and Okanagan has been heard by local fruit dealers who deny the general charge laid. They say that prices are lower than a year ago, owing to the abundant crops, and that the farmers in disappointment at failure to make large profits expected are blaming the middlemen. Retailers, with few exceptions, agree with the wholesalers that the farmers have little to complain of.

A representative of Robinson, Morse & Co., fruit brokers, declared that the managers of the two farmers' exchanges in this province admitted to him that the Water street wholesalers are not at fault and that they could not pay the prices demanded by the farmers.

"Okanagan Valley will some day supply the Vancouver market and drive out foreign fruit," he said. "Up to date, however, the farmers have been spoiled with too much prosperity and have been getting fabulous prices for their fruit. This they have got to give up, because Vancouver dealers cannot pay fifteen or twenty cents extra merely to favor the Canadian producer. This is business. Wholesalers must buy as well as they can or also be driven out.

"As to Calgary treating the farmers better than Vancouver does, it is not true. I know of cases where carloads of apples were shipped to Calgary from this province and when the freight charges and other expenses were paid there was practically nothing for the farmer.

"The farmers' exchanges this year are packing their stuff 25 per cent. better than they did last. Further improvement in packing and grading together with more moderate price will crowd foreign goods out."

First Shipment of Dates Sold Well—Quality is Good—Preliminary Estimates of Sugar Crop are Large—October Business in Sugar Was Extensive — Canned Goods Now Going Out.

QUEBEC MARKETS.

POINTERS:—

Dates.—New shipment in and prices advance slightly.

Spices.—Whole ginger up somewhat.

Nuts.—Almonds down two cents.

Montreal, Oct. 31.—Few price changes are noted this week, yet indications are that in dried fruits some considerable changes will be made before long. The trouble in Europe seems to make this inevitable.

Generally the market is quiet this week, the holiday having something to do with this.

SUGAR.—Europe, it appears, has a huge crop to market and the word is that sugar will be gladly sent here at concessions. This seems to mean that there will be a gradually declining market. The condition of affairs will almost surely be steady until the new year. Then the new Cuban crop will be ready, and it is likely to cause a break in prices.

DRIED FRUITS.—Prunes still are scarce but the trouble in Europe, and the influence it may have upon the market, is causing the greatest interest. Currants, Sultanas and figs are almost certain, it is thought, to be affected. All these come from the districts where the war is being waged, and the scarcity of labor, caused by men being drafted for the armies, will interfere with the crops and with shipments. There will not be a scarcity for some little time, since the supply is now good, and since further shipments are on the way, but the impression is that not much trust can be put in future shipments. Even should these be sent the packing will not likely be up to the standard as the work will, of necessity, be hurriedly done.

Figs are already a little scarce. The impression is that there is to be a dearth of these.

New dates arrived last week, and as a result prices have been advanced, though very slightly. No further fresh supply is expected for perhaps a month or five weeks.

WHITE BEANS.—White beans have advanced 15 cents per bushel, the quotation now being $3.15. Advance has been rendered necessary through lack of supply. Farmers for some reason or other are holding back their supply. If they do this much longer, some dealers hint that they may be the losers as beans will shortly be coming through from Europe and prices will naturally tend to easiness.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Dates.—First shipment sold well.

Pecans.—Quoted at 18 to 20c.

Sugar—Undertone still easy.

Toronto, Oct. 31.—October business in general groceries was quite satisfactory according to the reports of most houses. Trade was pretty well distributed over the whole list of goods which are in demand at this season of the year. There has been a good deal of shipping of canned goods of late. Now that many new lines of the new season's dried fruits are in, shipping of winter requirements beyond the lakes is taking on greater activity.

The preliminary estimates of the sugar production for 1912-13 give promise of continued undertone of easiness. Buying of course at the present time is on a hand to mouth basis. Demand for this line has kept up wonderfully well during the past month, probably on account of preserving fruits having held on later than usual this year. The sales of some local firms for the past month show a substantial increase over October of last year. Indeed, business during the whole year has been on a good scale, and the year is expected to show a record total.

New crop dried fruits are now coming in for a greater degree of attention. First shipment of dates was well received.

SUGAR.—One of the interesting and rather important features of the week has been the preliminary estimates on raw sugar production for present year 1912-13. That of European beets is placed at 8,930,000 tons. U.S. beets at 625,000 tons and that of the coming Cuban crop at 8,961,000, making a total of 18,521,000 tons as compared with 15,882,656 tons for 1911-12. The world's yearly requirements are placed at 17,500,000 tons so that there is an excess of 1,000,000 tons according to these estimates and this would seem to indicate that low prices on sugar are ahead. However what the actual results may be are much of an uncertainty. For instance one factor estimates European crop at over 500,000 tons less than above figures. Then again the Cuban crop does not begin its outturn until January and much may happen before then. However, present indications give promise of low sugar.

As to immediate situation, opinions differ. General markets are weak. While some dealers say that U.S. refined is likely to hold steady and that Canadian refiners will in that case leave prices unchanged, there are others who feel that a decline at any time would be within the range of possibility. Buying is on a hand-to-mouth basis.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES.—A good seasonable trade is being done in corn syrups at the present time and a good winter's business is being confidently looked forward to by all dealers, both wholesale and retail. The weather is weekly becoming more conducive to demand, and dealers are taking up the line well. Molasses are also doing well.

DRIED FRUITS.—With the arrival of the new season's fruit, more interest is being shown in the several lines. New crop dates came in last week in time for the Thanksgiving trade. The quality is good and the first shipment was taken up well. The prices quoted are for the new goods. Package dates are priced at 7½ cents. New figs have also met with a good reception.

New layer raisins are in this year somewhat earlier than usual. Shipments to retailers are being made now. On account of the variation in quality on this line, it is difficult to quote prices.

First shipment of California prunes has not yet arrived, but is expected in before long. Prune values on the coast continue to ease off while raisins can by no means be said to be firm.

There is no little speculation as to the probable effect of the Balkan war on the dried fruits that come from that section of the globe. Some of the lines that might possibly be affected are currants, Smyrna figs, Sultana raisins and Bosnia and Servia prunes. It will also have a tendency to affect all shipments from the Mediterranean. However, importers say that it will have no effect on our Christmas supplies, as the requirements up to that time have practically all been shipped.

TEA.—Cables received in Toronto in regard to this week's tea auctions indicate no marked alteration in the general situation. Prices have already reached a high point and further advances are hardly expected, nor would they be by any means welcome.

Toronto tea shippers state that there is little or no shipping beyond the Great Lakes before the close of navigation in order to get the lower freight rate. One tea man stated that it would be false economy to try to save in this way, as tea deteriorates with age, and that it does not pay to stock up for any great time in advance.

COFFEE.—There is really no change in local coffee situation. The same steady tone prevails in the market and demand continues along regular lines.

There still continues to be fluctuations on general markets of world but everywhere there seems to be an undertone of steadiness which would seem to indicate that there is no cheap coffee in sight.

change in celery seed situation. There is not much call for this line locally now that pickling season is over.

NUTS.—Some advance shipments of new shelled walnuts are expected around first of November. Almonds and filberts in the shell will not be in for two or three weeks yet, while it will be late in November before walnuts come in. They are always late. Opening prices on most lines will be much the same as last year. Almonds in the shell are somewhat higher.

There was quite an improved demand for nuts for the Thanksgiving and Hallowe'en trade. Pecans are scarce and are quoted as high as 20 cents per pound. Canadian chestnuts are selling at $2.25 to $2.50 per peck, while the Italian large variety are worth 12½ cents per pound.

CANNED GOODS.

Toronto. — It was first understood that the pack of tomatoes by the Dominion Canners would allow of a 60 per cent. delivery this year, but they state to The Grocer that it will only be possible to deliver 50 per cent. on their own pack, and that they will have to go outside of their own factories for the balance to make up the guaranteed 60 per cent. Last year the delivery was 40 per cent.

In keeping with the good crop of apples this year, the canned article is lower than last year's opening figures. Standards in 3's opened at $1 as compared with $1.10 last year, and gallons at $2.55 as against $3.05 last season.

There is a great deal of activity in canned goods at the present time from the standpoint of shipping, but as far as new business is concerned, there is not much doing, as most dealers with the goods which they have already ordered and which are now coming in, will have enough to keep them going for a considerable time.

As announced before, there has been quite a quantity of Alaska red salmon brought to this market. Alaska sockeye is quoted from $2.25 to $2.35 per dozen in 1 lb. talls.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Sugar.—Weak.

New Pumpkin.—Prices out.

Winnipeg, Oct. 31.—Wholesale trade is reported in a satisfactory condition. Threshing is near completion and the crop is moving out with remarkable activity. Grain inspections have for some time averaged 1,200 cars a day and general quality of grain is good. Collections are slowly improving and amount of cash trade is considered as satisfactory.

Fall orders for canned goods have occupied attention of wholesalers since new pack came on market. Pumpkins are now in and 3's are quoted at $2.10 to $2.15 per case.

Sugar market is still weak and a further drop in quotations is generally anticipated.

There are no price changes to note this week. Except as indicated, all lines appear to be on a fairly firm basis.

Thanksgiving trade of retailers has been quite up to expectations, but supply of poultry has not been up to demand.

SUGAR.—Sugar is undoubtedly weak and though the price is now lower than it has been for some time indications are for still further reductions. There is a first-class demand for this commodity and consumption has fallen little with close of preserving season.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, Oct. 30.—Business is brisk in local grocery market, and turnover of goods is large. Collections on the whole are considered quite satisfactory. Sales of flour are heavy. Manitoba patents are quoted at $6.65 to $6.70 and Ontario blends from $5.75 to $5.85. Rolled oats (barrels) are quoted at $5.75, and in bags $2.70. Corn meal is $1.50 to $1.85. There is an excellent demand for beans. Prime are $3.00 and hand picked $3.10.

While there is not much demand for canned goods at present condition of market continues to attract attention. In many cases orders have been only half filled and prices of most of leading lines have been advanced about 30 per cent. over last season's quotations.

There is practically no change in egg situation. Butter is in heavy demand. Good creamery stock is quoted at 30 cents, and dairy in large tubs at 25 to 26 cents. The stock of butter is light for season of year.

The apple business continues brisk, with heavy shipments to London and Liverpool.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, Oct. 30.—The latest product on local market is the German sauerkraut which is being retailed at ten cents a pound. Sauerkraut has gained in popularity on the Pacific Coast and there is now a great demand for it.

Grocers here are getting used to the expression "What! eggs gone up again." Ranch eggs are being retailed from 40 to 45 cents a dozen; local new laid eggs from 60 to 80 cents, and Manitoba and Oregon eggs from 35 to 40 cents. J. R. Terry, provincial poultry inspector, has expressed the opinion that there will be a great shortage of eggs on the British Columbia market this year and he would not be surprised to see price soar to $1 a dozen. Other authorities also believe that Klondike prices will reign in Vancouver this winter.

In meat and poultry line ham is selling at 18, 22 and 30 cents a pound; bacon at 20, 25 and 30; pork, dressed, at 25; chickens at 25 and 35; chickens, milk fed, 35 and 40; broilers, each 75, 80 and 85; pigeons, dressed, a pair, $1; squabs, a pair, $1; ducks, 28 and 35; wild ducks, brace, 90 cents and $1.40; turkeys, 28 and 35; bear, 10 cents and 25.

Potatoes, new, are at 70 to 90 cents per bushel. Butter, local creamery, 40; Eastern, 34 and 37; local dairy, 36 to 40.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, Oct. 30. — Markets during past week have presented signs of increased strength for most part, particularly as regards provisions. There is strong belief among local dealers that there will be no reductions in provisions before opening of New Year at least. Beef and pork are hard to get except at higher prices than have been prevailing, and advices received locally are to effect that though fall killings may be in progress they are not expected to have much effect on the present market.

Sugar is still in easier tone, and prospects are there will be no changes towards higher quotings for some time.. Molasses as predicted early last spring is still firm, as stocks are pretty well cleaned out, and there is little if any Barbadoes to be had. Fortunately, most local grocers stored some months ago, and they are quite well supplied.

Condition of the flour market is of course still of interest and is being watched closely. As spoken of last week

Spot Manitoba Flour in Short Supply

Particularly in Eastern Canada—One Reason for Delay in Price Change—Manitoba Flour in Demand in Place of Winter Wheat—Bakers are Booking Future Requirements.

There is by no means any overplus of spot Manitoba flour. This is particularly true in Eastern Canada and it is probable that this scarcity of nearby flour has had much to do with delaying the change in prices that was anticipated in keeping with values on new crop Manitoba flour.

"You can get concessions on future contract business," said one man this week, "but when it comes to buying for immediate delivery you have to pay the top price."

One reason for present scarcity of Manitoba flour is the good demand and there is also a cause for the good demand. Winter wheat flour which has been used to no little extent by bakers in past year on account of its lower price is not receiving the same attention this year, Manitoba patents being taken in its place. This is because winter wheat flour is about on same level with Manitoba while the latter is considered to be preferable for baking.

Eastern Canada prices have not followed in the direction of the western trend. One reason for this is given above. The Balkan trouble is also given as a reason why a change should be withheld until it is seen what final bearing the war cloud has on grain and its products.

Bakers are at present doing considerable booking for future goods, but by no means at the figures which are generally quoted to-day. Indeed there are reports of some substantial reductions over present prices for future business with bakers.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR.—The market is unchanged. It is not likely, moreover, that there will be any change for two or three weeks, when a lower figure may be struck. Not until the December grain commences to arrive will a reversion seem necessary.

TORONTO.

FLOUR. — There has been no announcement of any change in flour prices as yet. As pointed out last week there is a scarcity of nearby flour, many mills are behind with orders and thus the holding back in making any change in prices, although concessions are being made on future contract business.

One of the reasons for the greater demand for Manitoba flour is that it is being used where winter wheat flour generally is in other years. It seems as if Manitoba would be below Ontario patents. This week No. 1 Manitoba wheat at bay ports is quoted at 96c, while No. 2 Ontario is 98 cents at country points.

CEREALS.—Little relief has been accorded to acute situation in rolled oats but supplies should shortly be in better shape as new oats come to hand for milling purposes. There has been a shortage in both package and bulk but particularly the latter.

Consumptive demand for cereals is on quite an appreciable scale, being stimulated by more favorable weather.

CANADIAN SUGAR BEET ESTIMATE.

There is said to be 12,450 acres of sugar beets in good stand in Canada this year, which it is estimated will yield 10,000 tons of sugar of 2,240 pounds each, providing weather conditions continue favorable. Conditions in general are not altogether satisfactory and only a fair crop is expected. Last year there were 12,000 acres in good stand and the actual yield of sugar was 9,554 tons of 2,240 pounds.

A PAPER WITH A REPUTATION.

The MacLean Pub. Co.—Will you kindly send me the Canadian Grocer for one year, starting with Oct. 11th number?

I am about to go into the grocery business on Gerrard St., near Greenwoods Ave., and I want to start right in getting the Canadian Grocer.

Yours very truly,

New Crop Sicily Lemons have Arrived

Further Shipments During Coming Weeks Will Bring More Reasonable Prices—Grapefruit Although of Excellent Appearance Lacking in Quality—Almeria Grapes Selling.

New crop Sicily lemons have made their debut on Canadian markets, the first shipments coming in this week. They are the earliest variety of the new crop and do not generally come to this country but Canada has been favored with them this year. The dealer knows all too well that lemons have been particularly high for some time now on account of small supplies held and arrival of new crop has been awaited in anticipation of the lower prices which would follow. The advance shipments being of a particularly fine variety are being held at about same figure as old stock, but larger shipments will be along next week and the week following and prices will gradually react to a more reasonable level than they have held of late.

New crop Florida grapefruit has now been on the market for three weeks and has been reported as good. This truly applies to its appearance which is excellent but it is said that the quality of the meat is by no means all to be desired on account of having been shipped before fully matured. As a result, this line has not met with the reception which would have been accorded it if the quality had been right and such as to bring repeat business from consumers. It is unfortunate that the fruit should not have been held until in proper condition before shipping, as poor quality goods at the beginning of the season will prove detrimental to demand during whole season. There is a large crop this year and prospects for a promising trade if the public do not become prejudiced against it.

Fancy lines of fruits and vegetables were benefitted to a considerable extent by reason of the Thanksgiving and Hallowe'en trade. Many delicacies and specialties were featured with good results on both occasions.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS.—Despite the holiday a large auction was held here on Monday, several thousand barrels of apples being sold. This fruit, while exceedingly plentiful is of unusually high order. This enables the price to be kept up. Grapes are beginning to fall off, the season now nearing its end. No price changes have been struck.

GREEN FRUITS. — Home grown fruits are becoming less of a feature. Only belated shipments of peaches are now coming in. Grapes are beginning to dwindle. Some of the fruit firms will betake themselves to their usual winter quarters on Saturday.

The first car of new lemons arrived on Wednesday. They are quoted around $6.50 per case. More will be along in a week. While new Florida grapefruit looks nice, it is said to be somewhat deficient in quality as yet.

Winter keeping Almeria grapes are now beginning to arrive. California is sending Tokay grapes and England the hot house article. There are some Porto Rico pineapples in 24's and 30's offered at $5. More interest is being shown in apples of late.

VEGETABLES.—Fancy lines of vegetables moved more freely around Thanksgiving and Hallowe'en. Some California celery is coming in at $4 per crate of 6½, 7 and 7½ dozen. Among some of the fancy lines being offered this week are head lettuce at $1 per doz., hot house cucumbers at $1.40 per dozen; hot house tomatoes at 25c per pound; mushrooms at 60c per lb., and Brussel sprouts at 22c per quart. Quite a fair trade is being done in these lines.

There is still a great deal of uncertainty regarding the future of potatoes. Reports from different sections of the country vary to such a degree that it is difficult to size up situation. Shipments coming along now show some improvement but this may be the result of shippers realizing that it is of no use sending along impaired stock.

Sweet potatoes are quoted slightly lower. There is a fair demand.

FRUITS.—There are but few changes in green fruits and vegetables. In the case of Ontario fruit, the car shortage is still affecting receipts of apples. Frost in Ontario has practically put an end to the grape shipments. Potatoes are a little stiffer. Imported celery is taking place of home grown.

Method Used in the Canning of Salmon

Processes That the Sockeye Passes Through Before It Rests in the Tins Ready for Market—Oriental and Indian Labor Almost Exclusively Used—Short Weight Tins Picked Out by Machinery.

Every grocer sells canned salmon even if the price is much higher than a few years ago. He should therefore be acquainted with the modus operandi in the canning of salmon to be able to talk intelligently on the subject should the occasion arise. Few of us have had the opportunity to travel to the Pacific Coast and watch these operations, so that the information herewith should be of service to many.

Oriental Labor Predominates.

In the first place little white help is employed at the several canneries, the industry being almost exclusively in the hands of Orientals and Indians from the catching of the fish until they are prepared for shipment. Siwashes and Chinese are the principal workers employed in the cannery proper, the Japanese preferring the more remunerative occupation of fishing, of which they are fast obtaining an absolute monopoly.

When the boats arrive at the cannery the fish are loaded by elevators or lift and conveyed into an iron chink, where the heads, tails, fins and entrails are removed by machinery. From there the remaining portion of the salmon is sent along moving belts where the Indian women thoroughly wash them in both salt and fresh water. They are next conveyed to revolving knives, which cut the fish into convenient portions for packing into the cans. The cans, minus a lid, come down by shoots from the store room, being conveyed to salting tables, each receiving a certain portion of salt.

Under Weight Cans Rejected.

The cans are then wheeled in trucks to the Indian women who proceed to fill them from a supply obtained at the revolving knife. The cans thus filled with the delicious fish are put through a hot water washing machine, where they are thoroughly cleaned, passing thence to the weighing machine, which rejects automatically the cans that have not the required weight. Lids are then put on by a machine with automatic pressure after which they are passed through a soldering machine which secures the cover. From here they are put through a cooling off process, after which they are again placed in hot water tanks to test the tightness of the cans, for should there be a leak it will at once be detected, as the air will be forced out by the hot water.

Now comes the first cooking. They are conveyed to a steam retort in which for 30 minutes they are subjected to 212 degrees of boiling heat. The cans are then tapped or vented for the purpose of allowing the air to escape, after which the aperture is again soldered. Another cooking is then given them, this time at a temperature of 240 degrees, the time being one hour. The cans are once again washed, this time being thoroughly cleaned with water and caustic soda of lye.

They are now ready for the packing room, where they are lacquered and labeled and put into cases. It is only then that they are taken out of the hands of the Oriental and Indian, and the white man takes charge of them. In labeling cans the Chinamen have become such experts that on piece work, by the case, one can earn more than three white men.

Centre Display Table that Sells Goods

New Arrangement Down Centre of Store to Catch the Eye of the Inside Customer—Made Good from the Beginning — Sold Large Quantity of Jam.

Toronto, Oct. 30.—Many a little improvement in the manner of showing goods can be brought into use in the grocery store that will materially assist in sales. Many merchants have found this to be true. Frequently there is some expense attached to the improvement but it really cannot be classed as an expense if results are large enough to really justify it. It is then turned into an investment.

Wm. C. Miller, Yonge St., Toronto, is one of those who has found that such improvements frequently pay for themselves in a short time. Until a short time ago, he had a display stand at one side of his store built out of boxes and covered with paper. It served the purpose of showing goods but not to the extent that he thought it was possible to do.

For one thing it was not high enough and the goods shown did not stand out as prominently as they should. It also prevented access to the shelves behind it.

Used a Narrow Table.

To remedy these faults, he had a narrow table about 15 feet long erected and placed down the centre of the store. It is three feet high and shows the goods up well and allows other goods such as oranges, lemons, etc., to be shown in cases underneath. It is narrow and allows plenty of room for passage on either side.

Although it has only been in position three weeks, Mr. Miller states that he believes it has paid for itself. Being high, the goods shown on it catch the eye of customers who are able to pick them up and examine them. Sales naturally follow.

Sold Lots of Jam.

As it was completed a shipment of five cases of a certain jam happened to come in and a good-sized display was placed on this table. That it is a good salesman is proven by the fact that only a dozen or so jars of the jam shown now remain. The display is credited with selling a goodly portion of the rest of the five cases.

The retailer catches many a "shark" at the counter. Some times it takes the law to land them safely.

When a "lobster" struts into your store, seize him immediately. Lobster is becoming a luxury, although as you know, the human variety is plentiful, but not much in demand.

Special Days Help Fish and Oysters

Two Fast Days This Week—More Activity in Oysters Around Thanksgiving and Hallowe'en—Were Featured by Many Retailers—Quality is Good.

Special days during the past week have proved beneficial to trade in both fish and oysters. Two fast days during the week are accountable for an improved demand for fish, while Thanksgiving and Hallowe'en were responsible for greater activity in oysters. Many retailers gave special prominence to this line and as a result trade showed considerable life. It shows the good results of featuring this line and this should be done from now on, as the weather will be more conducive to the handling of this line. As anticipated, the quality of oysters is showing an excellent improvement and they now compare favorably with a year ago.

QUEBEC.

MONTREAL.—Season for fresh lake fish is nearly over, and from now on trade will have to depend largely upon new frozen stock—of which, fortunately, there is good supply. The week saw no fresh halibut brought forward, but a car of fancy new frozen halibut arrived which enabled the filling of orders. Pike, whitefish, pickerel and tulibees are also plentiful and have been selling exceedingly well.

Oyster season is now in full swing. Great quantities were used at Thanksgiving, and from now on demand is sure to continue large. All quotations are for strictly fresh stock.

A number of price changes have been struck. Salmon has generally advanced, as has mackerel. Smelts, too, have been put two cents higher, while pike has dropped a cent. Extra large herring are selling this week at 3 cents. Shredded cod has been slightly advanced, while some lines of boneless are quoted a little lower.

Generally ordering is heavy. It is a fine fish season.

ONTARIO.

TORONTO.—For season of year, there is good demand for fish. Trade has got started off well and is each day developing greater activity. White fish is higher at 13 cents. There is little stock available, Lake Erie only sending along a limited quantity. Herring is also scarce while the same can be said of fresh halibut. Frozen stock of latter line will practically have to be used entirely from now on.

Thanksgiving and Hallowe'en this week have proved beneficial to oyster trade, many retailers in view of these special occasions, featuring them.

NOVA SCOTIA.

HALIFAX.—The mild autumn is compensating to large extent for rather stormy summer. All branches of seafishing are being pushed, without interruption by shore boats and bank fleets. Catches vary according to locality, but average continues to be fair for season. At present local market is well supplied with fish. During the past week several good hauls of mackerel were made at points along western shore. The fish are large and in good demand, principally from American points.

Several small catches of halibut were made during the week. Smoked fish trade continues active.

MERCHANT LOSES EVERY TIME.

The retailer stopped one of his oldest customers on the street.

"I want to speak to you," he began.

"Go ahead, and see if I care."

"You've got to care. This bill of yours has been running a long time now."

"Poor thing? How can you be so cruel as to let it run a long time?"

"Well, what are you going to do with it?"

"I'm going to make you a suggestion. If that bill has been running for as long as you say it has give it a rest. Let it stand for a month or two."

W. J. White, grocer, Fredericton, N. B., has moved from the store on Needham street, to one in the Saunders Building on York street.

Produce & Provisions

Plenty of Provisions for Thanksgiving

At Most Centres—Quality of Turkeys as Anticipated a Little Off—Butter Continues Firm—Shipments to West Have Been Large—Scarcity of New Laid Eggs —Storage Stock Being Sold.

On most markets there seems to have been a plentiful supply of poultry for the Thanksgiving trade, although prices on some lines were rather inclined to be high. Shipments were rather tardy in coming forward until the last three days of the week, when plentiful supplies began to arrive.

The volume of turkeys was quite large although quality on the whole was rather poor. This was as anticipated as the season was rather early for the birds to be well developed. Geese were also in fair supply and found a good demand. Now that Thanksgiving trade is over there is a tendency to easiness in prices of most lines.

A firm tendency still continues in butter and higher prices are being looked for at several centres. The West is proving an important factor in preventing any accumulation of stocks in the East and causing firmer feeling. Shipments from Montreal to Northwest and coast have been heavy. A large quantity of this, however, was former purchases ordered shipped by owners. Montreal has shipped about 70,000 packages of butter costing over $1,000,000 to the Northwest and British Columbia this season to date. The firms there which bought early and put the goods into store here made even better profits than in 1911.

A firm feeling is still present in eggs and particularly is this true of new laids. Season is not conducive to a good supply and storage stocks are being used to quite a large extent. Quite a number of eggs have been received in poor condition. In fact, there is a particularly heavy shrinkage reported from some centres and it is claimed that some unscrupulous dealers have been holding supplies for higher prices.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS.—The week has seen a good many changes struck in prices, most of which have been in an upward direction as the result of scarcity. The wet fall, which has been experienced, has had a good deal to do with the shortage in such lines as butter, honey and cheese. The shortage in some lines of pork may also be largely attributed to unfavorable weather which has existed.

Some porks are exceedingly scarce, notably heavy Canadian short cut and clear fat backs. Both these lines have been advanced, the former to $28, the latter to $29. Even at these prices supplies are hard to secure.

For bacon, ham and lard there continues a good demand. Though a scarcity is noted in many lines it is not predicted that there will be extensive advances. Rather the market appears to be easing off somewhat.

BUTTER.—Largely because it is so expensive to keep cattle—owing to the partial failure of so many crops—there is less butter coming forward than usual. On the other hand the demand has grown. From the West especially is a big call noted. This state of affairs has not resulted in any change in prices this week, but it seems very likely that higher figures will be struck within a fortnight. Warehouses, where last year there were thousands of pounds at this time, state that they now have only a few hundred pounds.

EGGS.—In new laid eggs there has been another advance, these now being quoted at 45c. It seems that eggs are to continue on their upward course. Enough to meet the demand are not available. The call is heavy and the supply, for some reason or another, is not as great as usual.

POULTRY.—The thanksgiving season saw heavy ordering of all fowls, though geese are still somewhat quiet. The weather is hardly cool enough to make this line move to the best advantage. Chickens, ducks and turkeys are being largely bought. The week sees no price changes.

HONEY.—Cold wet weather killed a number of the bees and for that reason there is a scarcity. But little is in stock now. Buckwheat has been advanced 2 cents during the week and it may be confidently stated that further advances will be struck within a week or ten days. It would seem a good time to order honey.

CHEESE.—Here too the cold damp weather has had an influence which is now being widely felt. But little cheese is coming forward. The factories are making their milk into butter as there appears better profit in this than in cheese. Yet, while the supply is lower, it is not thought that there will be any serious price change.

PROVISIONS. — The firmer feeling that was reported last week in live hogs, continued as the week progressed, but there has been a reaction from the highest point reached. Quotations started this week at from 8.30 to 8.40 at country points, and with a somewhat freer movement.

There is a fair trade in pork products reported this week. Steadiness prevails in most lines. A slight strengthening is noticeable in cooked hams and shoulders and some firms would quote lard slightly higher. Heavy mess pork is now quoted at $22 per barrel.

BUTTER.—The steady feeling which has characterized the butter market for some time is still present. Although there is a fair amount of stock available, shippers' ideas are firm in keeping with markets elsewhere, particularly in Montreal. With arrival of season for closing of cheese factories there may probably be a little more offering.

EGGS. — Upward and ever upward seems to be the course being pursued by eggs of late, particularly those which are termed "new laids." Prices on this variety are higher again this week, ranging from 32 to 35 and the quantity is not large. For perhaps about a month now it will not be the easiest thing to get new laid eggs. Some store eggs are going out at 29 to 30 cents, while pickled are bringing a similar figure.

Some dealers are making strenuous complaints against the quality of eggs, supposed to be fresh gathered which are coming along.

CHEESE.—There is no change in general cheese situation, prices just remaining steady. Roquefort cheese is quoted at 35c a pound, and Limburger at 18c. Dutch cheese, weighing about 4-lb. each are worth 25c lb.

POULTRY.—Poultry was an important feature last week in view of the Thanksgiving trade. There was plenty of stock with which to fill orders. Turkeys were in good supply although the quality was somewhat poor. This was as anticipated on account of the earliness of the season. There was also a plentiful supply of geese. With Thanksgiving past, there is a slightly easier feeling in poultry.

Butter Prices Higher than Year Ago

Season Has Commenced With Values Above Normal — How Market Has Ruled During Past Year—Record Figure Reached in April—No Exports This Year

Butter is high. Where is the person who is not aware of the fact? "Surely if there is such a person," says the man on the street, "he must be deaf or removed from a position where he can hear the subjects which are most discussed to-day."

"At least, he does not have a household to buy butter for," remarks the man with thirteen children sadly.

"What manner of man is this?" the oppressed grocer and depressed housewife would exclaim if such there were. "He must surely be immune from the troubles which beset the average person's life."

High for Season.

Truly, butter is high—not as high as the record point reached during the past year—but high for the season of the year and from two to three cents higher than a year ago. Here for instance are the prices ruling on the Montreal market to-day and one year ago:—

	Now	Year Ago
Creamery ...	31½	28—28½
Dairy tubs ..26—28		23—24

Thus has the season started at far from normal figures and if this can be taken as a gauge of what can be expected during the months to come, the next year will see record prices for butter, for during the past twelve months prices attained an unusually high point.

Trend of Past Year's Prices.

As a result of the extremely hot and dry weather of last year which withered up the pastures, last fall was started off with a short supply of butter. Not only was this the case in Canada but similar conditions existed in other parts of the world, so that while 1911 still had considerable time to run it was freely predicted that prices during the ensuing months would reach a record figure. This prediction proved all too true and during the first part of April the extraordinary figure of 38½ cents was reached by creamery in Montreal.

Then came the break with the inrush of the new make of butter and values slumped a full eight cents during one month.

Turning Point in July.

Midsummer proved the turning point. Although pastures were luxuriant there appeared no accumulations of stocks to bring about a weakening. It was said that, induced by the profits of the year before, speculators were buying heavily. How true this was remains to be seen. At any rate demand from Western Canada proved an important strengthening factor and prices gradually kept climbing until the pesent level was reached, which is considerable above a year ago. Here is trend of prices in Montreal during past year:—

Montreal.

	Creamery.	Dairy Tubs.
Nov. 3—11.. ..28	—28½	23—24
Dec. 8—11	32	24—27
Jan. 12—12 ...	32½	24—27
Feb. 9—12	35½	25—28
Mar. 15—12 ...	35½	28—30
Apr. 5—12	38½	30—32
Apr. 26—12....	30½	28
June 30—12 ...26	—26½	21—23
July 26—12 ...27½	—28	22—24
Aug. 30—12 ...28	—28½	25
Sept. 27—12	29½	26
Oct. 30—12	31½	26—28

No Exports This Year.

A singular point is, that although prices have been steadily climbing since early July, there has not been a single package shipped to England whereas last year there was a considerable amount.

This all goes to prove that the consumption of butter in Canada is growing at a much faster pace than the production and that Canada which a few years ago was a big exporter of butter is being turned into an importer. This has been the case during the past year. Apparently Canada needs to give more attention to dairy farming.

With the proper system of account keeping you can put an end to accounting worries and know the amount of accounts outstanding at a glance.

The ULLMAN

is the safest, simplest, quickest, surest to charge and most satisfactory of any system on the market. It satisfies the customer as well as the merchant. There is a decided advantage to the grocer who uses an Ullman Account Register. The customer knows, every time he makes a purchase, how much he owes, and naturally tries to keep it as low as possible. Put in an Ullman Account Register and stop the incessant night work and worry of retail bookkeeping.

Send for illustrated booklet or ask for demonstration.

Why Don't You do Like Him?

H. J. Buckley, of Moberly, Mo., who bought a No. 84 Kingery Corn Popper with Peanut cylinder extra for $94.00.

He writes that the machine is doing fine. I pay $40.00 per month rent and have four people employed, and machine pays rent and help.

Now to get at his profits in this little, big business, let's do a little figuring. Rent $480 per year. Four clerks at $5.00 per week each, $1,040, total $1,520, or 15 times the cost of his machine. Did you ever add anything to your business that beats it? In some cases they have earned more net profit than that of the business of the entire store. Furthermore, its attractiveness turns the eyes of passersby upon your store. Often it is the agent of sending them in. It helps the business in the store. The Kingery Peanut Roasters and Corn Poppers are of many kinds and styles—Steam, Electric, Spring and Hand Power. Ranging in price from $8.50 to $350.00. Sold on liberal instalments.

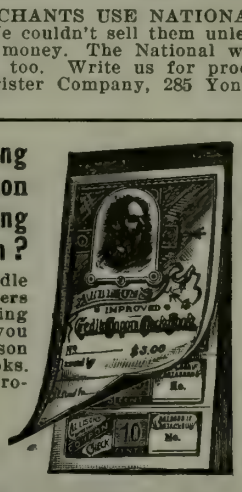
Are You Using Allison's Coupon Books, or Losing Money, Which?

You CAN'T handle credit customers WITHOUT losing money unless you DO use Allison Coupon Books. Thousands of grocers all over America find it mighty profitable to use them.



How They Work:

A man wants credit. You think he is good. Give him a $10.00 Allison Coupon Book. Have him sign the receipt or note form in the front of the book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with ten dollars—no trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten-cent coupon, and so on until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10.00 and gets another book. No pass books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes—NO LOSS OF MONEY. ALLISON COUPON BOOKS are universally recognized as the best.

For sale by the jobbing trade everywhere.

Enterprise Accuracy and Enterprise Quality are in These Coffee Mills

It is best to consider well, in buying a coffee mill for your store, whether there is character under the brilliant finish—whether the machine will do the work perfectly and continue to do it. That is what are made to do. Enterprise Mills are made under our own patents. Expert mechanics make every part. The grinding system gives absolutely uniform, perfect results. There is no crushing of the coffee, but an even grind to the fineness you want—every time.

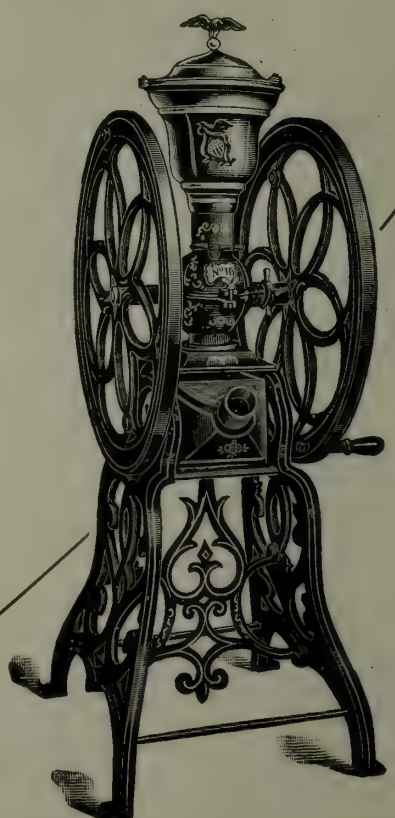
All parts interchangeable. And under our system of manufacture, there cannot be the deviation of the thousandth part of an inch. Replace a part next year—ten years from now—and it fits exactly. Strong, staunch, grinders guaranteed equal to steel do the work evenly and perfectly. New grinders can be put in your machine at low cost. The easiest running machines made. Better to be sure of good quality—service—first of all. The name Enterprise is your guarantee of both. Let us send you catalogue showing you the line of Enterprise machines—many styles in hand and electric power.



There is a maximum service in ENTERPRISE Meat and Food Choppers. The one right cutting principle — four-bladed steel knife revolving against the inner surface of a perforated steel plate. Cuts like shears.

prefer to sell a high-grade article because it stays sold—and because it means repeat orders. This is one reason why so many top-notch salesmen like to sell their customers

Codou's

Vermicelli, Macaroni, Spaghetti, Fancy Letters and Figures.

Each one is a specialty with a national reputation for high quality.

Taganrog Russian Wheat is used exclusively—the wheat that yields the BEST results—the wheat that is peculiarly adapted to the desired purpose.

There is no better factory in the world adapted solely to the production of Macaroni and similar pastes than that of Felix Codou in Marseilles, France. SELLING ARGUMENTS

There are selling arguments that are good and there are selling arguments that are better.

In reply to enquiries from the consumer, we have found that it is much more effective to quote oysters in pints, rather than quarts. In years gone by oysters were handled very differently from what they are now. The consumer feels that the price has been advanced, but the value they receive for their money at this time is greater than that which they received ten years ago; that is, they are receiving more solids or actual food properties. The family that required a quart of oysters under the methods that prevailed a few years ago, will only require a pint under the present methods, and will really obtain more satisfaction. There, of course, continues to be more or less watering of oysters, but this method is wrong, and will, as a natural result, be its own undoing. How often the consumer purchases oysters, depends entirely upon the satisfaction obtained in eating them, with the result that it is up to every dealer to put the oysters out in the best possible condition, and obtain a price that will afford his doing so. Obtain the best oysters possible, put them out in the best possible condition, and the trouble of getting a price for your stock will be pretty well taken care of.

We can supply you with the necessary quality; the rest of it is up to you. COAST SEALED oysters stand for more with Canadian trade to-day than all other brands combined.

The business of the "SEALSHIPT" Oyster System's Canadian Branch has been taken over by us. We can fill all orders promptly for "SEALSHIPT" Oysters or equipment.

PRESERVED PURITY

Purity is a strong selling point in favor of E. D. S. Jams, Jellies, Marmalades, etc.
Factory made Jams always receive the most severe criticism, and if they are not absolutely pure and come up to the high quality mark they are not wanted. The people pay good money and want good Jam. The dealer who does not handle goods of the highest quality and purity is a sure loser.
The masses appreciate E. D. S. Quality and Purity. E. D. S. products have the approval of the Government inspector for purity.

Why Red Rose Wins

Chiefly, because so many merchants seem to appreciate the quality and true value of Red Rose Tea more than they ever have before—seem to realize that the quality of a pound of tea depends on the price they pay almost as much as the quality of butter or flour depends on the price, and they feel safe in recommending a tea that has made good.

This is, of course, as it should be. In quality — real value — is where Red Rose always wins. Nothing but quality will stand the rude jolts of unfavorable market conditions and unfair or reckless competition.

Suggestion for an early Christmas Baking Material Display. This was shown last year by Bruce and Sanderson, of Toronto.

Catching Eye of "Looking Around" People

One of the Functions of the Early Christmas Baking Material Window—An Attractive Dried Fruit, Extract and Nut Window That Could be Used to Advantage With Arrival of First New Season's Goods—Addition of Couple of Display Cards Helpful.

"We are just looking around."

How frequently is such a statement heard in the retail store! People come in to look around. They do not purchase everything they see, but sooner or later such "lookers" draw forth their pocket books to buy something observed.

Herein lies a suggestion for the grocer. Show just as many goods that will stand showing, as possible, and show them in a manner that they will sell themselves.

New Goods Should be Shown.

With the autumn season, nearing an end, people are looking forward to Christmas and as soon as Christmas goods arrive they should be displayed. The window is the place where they will be looked at and if the importance of buying early is clearly emphasized, goodly quantities will be sold.

The above display should be made a splendid early seller of Christmas baking material. It was one shown by Bruce & Sanderson, Parliament street, Toronto, last year and as may be judged from the appearance, sold considerable goods. In the background are some tissue paper decorations neatly draped about the chandelier. Below these are boxes of figs and prunes on end so that the fruit faces the front. Arranged among these are packages of seeded raisins, bottles of flavoring extracts and of strawberry jam. Flavoring extracts, too, may be seen hung with string from the ceiling.

The orderly arrangements of fruits peels, and nuts on the floor of the window should be closely observed. To the front next the glass is a row of bottled preserved fruit on top of which has been placed a line of package raisins, end to end. The window is flanked on either side by rows of apples. On the floor towards the front is a pile of shelled walnuts in the centre, and a pyramid of shelled almonds to the right and left. These nuts are joined together by a spreading of currants, the display being dotted here and there with bottles of flavoring extract and nutmeg.

The rear half of the floor shows icing sugar in packages, piles of peel, and flavoring extracts on a floor of raisins. Liberal use has been made of price tickets as Bruce & Sanderson are firm believers in their value.

Introduce Some Show Cards.

Retail grocers could easily make such a window as the above quite profitable just as soon as the new dried fruits come in. By the addition of a couple of show cards bearing inscriptions such as "Season's First Dried Fruits," and "Always best for the Christmas Baking," the bulk of the best trade could be sold.

The experiment is worth while attempting. The "just looking around" people will frequently succumb to the selling power of such a display.

Ontario R.G.A. to Petition Governments

Federal Legislators Will be Asked to Change Weights and Measures Law and Sir James the Law Respecting Garnishment of Wages—Petitions Already Drawn Up and Signed by Many—New Members Added From Steelton, Sault Ste Marie and Ingersoll, Among Them Being Two Women.

The autumn work of the Ontario Retail Grocers' Association is proceeding in a favorable maner. In addition, to adding many new names to the membership list of the provincial body, things are gradually being got into shape to bring about several of the desired objects of the association. Secretary Wm. C .Miller, of Toronto, reports he is receiving splendid encouragement from the several sections of the province and preparations are now being made to descend upon both the Dominion and Provincial legislators with their demands for amendments, to some of the laws affecting the trade which are at present considered unfair.

An Amendment Long Sought.

One of the important aims at the present time is to secure an amendment to the Scale Inspection Act, which is considered a gross injustice to the merchant. The association claims that since scale inspection is in the interests of the general public, like other similar inspections, it should be paid for by the government. At present, the grocer has to pay it, whether his scales prove to be correct or not. As the Dominion House opens on Nov. 21, this matter is being rapidly pushed forward. The London and Ingersoll associations have already signed a petition to the Government and other towns and cities are now doing so. These will all be forwarded to the secretary of the Ontario association who will combine them and send them on to the House of Commons.

Here is a copy of the petition re the Scale Inspection Act that is being signed by several of the associations:—

To The Right Honorable R. L. Borden,
Premier of the Dominion of Canada,
And the other members of the House of Commons.

"We, the undersigned merchants of the city of ( ), hereby humbly and respectfully petition your honorable body for the amendment of the Weights and Measures Act, R.S.C., Chapter 52, Sections 54 and 56, and the regulations passed by the Governor-in-Council under said Act, in order that the fees now payable to the inspector by the merchants whose weights and measures are inspected, shall henceforth be borne by the Government, inasmuch as the inspection is for the protection of the public, and not the merchants; and in most instances the weights and measures are found to be standard, and in general the payment of the fee becomes a hardship to the merchant."

Petition Re Garnishee Law.

Another desired amendment that is rapidly taking head is that to the Garnishee Law, an Ontario enactment which is considered far from fair to the merchants. A petition in respect to this amendment is being signed by local associations and forwarded to Provincial Secretary Wm. C. Miller, Toronto. It is the desire of the Ontario association to get as many of these individual petitions from the associations of the different towns and cities as possible. In those towns where there are no active associations, petitions signed by as many of the merchants as possible will be welcomed as they will materially add to the strength of the association's demands when they are made to the legislative body. "Even if there should be only one merchant in a town or community," says Secretary Miller, "if he will write endorsing the amendments, it will help us."

Here is the petition re garnishment:—

To Sir James Whitney,
Premier of the Province of Ontario,
And the other members of the Legislative Assembly.

"We, the undersigned merchants of the city of ( ), humbly and respectfully petition your honorable body for the amendment of section 146 of the Division Court Chapter 32-10, Edward VII. and section 7, sub-section 1 and 2 of the Wages Act, chapter 72-10, Edward VII., in order that debts due by mechanics, workmen, laborers, servants, clerks or employes for, or in respect of their wages, may be seized, garnisheed, or attached all over the sum of ten dollars, instead of twenty-five, as the said sections now read.

"Under the present state of the law your petitioners are practically deprived of the value of the process of garnishment, as wages are in nearly almost all cases paid weekly, leaving no excess to which recourse can be had."

Not only are the desired amendments to both the Weights and Measures Act and the Garnishee Law of interest to the grocers but to all classes of merchant, no matter what lines they may be selling, and in signing the petition, the names of many others besides grocers may be secured.

Women Joining the Association.

Different towns in Ontario, according to advices from the secretary, are gradually giving their support to the Ontario Association. C. O. Weldon, secretary of the Steelton, Ont. Grocers' Association this week forwarded the membership fees for nine of the local grocers. They are Lash & Co., G. J. Saunders, A. E. Wade, Jno. Muncaster, A. Brouillard, W. A. Stonehouse, of Steelton, and Mrs. M. A. Barry, Miss E. A. Quigley and R. McMeeking, of Soo Ste Marie West. Among the names will be found those of two women, the first feminine members to send in their fees to the Ontario body.

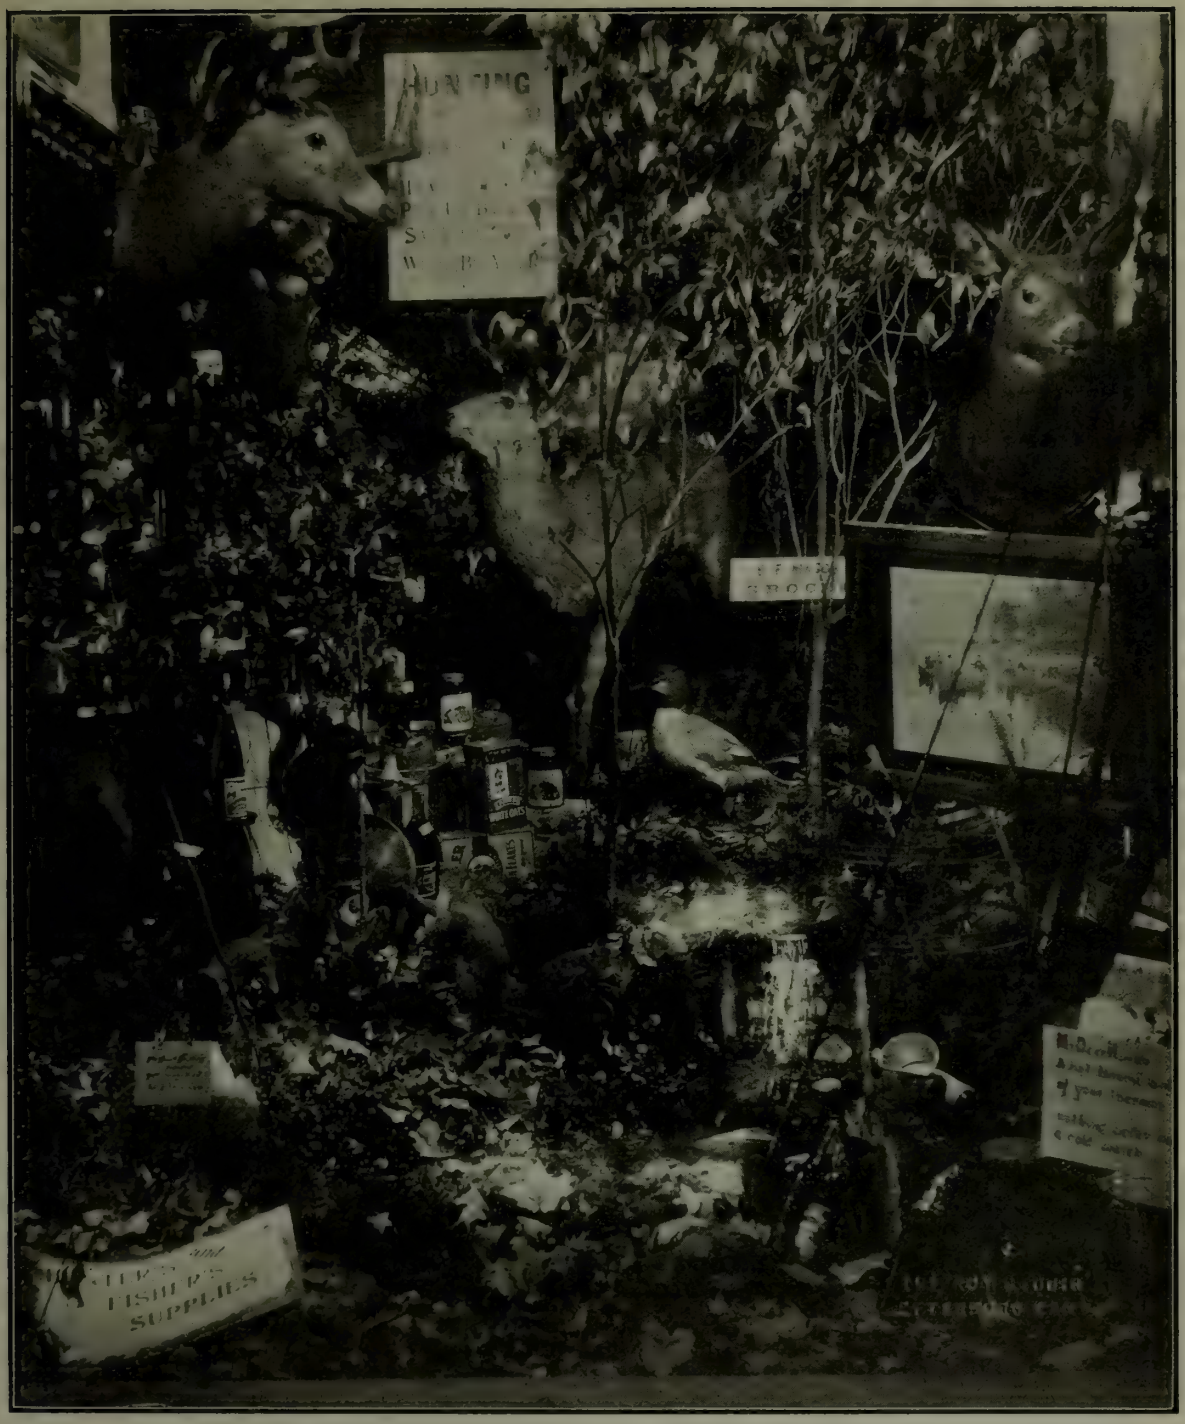
Jno. Scott, of Woodstock, a member of the executive and President John Diprose of the London association recently visited Ingersoll and although there is no active organization there, they succeeded in enlisting the following grocers:—McLeod & McBain, McDougall & Son, W. J. Hogarth, A. J. Dyer, Buchanan Bros., S. M. Fleet, C. H. Crawford, R Stuart, M Tanner.

A considerable number of new memers are expected before the end of the year.

THE GROCER'S CHRISTMAS CONTESTS.

Place your Christmas window display in The Canadian Grocer's contest. Last year $20 were distributed among the winners and this year a similar amount has been set aside. Cities and towns over 10,000 population are placed in class 1 and all centres under that population in class 2, so that all stores have a fighting chance to win a prize. Winners in each case receive $5, $3 and $2 respectively. Apart from securing a prize, the window trimmer who decides now to compete is going to be greatly helped in his work of dressing windows. He will have a better display because he will plan ahead and will continually be on the look out for new ideas. If the dealer himself does not attend to the dressing of the window, let him suggest to his clerk at once that he enter the race. The contest closes on December 31, on or before which date all photographs should be mailed to The Grocer. The only conditions are that the window be dressed by the dealer or one or more of his clerks and that Christmas goods be used. Any number of windows can be submitted.

There is also a newspaper advertisment competition. When the Christmas ad. has appeared in the newspaper clip it out and send it along. If several appear, send them all and the best one will be used by the judges. The first prize in this contest is $3 and the second $2. Make your decision to enter now.



AN ELABORATE WINDOW DISPLAY

The above hunting window was shown by E. F. Mason, a Peterborough, Ont., grocer. It is dressed well back into the store, about twelve feet from glass, with a gradual slope upwards and with a background of evergreens, in front of which stands a large deer looking through the underbrush of trees on one side. To the front are the hunter's grocery supplies and cooking utensils, and to the right a small pool of running water which flows down the incline and over a small fall to a larger pool eight inches deep, six feet long and two and a half wide with stone and gravel bottom. Around the banks or edges of water are moss-covered stones and autumn leaves. The tufts of grass anl logs. This all tended to make a realistic scene and easily attracted the eyes of all passersby and not merely the hunter.

On one old log stand two rifles and two fishing rods leaning toward corner of window. In front of the log is a large bottle of a meat extract and a Thermos bottle with a sign which reads "Mr. Deer-Hunter—A hot drink out of your thermos. Nothing better on a cold watch." Some ducks, and grey and black squirrels are also in the window, with several mounted deer heads higher up. Three large photos of different hunting parties are seen.

This window certainly attracted a great deal of attention and sold considerable goods. This is a display that might well be placed on file by every window trimmer for suggestions another year.

LOWER FLOUR PRICES.

Prices on Manitoba flour have been reduced 20 cents per barrel in Eastern Canada this week. There has now been a general reduction all over Canada, in keeping with values on new crop wheat, but the amount of the reduction has not been same in all sections.

Three weeks ago, prices in the West were lowered, some mills going down 30 cents per barrel and others 50 cents. Since then a reduction of 50 cents per barrel from former prices has become about general.

Prices in Eastern Canada were expected to drop some time ago, but the Balkan trouble gave cause for delay as it was argued that there was no use in reducing prices until the outlook became more definite. This week, a decline of 20 cents per barrel was announced.

A larger reduction than this was anticipated in some quarters. Prices in the West were lowered by more. Millers argue that the West was on a higher basis and could afford to come down. This is true to some extent, but present prices in the East are on the same level as a year ago, while those in the West are 20 cents per barrel lower.

For this reason it would seem as if Eastern prices should later see another reduction to put them on a par with Western figures. Some dealers think this quite possible.

SERIOUS ROT AMONG POTATOES.

There is bound to be a heavy loss this year from rotten potatoes in Ontario. A Grocer representative recently visited different farming communities and saw the pits and cellars where potatoes were stored, and in every case but one, he would estimate the rot at anywhere between 30 and 50 per cent. This does not include the rotten potatoes discarded when the fields were dug, as there, a great many more could be seen which had never been picked.

The cause of the rot was of course the rainy weather which was most favorable to the development of blight. From reports received practically all low lying land and even heavy high fields in Ontario have been affected. Sandy soil has been more fortunate but it was not entirely immune from the rot.

Potatoes in Ontario were one of the heaviest crops in years and to make matters worse, the big tubers are, as a general rule, the ones that have been and are being attacked. Earlier in the season rot was reported in New Brunswick stock but recently few complaints have been heard and shipments are now coming to Upper Canada.

Last year potatoes were exceedingly scarce and high and from all appearances prices this winter will again be high even in face of heavy crops. If the percentage of good potatoes is to be reduced one half, they certainly will not be as low as has been generally expected.

BACKBONE AND TACT NEEDED.

If a merchant knows he is buying inferior eggs from a country customer, but pays that person as much as if the eggs were fresh, he places himself in the same category as the dealer who slashes prices just because he thinks the man across the road will do so if he doesn't. Each of them lacks the backbone necessary to the man in business. They seldom or never attain a high degree of success because they pay too much attention to other people's business and not enough to their own.

In last week's issue a letter appeared from a Grocer reader on why stale eggs continue to be marketed. He pointed out that as long as one dealer was suspicious of what a competitor was doing or would do, just so long would the bad egg pass the sentinels and get out on to the market.

If a merchant doesn't know he is accepting inferior eggs for new laids, he should make certain that he does know by candling them. All that is required afterwards is backbone to decide to pay only for the quality received, and tact to show the farmer why he cannot be paid. full market price. When every first hand egg buyer does this, egg shrinkage will gradually disappear.

ARROWROOT PRICES AND IMPORTS.

Arrowroot is one of the latest grocery articles to show an upward move in prices. Owing to the heavy demand from England, where arrowroot is an essential to many industries, prices in the producing countries have been advanced and values in Canada have accordingly been affected.

One source of information says that the price has raised about 55 per cent., prices in St. Vincent, B.W.I., the chief country of growth, having been advanced two and three-eighths cents per pound.

Besides meaning considerable to biscuit manufacturers who use this line, that which the grocer sells is also affected.

The imports of arrowroot into Canada during the past few years have shown a substantial increase. Imports which in 1905 amounted to 30,292 had grown in 1910 to 58,710 pounds and in 1911 to 67,096 pounds.

FILING GOOD CHRISTMAS DISPLAYS.

The Grocer has recently been running a number of splendid Christmas window displays shown by retailers last year. Now that the time is again rolling around when the Christmas display of dried fruits, nuts, peels, etc., is in order those that have been shown should be taken every advantage of.

In the Fall Campaign Number several were given. Others appeared in our issues of October 25 and November 1 and still another may be seen in this issue. These have been published early to give suggestions to those who make early displays of Christmas dried fruits. Those who do not trim any Christmas goods windows now should keep them on file for reference when the time comes that they are needed.

Mere matter-of-fact displays around the festive season are of little use in creating demand. What the public want, and more so than ever to-day, is something unusual, out of the ordinary and attractive. The window that can show this is the one that gets the business. It is folly for a dealer to say that he keeps all his customers around Christmas even without any display whatever. But even should he keep them, he is not selling them what he would with an attractive, original window display.

A file, therefore, for all Christmas windows would be a profitable investment with only a few cents, if any at all, necessary to finance the deal.

NUTS COMING TO THEIR OWN.

There is no doubt that the food value of nuts is not recognized as greatly as the facts warrant. It has been asserted, on the authority of chemists, that the nutritive properties of nuts entitle them to a much higher place than they now occupy as an article of food.

It is even asserted that if all other means of nutriment were cut off, man could support life on the nut crop of the world. This statement has been made in some of the best school text-books of Europe, and it appeared in a school book recently published in this country. The rising generation seems likely, therefore, to have a higher opinion of the utility of nuts than their fathers entertained.

With these facts in view, there is no reason why the retailer cannot easily increase nut sales to double what they are in a year now. Sales, however, cannot be increased by waiting for the public to be educated to the food value of nuts. Each dealer must educate his own customers. This is the simplest and most profitable method and should soon result in nuts being used the year round in large quantities and not only at festive seasons.

WHO SOLD THE BAD POTATOES?

In large cities the rambling street-peddler is a thorn in the side of many grocers. He goes about from door to door singing out his wares and making many a sale that properly belongs to the retailers of the district. The grocery store suffers worst of all. The peddler knows that the people must eat and he is going to sell them provisions.

But if the public were acquainted with the methods adopted by many peddlers they would buy little from them. Some, of course, are honest but a great many are after the people's dollar regardless of the quality of goods delivered.

Not long ago some two or three car loads of potatoes were received in a large Canadian city which were so rapidly on the decline that few dealers would have anything to do with them. They soon fell into the hands of some street peddlers who sold them at a sacrifice from house to house. The potatoes were either diseased or badly rotten and should not have found a market anywhere.

This goes to show the unreliability of many street peddlers and it is information that the retailer can use to break customers off the habit of buying from them. If such information is communicated to customers in an off-hand manner, they will not accuse the retailer of making false pretences to secure their trade.

The retailer of course should be sure of the quality of his own goods before attempting to criticize those of the peddler.

Under the heading "Versatile Vegetable," The Optimist tells of an amusing Buffalo, N.Y., law court case wherein a judge made a unique decision. The case involved the "Sunday Store Closing Law" which permits the sale of fruits but not groceries nor vegetables. He ruled that "the tomato is a fruit when sold raw, but becomes a vegetable when it is canned." Using the same principle he would no doubt declare that a man is a gentleman when sober but an ass when "canned."

Food Standards Fixed by Government

Announcements Have Been Made Regarding Flavoring Extracts, Honey, Fruit, Canned Peas and Lard—Twenty-Five Per Cent. the Limit of Water in Honey—No Coloring Matter in Lard—Canned Peas Must be Green Except Label States Otherwise

Ottawa, Nov. 5.—The Government has announced the adoption of a number of Food Standards for Canada, including extracts, honey, fruit and fruit products, canned peas and lard.

Flavoring Extracts.

The standard set for extracts reads as follows:—

1. A flavoring extract is intended for the purpose of flavoring food, is a solution of correct strength, as hereinafter defined, of sapid and odorous principals derived from an aromatic plant or parts of a plant, with or without its natural coloring matters, and conforms in name to the plant used in its preparation.

2. The usual solvents employed in the preparation of flavoring extracts are ethyl alcohol, water and glycerine. In the event of any other solvents than ethyl alcohol, water and glycerine being used, such solvents shall be harmless to health, and their names shall be plainly stated on the label.

3. Solutions of natural or synthetic preparations such as vanillin, coumarin, benzaldehyde, methyl salicylate or other sapid and odorous compounds, more or less resembling substances found in plants, or absolutely identical with these if harmless to health, may be sold for flavoring purposes, if properly labelled so as to make it quite clear that they are not extracts as above defined; and preferably by the use of the word Artificial or Imitation.

4. If an extract be fortified or strengthened by having such natural or synthetic preparations as are referred to in the immediately preceding section added to it, the fact of such addition shall be clearly stated on the label, or the word compound or mixture shall be used to describe it.

5. Lemon Extract is the flavoring extract prepared from the lemon peel, or from oil of lemon, and contains along with more or less of the terpenes of lemon oil, not less than two-tenths (0.2) of one per cent. of citral derived from oil of lemon.

6. Terpene lemon extract is the flavoring extract, prepared as above described, and contains not less than five (5) per cent. of oil of lemon, and not less than two tenths (0.2) of one per cent. of citral, derived from oil of lemon.

7. Vanilla Extract is the flavoring extract prepared from vanilla bean with or without sugar or glycerine, and contains in 100 cubic centimetres the soluble matters from not less than five (5) grams of the vanilla bean (the dried, cured fruit of Vanilla planifolia).

The Honey Standard.

The standard of quality of honey is established as follows:—

Honey is entirely the product of the work of bees operating upon the nectar of flowers and other saccharine exudations of plants; and contains not more than twenty-five (25) per cent. of water; not more than eight (8) per cent. of sucrose (cane sugar); not more than twenty-five hundredths (0.25) of one per cent. of ash; and not less than sixty (60) per cent. of invert sugar.

Fruit and Fruit Products Defined.

1. Fruits are the clean, sound, edible, fleshy, fructifications of plants, distinguished by their sweet, acid and ethereal flavors.

2. Dried fruit is the clean, sound product made by drying matured properly prepared fresh fruit in such a way as to take up no harmful substances; and conforms in name to the fruit used in its preparation.

3. Evaporated fruit, is dried fruit in whose preparation artificial heat has been employed.

4. Evaporated apples shall contain not more than 27 per cent. of moisture.

5. Canned fruit, is the sound product made by sterilizing clean, sound, properly matured and prepared fresh fruit, by heating with or without sugar, and keeping in suitable, clean, hermetically sealed containers; and conforms in name to the fruit used in its preparation.

6. Preserve is the sound product made from clean, sound, properly matured and prepared fresh fruit and sugar syrup, with or without spices and vinegar, and conforms in name to the fruit used in its preparation.

7. Jam, marmalade, is the sound product made from clean, sound, properly matured and prepared fresh fruit or fruit pulp and sugar, with or without spices or vinegar, by boiling to a semi-solid consistence; and conforms in name to the fruit used in its preparation.

8. Fruit butter is the sound product made from fruit juice, and clean, sound, properly matured and prepared fruit, boiled to a semi-solid mass of homogeneous consistence, with or without the addition of sugar and spices or vinegar, and conforms in name to the fruit used in its preparation.

9. Jelly, fruit jelly, is the sound, semi-solid gelatinous product made by boiling clean, sound, properly matured and prepared fresh fruit with water, concentrating the expressed and strained juice, to which sugar is added, and conforms in name to the fruit used in its preparation.

10. When jam, marmalade, fruit butter, or jelly contains other fruit or fruit juice than that which gives its special name to the article, the fact of the presence of such other fruit shall be stated upon the label, in lettering as large and as distinct as that used in naming the fruit principally present. This requirement does not, however, apply to the use of fruit juice, up to the amount of ten (10) per cent. of weight of the jam, etc., used instead of water in the manufacture of the jam, etc.

11. When the sugar in preserve, jam, marmalade, fruit butter or jelly is wholly or partially replaced by glucose, or by any other substitute for sugar, the fact of such substitution shall be stated upon the label in plain lettering.

Green and Ripe Canned Peas.

The following standards of quality have been established for canned peas:—

1. Canned peas, unless specially designated as below, shall be prepared from the harvest of the year in which they are canned, and shall be the unripe peas of the crop of that year.

2. Ripe peas may be canned, provided that the label shows quite clearly that they are such. This may be done either by labelling them as Canned Ripe Peas, or by the use of the word Soaked.

3. Mixtures of ripe and unripe (or green) peas, shall be plainly labelled in such a way as to show that they are mixtures.

4. Peas which do not comply with the above regulations shall be deemed to be adulterated under the Act.

Coloring Matter in Lard.

Section "D" of Order in Council of Oct. 14, 1910 with reference to lard is amended by adding the following:—"Neither lard, leaf lard nor compound lard shall contain any added coloring matter."

Getting Best Results From Dried Fruits

Biggest Season of Year for Them Now Here—Impress on Customers Their Food Value—Cleanliness Should be Exercised in Displaying and Selling Them—Other Goods That Will Bear Featuring From Now On.

The season for the sale of dried fruits is now on. The new season's goods are in or at least the major portion of them are now available. Everything is in excellent shape for the grocer to begin his annual dried fruit campaign, including favorable conditions for the sale of this line, and it's well that he begin early.

The value of an early start in the selling of any line has been pointed out before and its importance in regard to the sale of dried fruits has also been emphasized. New season's goods always appeal strongly to customers. It is only natural. It will be greatly to the advantage of the grocer to go after his share of this trade while the lines are really new and before the first of the season appetite for them has been appeased by other dealers.

A Most Favorable Time.

There is absolutely no reason why it should not be possible to work up a good substantial trade in dried fruits as well as other lines used in Christmas baking at any time now. Christmas is looming up large and already the housewife is thinking seriously of her Christmas cake and plum pudding. Indeed, some of the most enterprising housewives have them prepared already. These are lines which do not deteriorate with age and so can be made at any reasonable time ahead. There is no denying that the housewife is glad when she has got this work off her hands, and for this reason the suggestion to her that it is none too early to purchase her cake should be productive of good results.

Food Values of Dried Fruits.

One of the important things that should be remembered in regard to dried fruits is that the real reason for which they are purchased is their food value and this is a fact that should prove advantageous to the dealer in selling dried fruits, because their food value is high. Many people seem to have the idea that fruits are taken merely for their agreeable taste. This, however, is not the case. Fruits are a real food—a complete and full nutriment—and in addition they materially assist digestion of other foods. This is the reason that all down through the centuries, apple sauce has been eaten with roast goose. The acids in the fruit assist in digesting the fats so abundant in this food.

Rich in Medicinal Functions.

Fruits are also of the utmost value in helping the body to eliminate waste matter. In addition, many varieties have medicinal properties. These are all facts that should induce customers to use more dried fruits and are excellent arguments for the dealer in extending their sale.

Cleanliness in Handling.

Sanitary methods of handling goods are becoming more important in the grocery store every day. The modern housewife is becoming more particular in this regard and demands that the goods she buys be handled properly. It is for this reason that dried fruits if they are to appeal to customers be handled in a sanitary manner. This is quite easy with those lines which are sold in package form. The number is becoming quite extensive and include such lines as raisins, currants, figs, dates, and peels. However, with those which are not sold in packages, the proper precautions should be taken to shield them from dust and dirt.

Showing fruits under glass is an excellent method, displaying the goods up well and also protecting them from any foreign substances. This is done by some dealers by placing them in show cases or silent salesmen and by others by attaching a sliding glass top to the original boxes in which the fruit comes. Either method should favorably impress the particular housewife.

Prevention of Shrinkage.

Another important feature affecting the profits on dried fruits is the prevention of shrinkage. Unless the proper care is taken this will amount to no little figure. Display should be made where the drying out of the fruit will be reduced to a minimum. Showing under glass will prove of value in this regard.

While currants, raisins, dates, figs and peels are perhaps the most important lines which enter into the make-up of the Christmas cake, they by no means complete the list of necessaries which should be pushed from now on. Flour extracts, molasses, spices, icing sugar, baking powder, etc., are all important items and should be given their full share of attention.

Make Window Work Over Time.

Let the dealer commence his campaign for the sale of dried fruits and general Christmas goods at once and let him start at it in real earnest. The sooner, the dealer can get the housewife thinking about these lines, the better for him. His personal salesmanship backed by window display and advertising should now be brought into play. In past issues of The Grocer have been reproduced window displays and advertising which have brought good results for other dealers. Working on the same lines should prove of value to the dealer who wishes to use window display and advertising that will pull business for Christmas goods.

Following items are from The Grocer of Nov. 11, 1892:—

An account of the regular meeting of the Hamilton Retail Grocers' Association is given in our issue of Nov. 11, 1892. President John Ronan occupied the chair. The resolution was as follows: That the Retail Grocers' Association of Hamilton, are in full accord with the Trades and Labor Councils in their efforts to get an act passed at the next session of the legislature to provide that corporations and employers of labor, such as manufacturing, mining, quarrying, lumbering, mercantile, railroads — street, electric and elevated—steamboats, telegraph, telephone and municipal corporations, express and all other incorporated companies, shall pay weekly each and every employe engaged in its business, and that a copy of the above be forwarded to Hon. J. M. Gibson, and his support and influence be asked for the passing of the said act and that a deputation, consisting of John Ronan, John Carper, C. H. Peebles, T. Hazel, B. Winnifrith, be appointed to wait on Hon. J. M. Gibson if found necessary.

The increase amounted to from forty to sixty cents per ton at Toronto and other citiees. The cartage companies' increases varied from five cents to ten cents per one hundred pounds. The case has been adjourned until December 17.

QUEBEC MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Imported French Mushrooms—Up $1 a case.

Canadian Alimentary Paste — Up ½ cent.

Montreal, Nov. 7.—As far as prices are concerned, market has been uneventful. The whole interest in this regard relates to the future. In French mushrooms there has been an advance this amounting to $1 a case, putting the present quotations at the following figures: Hotel, $15; choice, $19; first-class, $22.

Sugar for the time is steady. So, too, is rice. Indeed the whole market is quiet in the extreme.

SUGAR.—Rather unexpectedly quotations here remain steady; nor does there seem any great likelihood of a considerable reduction before the new year. Prospects point toward a bumper crop, but present source of supply is none too large. Therefore, there is no anxiety to reduce prices. Refiners, too, are not anxious to bring about an immediate drop. The present demand for sugar is not strong, nor would a lowering of prices stimulate this greatly, since there is a general expectancy of a heavy decline. The fine prospects for a bumper cane and beet crop, moreover, make this seem practically certain. The growers cannot keep up the prices.

DRIED FRUITS.—Cooler weather has done a good deal toward increasing demand for all dried fruits. These seem likely to be active from now on throughout the winter.

New crop prunes have arrived, though in limited quantities. Prices remain steady.

There is a small supply of apricots, and demand is steady. So far there has not come any change in prices, but such a movement is considered likely.

Raisins are another line where an advance may occur. The seedless are particularly strong, and Sunltana's are also in demand. Owing to short crop of these an upward movement is quite likely.

In currants prices are firm due to shortage which is more the result of lack of ships in Greece than of a poor supply.

Figs are moving slowly, though there has been a better tone noticed since Thanksgiving.

WHITE BEANS. — This line, which last week advanced 15c a bushel to $3.15, is still in large demand by the trade. Still there seems a tendency on the part of farmers to hold back stock. It is thought the same state of affairs coming shortly, as European beans are being brought in.

TEA.—Shipments for September were less than for the same month last year. It is thought the same state of affairs will be found to obtain in October. The increased shipments for year, therefore, will be considerably reduced, which may have some effect on prices. For the time these remain steady.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS:—

Coffee.—Advances in standard blends.

Beans.—New crop on market at $2.90 bushel.

New Dried Fruits.—Full range on market.

Evaps.—Still easy.

Toronto, Nov. 7.—A good seasonable business is reported by all local jobbers, and a good trade looked forward to during next two months. Christmas trade is already beginning to loom up large, but at present time attention is being given to getting shipments of new season's canned goods and dried fruits out to the retail trade. Some houses report trouble in regard to freight, perhaps more so in getting goods in than out. This trouble will be greatly increased if the strike of C.P.R. freight handlers is not settled.

Sugar still holds its undertone of easiness. Demand is now down to a normal basis.

Standard blends of several coffee manufacturers have been advanced from 2 to 3 cents per pound. There is now a full range of new season's dried fruits on the market.

SUGAR.—There is little change in the general sugar situation, the same undertone of easiness still prevailing, for the reasons pointed out in last issue. The European beet crop is turning out in a promising manner, while present prospects for the coming cane crops are also excellent. These facts give the impression that still lower figures will prevail, but when refined will again be affected is an uncertain problem.

Demand is normal for season, but buying is on a hand to mouth basis.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.—Corn syrups have declined 10 cents per case in the West, and reports from there intimate that all corn goods may drop as a result of lower prices on raw material, since the new crop came on the market. There has been no change in prices in Ontario as yet, although some local jobbers express opinion that somewhat lower prices should be warranted, as raw material has dropped considerably since last revision of prices took place. There is another side to the question, in that prices both wholesale and retail have become pretty well established, and a change might not be considered by some as to the advantage of the dealer.

There is a good seasonable demand for syrups.

DRIED FRUITS.—A full range of the new season's dried fruits is now in. New crop prunes and seeded raisins from California are the latest addition to the market. Everything is now ready for the retailer to start the dried fruit season in earnest. Quotations are revised to cover the new fruit. Prunes are considerably cheaper than the first shipment of last year. Seeded raisins are on lower level than for several years, and there should be a big trade done in them this year.

The first prices named on seeded raisins were low, but there have been considerable concessions since then. Some purchasing was done by local wholesalers at first prices, but there has also been a good deal of buying lately. Market on fruits at the Coast has been easy but a wire to a local broker this week from his principals there expresses the opinion that bottom of the market has been reached.

Evaporated apples are still weak, and as low as 7 cents is quoted. There will be another month of packing, and the total is expected to be large.

TEA.—There is no particular change in tea situation. A representative of a London, Eng., tea house at present in Canada, in sizing up the outlook to The Grocer, said that no lower prices were expected in high-grade teas, and no higher prices in low-grade tea.

The quantity of good liquoring tea is not large this year on account of the bad weather in the tea producing sections. For this reason anything of desirable quality is firmly held. On the other hand, there is an over-supply of common lower grades, and more than can be conveniently cared for, and thus the easier feeling in this quality.

COFFEE.—Several firms manufacturing standard brands of coffee which they put up under a trade-marked name have recently advanced prices to the retail trade. This is, of course, in keeping with the higher price of the green goods, which have gradually been climbing to a higher level, clipping manufacturers' profits to such a fine point that they have found it necessary to at last raise prices. The advance amounts to 3 cents per pound, at least that is the advance in a number of firms' prices.

One local manufacturer who has raised prices that amount, says that this makes a total advance of 5 cents per pound since the upward movement in coffee began two years ago. The advance in green coffee during that time has been much greater. Rios have gone up about 10 cents in that time, while the better lines have in many cases advanced as much as 7 cents. Advances in standard blends were therefore inevitable.

SPICES.—Spice trade is beginning to take on a more active tone in anticipation of the Christmas demand. It is usual for business in November and the early part of December to be more brisk.

There is a general steady tone to spices. Nutmegs on primary market have been worming their way upward, and some local dealers would quote a little higher. One firm quotes 100's at 27 cents, and 80's at 32. Cream tartar has at the moment an upward tendency, but it does a good deal of fluctuating. Peppers and cloves are firmly held.

New crop celery seed is now coming in. The opinion was expressed by one dealer that prices might be a little lower.

BEANS.—There are now some new crop beans on the market. They are quoted at $2.90 per bushel. They are late this year, and opening price is high, figures a year ago starting at $2.25. The reason for the high price is the lateness of threshing. The bean crop has been backward, some of the beans being soft and cannot be threshed until they harden up. As soon as they get threshing, much lower prices are looked for.

Austrian beans are selling freely at present time, and some comparatively high prices are being demanded for them.

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.—There is a good movement of canned goods at the present time, not, however, in the nature of new business, but in the shipment of the new pack out to the retail trade. Shortage of cars is said to be interfering to some extent with shipments, and some of the local jobbers say that retailers are clamoring for their goods. From this it would seem that retailers' shelves in some instances at least are pretty bare, and in shape to receive the new pack goods.

It will be remembered that some time ago, one manufacturer of pork and beans raised his prices on this commodity, the new prices being 60 cents for 1's, 95c for 2's, and $1.15 for 3's. Another canner has recently advanced prices on this line, this firm's new figures being 57½ cents for 1's, $1.10 for 3's, and 90 cents for 2's. The reason for the higher prices are of course well-known to the trade, especially those who have had to buy white beans of late, as the price for these has been at a record figure.

The demand for condensed milk still continues as brisk as ever, and manufacturers of this line are still behind in their orders. One firm is reported as 60 days behind with shipments. The trouble seems to be that the condensers cannot get the raw milk to can. The demand for the condensed article has been increasing at a tremendous rate in the past few years and the supply of the fresh milk has not been keeping pace.

POINTERS—

Corn Syrup—Reduced 10 cents.

Winnipeg, Nov. 6. — The splendid weather that has generally prevailed over West for last two weeks has kept business keyed to high pitch of activity and wholesalers report a satisfactory volume of trade. Collections, however, are not up to mark but are improving. The principal price change since last review is a decline of 10 cents per case on corn syrup. New seeded raisins and currants are now on market and an advance is to be noted in cooking figs as forecast in last week's issue.

Sugar is weak and unsettled and may decline further. Ceylon and India teas are easing off slightly among the lower grades.

Christmas enquiries and orders are now coming under consideration. and some more, especially winter lines such such as beans, syrups and cocoas are looking up.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, Nov. 7.—Seventy cents per dozen is the price local new laid eggs have soared to, this being advance of ten cents per dozen since last week. The prognostication of J. R. Terry, provincial poultry inspector, that eggs would reach $1 a dozen before Christmas bears ample signs of being borne out. Owing to scarcity of supply some dealers are now retailing eggs at 85 cents. New Zealand butter is going at 40 cents a pound; Eastern townships, northwest territories and Manitoba creamery products are selling at 35 cents while first-class Ontario butter is quoted at 30 cents.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, Nov. 6.—Local grocery dealers both wholesale and retail report business good and collection up to average.

Owing to a milk war between farmers and vendors over prices, there was an enormous demand at the week end for condensed milk. Fifteen tons less milk than usual arrived daily, and as a result more condensed milk was sold in two days ,than in two months under ordinary conditions. There was complete stock on hand, however, to cover demand and there was no advance in price.

According to reports received here there is a bumper crop of potatoes in Western Nova Scotia this year. They are of fine quality, and are now selling in the Valley at one dollar per barrel. In Halifax potatoes are quoted at 50 cents per bushel. So far the demand for potatoes is light.

Butter continues scarce, and high. Dairy stock in large tubs is 25c, and creamery from 30 to 31 cents. Some local dealers are importing butter from Quebec.

During week a local paper printed a despatch from St. John, N.B., that flour dealers there had cut price of flour 25 cents per barrel on all grades of Ontario blends. The Halifax dealers stated that despatch was incorrect, and that there had been no general decline. The St. John man came back at them, however, and affirmed the despatch. Ontario blends are quoted in St. John at $5.85. Manitoba patents are selling in Halifax at $6.65 to $6.70.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, Nov. 6.—Usual rush of fall business is now opening with local grocers and large sales and heavy orders are the daily program. Receipts at present are but fairly good. Beans are source of interest with dealers just now as they are particularly scarce, and much foreign stock is being brought in. Canadian beans according to local advices are about exhausted, and slow moving of this year's crop will keep market well behind.

Following a decline of twenty-five cents in Ontario patents last week there has been no further activity in flour situation, although some offerings of Manitoba patents were made at about twenty-five cents lower than what quotations warrant. Reliable dealers in St. John say that lower wheat is bound to come, unless trouble among the warring nations in Europe continues for some time, or other nations interfere. The drop in Ontario came somewhat unexpectedly to many. Sugar remains quite weak while molasses shows same firm tendency which has characterized it for some time.

Creamery stocks of butter are light, and higher prices are looked for daily. Hundreds of prints are being stored for winter in anticipation of higher prices. Eggs also have advanced and for strictly fresh stock from 40 to 50 cents a dozen is now being asked. Poultry is also scarce and high quotings rule. Chickens are the most plentiful but even they are high. Potatoes are firmer and are selling at about $1.20 and $1.25.

AN ATTRACTIVE DISPLAY.

Toronto, Nov. 7—(Special).—A neat display in the grocery window of McCaw and McKay, Dundas street, was noted the other day. The entire flooring of the window was covered with rosy-cheeked apples, almost of equal size, each having a wonderful polish. In the centre was a circular barrel top. This was filled with brilliant red cranberries heaped up and surmounted by a large yellow pumpkin. The circular edge of the barrel top was covered with pale blue tissue paper, and was decorated with small cakes cut to form the outlines of various animals such as the camel, elephant, donkey, etc. On either side of the barrel head, were two smaller circles, one of which contained shelled almonds, and the other shelled walnuts. At the back of the display, cans of salmon, corn and tomatoes were piled up in pyramidical forms.

The window showed considerable taste in its arrangement, and the various colors in the objects displayed blended well together and made a pleasing display.

THE DELIVERY BOY'S LIMERICK.

"Here's your butter," cried the feminine shopper,
She threw it, and no one could stop her;
It was plain to be seen,
Except one was green—
That the butter wasn't fit for a pauper.

WHAT SHOULD THE BUYING PRICE BE?

A Grocer reader asks the following question:

"If a grocer's expenses are 17 to 18 per cent. of each dollar's business done, what should he pay for a 25-cent article."

Here is an opportunity for dealers and clerks mathematically inclined to use their pencils and reasoning powers. The Grocer invites correspondence from any and all on the solution of this problem. It is one that every dealer has to do with in buying, having in mind the popular selling price of 25 cents, and a full discussion on it will prove advantageous to all. Do your figuring now and send your answer to the editor by next mail. Let the clerks try it.

TRADE NOTES.

The Mono Poultry Co., recently established in Toronto, will sell eggs with the date on which they were laid stamped on them, the idea being to guarantee fresh eggs.

According to Fairbanks circular, the world's visible supply of lard on Nov. 1, was 195,699 tierces as compared with 275,765 on Oct. 1 of this year, and 207,573 on Nov. 1 of last year.

Flour Now Reduced in Eastern Canada

Manitoba Declines 20c. per Barrel East of Winnipeg—Another Reduction Said To Be Possible—Decline of 50c. per Barrel Now General in the West—Car Shortage Causing Trouble Again.

A reduction in price of Manitoba flour in Eastern Canada has at last taken place, a decline of 20 cents per barrel being announced this week. This reduction was expected before this, but was delayed for reasons that have been pointed out before. It brings prices down to exactly same level as flour held in the Eastern provinces one year ago.

It will be remembered that prices west of Winnipeg were reduced a couple of weeks ago, while Eastern figures remained the same. The reduction in the West varied from 30 to 50 cents per barrel at first, but the higher figure of reduction is now pretty general. As prices east of Winnipeg are only down 20 cents, figures in the East and West would still seem to be on an unequal basis, although it is argued that values in the West were on a higher level and could therefore afford to come down more.

Still there are many dealers in Ontario and east who expected that decline would be larger, as there was contract business done with bakers at considerably reduced prices. For this reason there are those who predict that further reductions are quite possible. There is by no means an abundance of nearby flour, and this may be a reason for only a partial reduction at present time.

The shortage of cars which proved such a nightmare to grain and flour men last year, is again looming up large. At the present time millers in the East are unable to get enough cars to carry their grain from lake ports. Some strenuous complaints are being made.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR.—Manitoba flour was reduced 20 cents per barrel this week, bringing local quotations down to $5.60 for first patents. The decline has been anticipated for some time.

There has, however, been a movement in Canadian Alimentary Paste. This is made from Ontario wheat for the most part, and as crop was none too large there has come a half cent advance in prices. Present quotations, therefore, are from 6 to 7 cents.

FLOUR.—The long-expected change in Manitoba flour has taken place, prices having been reduced 20 cents per barrel this week. This brings first patents in car lots locally down to $5.50 per barrel. It was expected by many dealers that reduction would have been more, in view of the low prices that have been quoted to millers on contract business. For this reason there are those who think that there may be another slight reduction later on.

Ontario flour is unchanged, there being little offering just now. There have been some reports from the Maritime provinces that Ontario flour had been reduced there.

CEREALS.—Relief to the acute situation that has ruled in rolled oats for some time is expected shortly. For some time now there has been little or no stock coming to this market, and dealers have not been able to get their requirements. Some mills are now able to fill their orders in part, but it will be some time before they will be able to catch up.

MILL FEEDS.—While there is no announcement of lower prices on mill feed there is an undertone of easiness. Some mills are inclined to accept lower prices. With milling of new wheat on a larger scale, supplies of both bran and shorts will be more liberal.

WINNIPEG.

Lemons and Grape Fruit Tend Downward

Under Increased Shipments of the New Fruit — Big Crop of Grapefruit This Year—Prices Will be Reasonable—Navel Oranges in Plenty of Time for Christmas—Florida Oranges on Market.

Two lines of fruit which at the present time tend downwards are lemons and grapefruit. These are both recent additions to the market, grapefruit having come in three weeks ago, and new lemons making their debut last week.

The first shipment of lemons was only a small one and of high grade fruit, so that it brought no reduction in prices. However, this week there have been further arrivals, and they will be followed by still larger ones next week, and naturally the tendency is towards lower values. Lemon prices on primary markets are about same as year ago but the fact that prices here have been mounting upward on account of short supplies, makes a reduction at the present time possible.

Grapefruit as has been pointed out before is expected to be on reasonable basis this year, indeed much more so than last year. The reason for this are the large crops this year. The crop in Florida is expected to be fully 50 per cent. above any previous year, due to a large extent to increased acreage. Other producing districts will also show good yields. There has been some complaint from certain centres that the early shipments of grapefruit sent out from Florida were lacking in quality, and were not taken up as well as they otherwise would have been.

California has sent forward its first shipment of new crop navel oranges, but there have been none received on Canadian markets, and probably will not be for some time yet, except it be in the West. They will, however, be here in good time for the Christmas trade. There are still quite a few Valencias to come forward.

New Florida oranges are now on the market, and they show up very well in regard to quality, and besides are quite reasonable in price. The crop this year is large.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS.—A number of price changes have been struck during the week. Apple quotations have kept up remarkably in view of the heavy supply the great reason being the excellence of the quality. Retailers can sell a great many apples of this fine class, and so it goes right back to the grower.

Oranges tend downward in price. Lemons, on the other hand, have advanced 50 cents, but will likely be lower. The orders for the new stock recently received were large, and the advance came naturally.

Grape fruit has declined remarkably, the supply being large and the quality not always of the best. It seems as if grape fruit would average considerably lower than last year. California pears are also off 50 cents, while banana's show a small decrease.

VEGETABLES. — Here the market has been quiet. The cold weather and the bad roads have had some influence upon this, tending to keep the farmers from coming in, but in spite of this prices have remained steady. GREEN FRUITS.—The summer fruit arena has been vacated by the fruit men, who have betaken themselves to their winter quarters again. Home grown fresh fruits are about at an end, grapes being the only line on the market at present. There is still a considerable quantity coming along.

Imported lines are now receiving more attention. New lemons made their debut last week, and were well received. Larger shipments will be coming along now, and the tendency of prices will be downward. As has been pointed out before the prices of grapefruit are expected to be low this year. Values are slightly easier again this week. Porto Rico pineapples are on the market at $5 per case. New crop Florida oranges are quoted at $3 to $3.50 per case.

VEGETABLES.—It is a difficult problem to size up the actual extent of the potato rot in Ontario, but apparently it will reduce the quantity of saleable potatoes considerably. While the quality of receipts now coming to market show an improvement, this cannot be taken as a gauge of the actual outturn of the crop. It is difficult to predict just now what the total loss will be, but from one source comes an estimate that the average will be from 30 to 50 per cent. Some New Brunswick stock is now coming to this market, at 10c per bag above Ontario prices.

Grape Fruit Much More Abundant This Year.

Importer Declares That Crop in Bahamas Will be Seven Times as Great as During the Past Few Years—Only Way to Market This Great Supply is to Enlarge the Demand—Low Prices, to Accomplish This, Though These May Not Come All at Once. Once.

Montreal, Nov. 7—(Special). — The change in the grape fruit situation, noted during the past few years, has been remarkable. Now it seems that an even greater change is to take place. All indications are that grape fruit will be considerably cheaper—that it will indeed, be on a plane with oranges.

Gradual Increase in Sales.

Ten years ago grape fruit was but little used. Little by little it has been brought into Canada more extensively, and little by little the sales have grown. Five years ago, even, grape fruit was not much sold outside of the large cities. Only in the past two years has its use become general, and up to the present time the demand for this fruit has come almost entirely from those fairly well off. Now it appears a different state of affairs is dawning.

The supply of grape fruit is growing tremendously. A Montreal importer, who last year made a great deal of money out of grape fruit, laments that this is impossible at present. "Why," he said, when speaking of this subject, "there will be seven times as much grape fruit come from the Bahamas this year as last. At least the crop is seven times as great as it was last year. How much of it will be sent to Canada of course depends upon the demand."

In Florida, too, the crop has increased largely, partially owing to new ranches which have been started in the last few years. From all sides, indeed, the supply will be greater.

The natural result will be a falling in prices, though the growers are certain to make an effort to hold these steady. To consume the greatly increased supply, however, there must needs be a greatly increased demand, and it appears the only way to produce this is to lower prices.

CANADIAN CHEESE GOES TO NEW ZEALAND.

An unusual incident last week was the shipment of cheese from Montreal to New Zealand. The shipments which went through by the West were only small ones. It was probably only in the way of an experiment, and not because of the higher prices there, as at the present time Canadian exporters can not make sales to England because of the Competition from New Zealand.

The cheese season has just opened in New Zealand, the first steamer leaving there for England on October 5. It carried 510 tons of new cheese, which is said to be the heaviest quantity known for so early in the season, and is more than double the quantity shipped about the same date last year. The make in the Antipodes looks promising and thus the difficulty of Canadian exporters to make sales in England. This is the reason for the slightly easier feeling on Canadian markets.

BUTTER FROM NEW ZEALAND.

Canada which just a few years ago was an important exporter of butter, is now being turned into an importer. It will be remembered that last year some was brought in from New Zealand, and more is to follow this year.

The New Zealand trade commissioner advises that butter is shipped from New Zealand to Canada by way of Vancouver direct, and via San Francisco and transhipped to Vancouver. For the season from September to May by the direct boats to Vancouver, space has been reserved for 65,985 boxes, and space for 35,300 boxes is now the subject of negotiation. Together this makes 101,285 boxes of butter to be shipped direct to Vancouver. In addition, arrangements have been made to ship 23,700 boxes to Vancouver via San Francisco—a grand total of 124,985 boxes of butter which will leave New Zealand for Vancouver from September to May.

INVESTIGATING EGG SHRINKAGE.

Government Man Visits Produce Houses —A Very Bad Shipment.

Toronto, Nov. 7—(Special). — W. A. Brown, of the Dominion Department of Agriculture was in Toronto last week investigating the alleged big loss at present experienced in the marketing of eggs and poultry. For some time, a number of local produce men have pressed this matter upon the attention of the Government, with statistics to show the big losses from these sources.

Mr. Brown was sent to investigate and suggest a remedy. He visited local produce houses and secured actual illustrations of how eggs are graded when received.

That the losses of wholesale dealers who buy eggs are by no means small was demonstrated by one particular bad case cited to The Grocer this week by a Toronto dealer. He purchased 35 cases or 1,050 dozen from a country shipper. They were supposed to be freshly gathered, and the shipper sent a telegram guaranteeing them to be so. They were paid for on arrival, a bill of lading being attached, and the price paid was for fresh gathered stock. When they were examined, there were found to be 72½ dozen rotten, 81 dozen splits which had to be sold at 5 to 6 cents below regular prices, while 48½ dozen were No. 2's—dirty and small and had to be sold at a reduction also.

This is no doubt a specially bad case, but it shows that some action needs to be taken to bring about an improvement in the quality of egg receipts.

Dealers Turn From Fresh to Frozen Fish

Supplies Will Gradually Change Now—Season for Fresh Lake Fish at End—Smoked Varieties in Better Demand of Late—Seasonable Trade Present in Oysters.

From now on there will be a gradual change in supplies of fish from fresh to frozen. The season of fresh lake fish generally ends on Nov. 1, but there has been an extension in some districts which will allow of fresh varieties being had for a short time yet. However, frozen stock will now come more to the front in both lake and sea fish. Already frozen halibut has had to be used at several centres.

Demand for smoked varieties of fish has taken on more life of late, and a good seasonable trade is being done at most centres.

The oyster season is now on in full swing, or at least the next thing to it. The weather is fairly favorable and those dealers who are featuring them are finding a good seasonable trade.

QUEBEC.

MONTREALS. — Some lines, which have been selling well during past weeks, are about through now for the year. There will be practically no more fresh lake fish, with the exeception of some lake trout. Haddock and cod, which have been selling largely, are now scarce. But fortunately other lines are quite plentiful. For instance a small car of fresh halibut reached Montreal during the week. There is also a plentiful supply of choice frozen lines.

The week has seen a number of advances. Halibut has been put on a new level of 13c a pound—an advance of 2 cents. Shredded cod, on the other hand, has been dropped, the present quotation being $1.08. Bloaters are up 15c to $1.25.

In oysters there has been no price change, but the ordering has improved greatly. Some dealers have a dread of handling oysters until the cold weather comes—fearing that they will go bad. Well, the cold weather has come, and with it has certainly come an appreciable improvement in the call for oysters. They are bound to be a good line the winter through.

TORONTO.—The season for fresh fish is gradually coming to its close, and frozen stock will shortly take its place. Fresh fish will be available for a little while longer, or at least some varieties will, on account of the season for trout and white fish having been extended until 10th of November .

There is a good seasonable trade in fish being done by local dealers, an improvement in the demand for smoked varieties being noticed of late. Oysters continue in steady and satisfactory movement.

NOVA SCOTIA.

HALIFAX. — Local market is well supplied with fresh fish. Mackerel are still coming in small quantities. Most of mackerel offering are of fine quality, being very fat. Only one big haul is reported this week, and that on the Cape Breton coast. Cod and haddock are fairly plentiful, and halibut receipts are sufficient for all demands. Pickled herring are selling freely and there is good inquiry for salt mackerel, American dealers offering $13.50 per barrel.

There is a heavy demand for oysters, both in bulk and in shell. The quality of latter is only fair, No. 1 choice stock being hard to get unless high prices are paid.

In smoked fish lines business continues brisk. Some heavy shipments of Labrador fish are expected along this month, and the arrival of this stock will probably cause stir in market.

Produce & Provisions

Butter Consumption Above Production

This is Real Reason for Present High Prices—Canada Turning From Exporter to Importer—Eggs are Firmer—Strictly Fresh Laid are Scarce—Shade Easier Tone to Cheese.

Butter is high, higher than a year ago, and even at the present prices there is a fair tone of steadiness, and there are those who predict that coming months will see still higher figures. At present time butter is one of our dearest foodstuffs. Butter men say that reason for this is simply fact that every year, the large increase in our population means an increased demand, while on other hand, production is showing no increase. Canada was a few years ago an exporter of butter to England, but this season she has not sent a package to that country. Last season England and New Zealand had to be called on for supplies of butter and already this year business is being done with the latter country.

The reason for the present high prices of butter in Canada is, therefore, because demand here is exceeding production, and difference between consumption and production seems to be gradually on increase. Any amount that Eastern Canada produces over her actual requirements is easily taken care of by the West. Apparently if butter prices are to return anywhere near their old time levels, Canada will have to give more attention to dairy farming.

The firmer feeling in eggs reported last week still continues, and prices at many centres have been climbing to higher levels. This is especially true in guaranteed new laid eggs, which are a scarce article at present time. Although quality has on whole shown an improvement, receipts have been dwindling and at most centres cold storage stocks have been used to considerable extent.

Cheese values have in general been easier of late. One reason for this is a lessened demand from England, from where it is reported that New Zealand is proving a strong competitor in this line. Canada's exports this year have been smaller than last year by a considerable amount. It is difficult to get an exact line on stocks now held in Canada, but they are conceded to be above those of year ago.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS. — Price changes this week have been few, and in some lines—notably butter—it would seem that steadiness in prices is quite likely. On other hand an advance in honey is looked for; and higher figures are practically certain to be struck for eggs.

The general demand has been large. Canadian short cut pork is exceedingly scarce, so scarce indeed that orders are being refused. Other pork, however, is to be had—there being a good deal of American pork on the market. Bacons and hams are plentiful. Prices remain the same and ordering is large.

For fowl the demand grows with the approach of winter. Since Thanksgiving the call has been heavier than ever.

BUTTER.—Still there is a scarcity of butter caused to a good extent by failure of some crops upon which cattle are fed. The western demand has increased greatly too, so that difference between supply and demand is made greater. During week creamery butter has been advanced one cent, now being quoted at .32½. In solids it is to be secured for half cent less.

If no other factor entered into the consideration every thing would point to still higher butter; but there is the importation from New Zealand to be considered. Butter is now being brought in from there in good quantities.

Discussing effect importation will likely have, a local produce man pointed out that New Zealand butter will have to pay a freight of about 1c a pound, and a duty of approximately 3c. At present time New Zealand butter is selling in England for 27c, that means it would cost 31c laid down here. Evidently, then, it will not reduce the Canadian market, but it may steady it, tending to keep prices from soaring much higher.

TORONTO.

PROVISIONS. — The more liberal movement of hogs continued last week with lowering prices and values are again easier this week, $7.75 being paid at country points. There are those who expect values may see further easiness during the month. Hogs coming in now are heavier than a time ago.

With lowering prices on hogs, there are signs of easiness in some pork products. Light and medium hams for instance are reduced slightly this week. One line which does not follow the general easier trend is long clear which under small stocks is firm.

BUTTER. — Butter prices are unchanged from last week, but a fair tone of firmness is still present. There is a fair volume of fresh made goods coming along but ideas of holders and shippers are firm in sympathy with conditions elsewhere and the general good demand. Arrival of the first of November has had little effect on local receipts, except that some dealers report a little more tub butter coming along.

EGGS.—Strictly new laid eggs are a pretty scarce commodity at present time, and for the article carrying a guarantee, as high as 40 cents is being asked by some firms. Information Wanted on Fancy Cheese

Grocer Reader Asks About Holland, Limburger and Rocquefort—Some Characteristics About Them as Well as of Other Fancy Cheese—Interesting Fact About the Curing of Roquefort.

Editor Canadian Grocer,—I am thinking of handling a few different lines of cheese and there are quite a few that I know very little about. I wonder if you couldn't give me a little talk through your paper on the subject. Some of the most important that I would like to hear about are the Holland, Limburger and Roquefort, as to how they are made and where. Trusting this will not be too much trouble. I will look forward to it with eagerness.

Toronto, Ont. READER.

A good many grocers in Canada have taken up the sale of fancy varieties of cheese with good results. Their sale is showing a steady increase, the better profits which they yield being an inducement to dealers to handle them. Demand for them will not come of itself, but must be created. A knowledge of the chief facts in regard to each is desirable by the dealer who hopes to work up a trade in them.

What Holland Cheese Is.

Holland or Dutch cheese is a small, hard, salty variety, made ordinarily from thrice skimmed milk, which is warmed, and the curd separated by the addition of muriatic acid instead of rennet acid as in this country. Edam is one of the most important of Dutch cheese and is sold to a considerable extent in this country. It is made in the shape of a cannon ball, and is largely used for grating purposes. They come in a case containing 12 cheeses weighing about four pounds each.

The Limburger Variety.

Limburger cheese is a line which has previously been largely brought from the States, and is called "imported Limburger," but on account of the domestic made cheese attaining such a state of perfection, this is largely replacing the imported article. It is also put up in 1 lb. bricks, which are easily handled by the retail trade.

Roquefort Resembles Stilton.

Roquefort cheese is a French variety, principally made at the town of that name in France. It somewhat resembles "Stilton," but is scarcely so rich, and possesses a peculiar pungency of flavor. They are stored in the natural grottoes of the Valsassina, which are very damp and form an immense cave—a perfect cheese citadel—in the limestone rock at Roquefort. Here they are cured and acquire their fine flavor and mellowness. They are packed in cases of 12 weighing about 4½ to 5 pounds each.

Genuine imported Camembert cheese is also made in France, but it is also largely made in the States and called "Camembert type." It is usually packed in wooden boxes weighing about one-half pound. It also comes in tins of about the same weight.

Swiss and Italian Cheese.

Gruyere cheese (Swiss) is principally made in Switzerland, although there is considerable quantity of the "Swiss type" or "American Swiss" made in the United States. It usually comes in large tubs weighing about 150 pounds per cheese.

Gorgonzola is an Italian manufactured cheese and is usually packed in baskets or small tubs weighing about 20 pounds.

Oka cheese is a line similar to Camembert in make, and is made by the Trappist Monks of La Trappe, Quebec. Each weighs about five pounds, and they are packed six to the case.

Neufchatel cheese is a popular line, especially in the United States, but is growing largely in this country. It is a facsimile of cream cheese, only made from skim milk.

HAMS

Have you considered the fact that choice sugar cured Hams are selling 3 and 4 cents a pound less in price than either Breakfast Bacon or Backs? Hams to-day are the cheapest pork products on the market, and should show the dealer a good profit, either smoked, pickled or cooked.

There are no finer hams cured than the "Star Brand," put up by

Japan Tea

Since the great advance in Japans, a couple or three years ago, which made it impossible to longer retail a good quality at twenty-five cents, there was commenced an increased demand for a thirty-five cent line, or three pounds for a dollar. Now we desire to call your attention to a tea which we are offering and which has supreme quality, being both strong and excellent flavor. The price is very moderate considering these fine attributes.

Raven Brand 25c

Salmon

If you want for your trade some of the finest and most luscious quality that we have ever seen in a can, order some of our Monarch brand halves. The price is only 1.47½. It makes a splendid fifteen cent line, and take our word for it, you will have a sure winner if you take hold of these goods.

Prunes

Our first car of New Santa Clara Prunes is now here, and all orders booked will be shipped out immediately. They are Herbert's pack, and as usual with this shipper, are very good. Orders solicited for immediate shipment.

PROFIT. The dealer who handles and pushes Soclean is assured of quick sales, which net him a liberal margin of profit.

QUALITY. The quality of Soclean is unsurpassable. It is the most effective compound for laying dust, brightening rugs and destroying moths. It leaves a fragrant odor after sweeping.

QUANTITY. The quantity of the 25c package of Soclean has been increased, giving the customer fullest value for the money. The 50c and $1.00 packages have been reduced to 40c and 75c respectively.

We improved the quantity because we could not improve the quality.

The Process of Preparing Laurentia Milk

FIRST:—THE VERY BEST GRADE OF MILK IS REQUIRED to produce satisfactory LAURENTIA MILK.
And it must be received at the dairy plant in first-class condition.

SECOND:—IT IS IMMEDIATELY CLARIFIED to remove every vestige of dust and impurity.

THIRD:—THEN PASTEURIZED (Heated to 142 degrees F. for thirty minutes), to keep the milk in good condition until it is bottled, sealed and sterilized.

FOURTH:—NEXT HOMOGENIZED, which is a purely mechanical process, and involves forcing the milk through a valve under great pressure, to smash or break up the cream globules and the other solids in the milk, and mix so completely with the liquids as to be impossible to separate.
The smashing of the cream globules and thorough distribution gives to the milk its extremely rich flavor.

FIFTH:—THEN BOTTLED AND SEALED AIRTIGHT to prevent adulteration or change in the product after the next and final step in the process is completed.

SIXTH:—FINALLY STERILIZED (Heated to 212 degrees F.), to destroy all possible remaining germs, and to insure perfect keeping quality.

HOMOGENIZED

HOMOGENIZING, the mechanical process, discovered by the French Engineer and Scientist, Gaulin, which makes this perfected milk product possible.

HOMOGENIZING permits sterilizing with finished milk more digestible than any other milk.

HOMOGENIZING at last makes it possible to produce and sell milk as an absolutely pure, standard, reliable, non-perishable household staple, and with the highest possible food value, to supply the need where a perfect milk food is required.

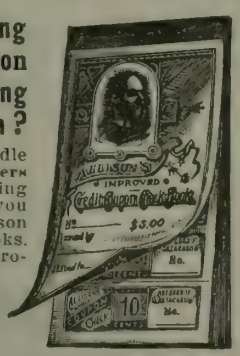
Are You Using Allison's Coupon Books, or Losing Money, Which?

You CAN'T handle credit customers WITHOUT losing money unless you DO use Allison Coupon Books. Thousands of grocers all over America find it mighty profitable to use them.



How They Work:

A man wants credit. You think he is good. Give him a $10.00 Allison Coupon Book. Have him sign the receipt or note form in the front of the book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with ten dollars—no trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten-cent coupon, and so on until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10.00 and gets another book. No pass books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes—NO LOSS OF MONEY. ALLISON COUPON BOOKS are universally recognized as the best.

For sale by the jobbing trade everywhere.

GOLD DUST

Saves work for your customers by its cleansing power, and GOLD DUST advertising saves work for you by its selling power. One is as searching as the other—just as GOLD DUST itself goes into every nook and corner of the household after dirt, Gold Dust advertising goes into every corner of the country after customers and sends them to your store.

LET THE GOLD DUST TWINS DO YOUR WORK.

Inefficient Equipment Costs $ $

Profits in cheese sales are made not by guessing the amount of cheese a customer's order calls for, but by having the most efficient and absolutely non-erratic computing system to cut it. Real economy means efficient equipment; it costs dollars less than lost time through guessing weight (to say nothing of stock loss).

The Perfection Cheese Cutter

It is efficient because it enables you to sell cheese at a much better profit than by any other way, and is thoroughly practical and speedy and simple to operate.
Its features embody: A bevelled edge knife, a five-ply birch board that don't warp or come apart. It is handsomely finished in scale blue enamel. It is well constructed, with good workmanship. Automatic cabinet. Sells cheese all summer.
High-class natural finish. Perfectly sanitary—protects the cheese from air, dust and insects. Place for display and storage of box goods on part of its top.

Send for illustrated literature to-day.

You always lose when you "Money-back" a customer

FIRST—you lose your profit; second—you lose your time; third, you may lose your customer.

Further, your recommendation is weakened in effect, and then there is the annoyance of claiming on the miller.

And when finally you get your money back—why, you are still out of pocket.

Anybody with a new product can "guarantee" to money-back.

But guaranteed flour is not enough, Brother Grocer.

Isn't it enough to sell flour without having to buy it back?

Don't sell on suspicion when you can sell on certainty.

It is immaterial what brand you are selling now, FIVE ROSES flour will bring you easier, larger sales.

It will bring you a greater volume of net profit.

Because it is more than merely "guaranteed"—it has established a belief.

A guarantee is based on promise, but a belief is based on performance. Since 1888, housewives have tried FIVE ROSES, tested it every way. And now they KNOW.

Sell a flour that needs no "guarantee," Brother Grocer. Packed in sizes to suit YOUR trade, ask your jobber for FIVE ROSES or write our nearest office.

In the Right Spot

THAT is where the Barr Register hits YOUR business. It hits the bad accounts. It gets the money in and reduces your outstanding accounts to a minimum. It hits the old, clumsy method of bookkeeping. It does all this bookkeeping at one writing. It keeps the accounts posted up to the minute. It hits the foolish system of rendering accounts but once a month, that keeps your customers from paying their bills for a whole month.

These are proved facts. Would such improvements hit YOUR business in the right spot? Then get more information. Write right NOW.

Your REPUTATION at Stake

Mr. Grocer--- Do you ever consider when buying such lines as PICKLES, SAUCE and FISH that your REPUTATION with your customer is very much at stake, and sometimes you are persuaded by some smart salesman who will show you a shade better profit on either a fictitious label or an unknown brand with which you are not only looking for, but likely to have, trouble; but if you will only use your own best judgment and demand from your wholesale grocer

MACONOCHIES

You will not only save your reputation but will increase your trade by giving your customer goods that the Quality goes in before the name goes on, and are guaranteed to you by the manufacturers.

Send for quotations on Fish at once, it will pay you. We will also be pleased to send samples for comparison to bear out the above remarks.

Seeded

A distinct fancy variety of Absolutely Seedless Raisins cured in the sun without the use of lye, sulphur, or any deleterious matter. Most highly flavored, most wholesome and the cleanest. The Griffin & Skelley line of dried fruits and vegetables are known as the standard for evenness of quality and packing. Your customers will appreciate it if you sell them this pack.

Taylor's Peels

Candied or Drained

The "life blood" has not been taken away from the imported fruit skins used for "Taylor's Peels," because the essential oil has not been extracted, leaving them like the sere and dried-up Autumn leaf.

Taylor's Candied and Dried Peels represent the height of high quality. Whether the Lemon, Citron or Orange Peel is wanted you are just as certain of getting the best in "Taylor's" every single time.

160,000 barrels from our own orchards.

Choice eating apples for domestic and export use, supplied in any quantities.

When one of your best customers call and ask for SUN GOLD VINEGAR, what will you say? Will you apologize or cheerfully supply?
It is already an established fact that housewives have discovered that there is no other vinegar to compare with SUN GOLD. It is a cider vinegar made under model conditions and without a rival in its quality. It is also moderate in cost.
Now, can you refuse our exceptional prices for a year's supply? This has been a good apple year, and our orchards have yielded over 160,000 barrels of picked apples; we are therefore prepared to demonstrate our superior facilities to supply the trade DIRECT at rock-bottom prices.
Will you allow us to quote you? If so, you will surely accept.

P.S.—Our prices of new cider and apples in any quantities are equally interesting.

Business Development

¶ Do you ever feel that your present occupation prevents the development of your business talent?

¶ Many a young man is engaged in office or store clerking. Owing to the nature of the business, he has but a narrow range in which to exercise his talent. He cannot relinquish his position to seek one giving better opportunities and paying a larger salary. To do so would be to give up his only source of revenue, and someone may need his support. Yet it is imperative that he increase not only his business, but also his salary.

¶ We will solve the problem for you. We have need of part time salesmen. Men who can devote spare hours to our work and make as much, and in many cases, more money than they can from their regular occupation. Many of these men we develop into regular road men with a high salary. Do you feel that there are latent forces in you, waiting for an opportunity to assert themselves? If so, we want you to let us show you how to discover them. Write at once for the particulars.

A FISH STORY

DURING YEAR 1911 WE HANDLED

Our sales in Canada in the district west of New Brunswick to the Pacific Coast this fall have increased in such proportion that we believe the trade in Canada would be interested in knowing the extent of the increase.

The following figures show the percentages of increase for certain periods of the year 1912 over years 1910 and 1911.

Increase September, 1912, over September, 1911 ..... 172 %
Increase September, 1912, over September, 1910 ..... 248 %

Increase October, 1912, over October, 1911 ..... 89 %
Increase October, 1912, over October, 1910 ..... 172 %

First 6 months of our business year, May 1st to October 31st:—
Increase 6 months, 1912, over same period, 1911 ..... 75 %
Increase 6 months, 1912, over same period, 1910 ..... 152 %

There are causes for this surprising increase, and we believe the low price of all kinds of fresh and cured Atlantic Sea Fish compared with ever-increasing price of all other kinds of foodstuffs, together with the many excellent varieties of cured fish, easily obtainable, which have been cured and packed by our company under the most improved methods, are the cause for the rapidly increasing demand for our products.

SELLING ARGUMENTS

There are selling arguments that are good and there are selling arguments that are better.

In reply to enquiries from the consumer, we have found that it is much more effective to quote oysters in pints, rather than quarts. In years gone by oysters were handled very differently from what they are now. The consumer feels that the price has been advanced, but the value they receive for their money at this time is greater than that which they received ten years ago; that is, they are receiving more solids or actual food properties. The family that required a quart of oysters under the methods that prevailed a few years ago, will only require a pint under the present methods, and will really obtain more satisfaction. There, of course, continues to be more or less watering of oysters, but this method is wrong, and will, as a natural result, be its own undoing. How often the consumer purchases oysters, depends entirely upon the satisfaction obtained in eating them, with the result that it is up to every dealer to put the oysters out in the best possible condition, and obtain a price that will afford his doing so. Obtain the best oysters possible, put them out in the best possible condition, and the trouble of getting a price for your stock will be pretty well taken care of.

We can supply you with the necessary quality; the rest of it is up to you. COAST SEALED oysters stand for more with Canadian trade to-day than all other brands combined.

The business of the "SEALSHIPT" Oyster System's Canadian Branch has been taken over by us. We can fill all orders promptly for "SEALSHIPT" Oysters or equipment.

The ULLMAN Account Register

is the safest, simplest, quickest, surest to charge and most satisfactory of any system on the market. It satisfies the customer as well as the merchant. There is a decided advantage to the grocer who uses an Ullman Account Register. The customer knows, every time he makes a purchase, how much he owes, and naturally tries to keep it as low as possible. Put in an Ullman Account Register and stop the incessant night work and worry of retail bookkeeping.

Canned fruit display made by R. George, with The Hudson's Bay Co., at Kamloops, B.C.. It shows good effect of a quantity trim properly organized.

Organization in the Quantity Display

If it is to be Strong "in the Attack" Like a Successful Army, it Must Have System—Window Containing Many Tins of Canned Fruit Which Will Attract—Some Forethought Necessary to Produce a Strong Selling Quantity Trim.

If there is strength in numbers as the old proverb indicates, then the above display must be considered a particularly good one. More than 350 tins of canned fruit alone can be seen in the photograph, and what can be seen does not include much more than half of what the window actually contains.

Canned goods is one line which can be shown in quantity with good effect. Most dealers buy heavy supplies of this line every autumn and a quantity display is therefore easy.

In some cases, however, there is not strength in numbers. Witness some of the battles recently waged between the Bulgarians and Turks. No army can do effective fighting if it is a mob. There must be system. System is absolutely necessary if a strong attack is to be made.

The same applies to quantity in the window display. Many windows are to be seen everywhere that stand high as far as quantity is concerned. But in the matter of drawing custom—in the attack—they are absolute failures. Windows containing disorganized "mobs" of goods are similar to the army that has become a mob. Each is ineffective in the attack and sooner or later their failure will be observed.

The above window was one shown recently by the Hudson's Bay Company, Kamloops, B.C. and was trimmed by R. George. Mr. George has already the acquaintance of Grocer readers, he having won a first prize in the Christmas window dressing contest of 1911-12. His display belongs to the organized class and as such is bound to produce results. Care was exercised in arranging this canned fruit window. It was not accomplished as if it were an afterthought, but a fore-thought. The various cans were laid in specific places—not simply thrown together. They present a strong front, with the labels turned out where they accomplish the most good.

A Forceful Connection.

It is not necessary to go into any detail in explanation of how the window was dressed. The arrangement is self-evident, but some emphasis should be placed on the connection the artist has made between the canned and fresh fruits. In the centre of the display may be seen three boxes of high quality apples, the boxes being artistically bordered with excelsior. This strongly suggests to the prospective buyer the quality of the fruit in the cans. The decorations of palms, leaves, etc., add an extra tone to the display which assists in attracting attention.

A Window Picture Without Reflections

To Absolutely Prevent Reflections and for Best Results, Photograph Should be Taken at Night With Artificial Light and Long Exposure—Camera Must be Perfectly Still and Lights in Window Must be Concealed—Take Picture in Daylight When Sun is Shining on the Display—This Tends to Kill Reflection.

When the retail grocer goes to the trouble of having a photograph taken of a window display, he might as well get the best results possible. One of the troublesome features that photographers, unaccustomed to outside work, meet with is reflection. This is frequently seen in windows received by this paper. Good displays are impaired for reproduction on account of buildings and trees from across the road getting into the picture. In fact, occasionally the photographer himself, with his camera, appeared in the picture, rendering it practically useless for reproduction.

The Grocer would suggest to dealers who frequently have windows taken by one of their local photographers, that they study the suggestions given below so as to be able to advise the inexperienced commercial camera man. Every town and city has good portrait photographers. That is, they take good pictures of people inside their studios. But when it comes to commercial work they are at sea with regard to some points.

Schedule of Important Points.

Retailers should remember the following points:—

1. To get the best possible picture of a window display it should be taken at night.

2. The light in the window should be fairly strong, Tungsten lamps being preferred. Strong gas light or an arc light are also good.

3. All lights in the window should be concealed.

4. Photographs should be taken on a calm night as a strong wind vibrates the camera which should remain absolutely steady.

5. Photographer should stand just far enough away to get in the window itself.

6. The average length of exposure for a night picture is from 10 to 25 minutes, the time depending on strength of the light in the window and the colors. Some windows, however, have to be exposed from 30 minutes to an hour, this applying more particularly to dry goods where dark cloths against dark background are shown.

7. Prints should be made on glossy paper as better results are secured by the engraver from this than from a dull finish. Pictures for reproduction in this paper should be about 8 inches by 10 inches in dimensions and unmounted.

Eliminates the Reflections.

The reason why a photograph should be taken at night is obvious. It entirely prevents reflections and therefore does away with the greatest trouble. It does not matter whether people pass between the window and camera or not, although no one should be allowed to stand in front of either for any length of time. This would darken and dull a portion of the picture. A flashlight of a display at night seldom produces good results and should be avoided.

When lights are placed high up in the window, they can often be concealed by pulling down the curtain. Otherwise they should be covered so that they still shed light on the goods but that they cannot be seen by the photographer. Unless they are concealed the photograph will be blurred.

How Detail is Often Lost.

Some photographers stand too far away from the window to get the detail of the arrangement. When reproduced these become useless in the matter of ideas for others. If the sidewalk is fairly wide the man with the camera can stand on the edge of it. It should be distinctly remembered that a window is of little use unless the arrangement is obvious when it is reproduced in the paper.

Commercial photographers advise a "fast" plate for a window photograph taken at night. This is preferable to a "slow" one because the length of time of exposure is lessened.

The Daylight Photograph.

There are occasions when a photograph has to be taken during the day time—particularly in smaller places where artificial light is poor—and a few elementary principles should be always recognized in such cases.

One is that the reflections are worse when the sun is not shining on the window. It is therefore desirable that the picture be taken in strong sunlight with the sun's rays directly on the window to be taken. This kills the reflections and results are usually pretty good. Time length of exposure in daylight is, of course, greatly reduced in comparison to a night photograph with artificial light. One second is probably the limit.

A sure method of preventing reflections in day time is by the use of a screen erected on two poles just behind the camera. The best color to use is turkey red with black coming next. This may be simply a light cheese cloth or sheet held up by a couple of poles so as to prevent the rays of light from across the street entering the window. The camera should, if possible, be placed in a hole in the centre of the sheet; next best, the photographer should stand in front of it.

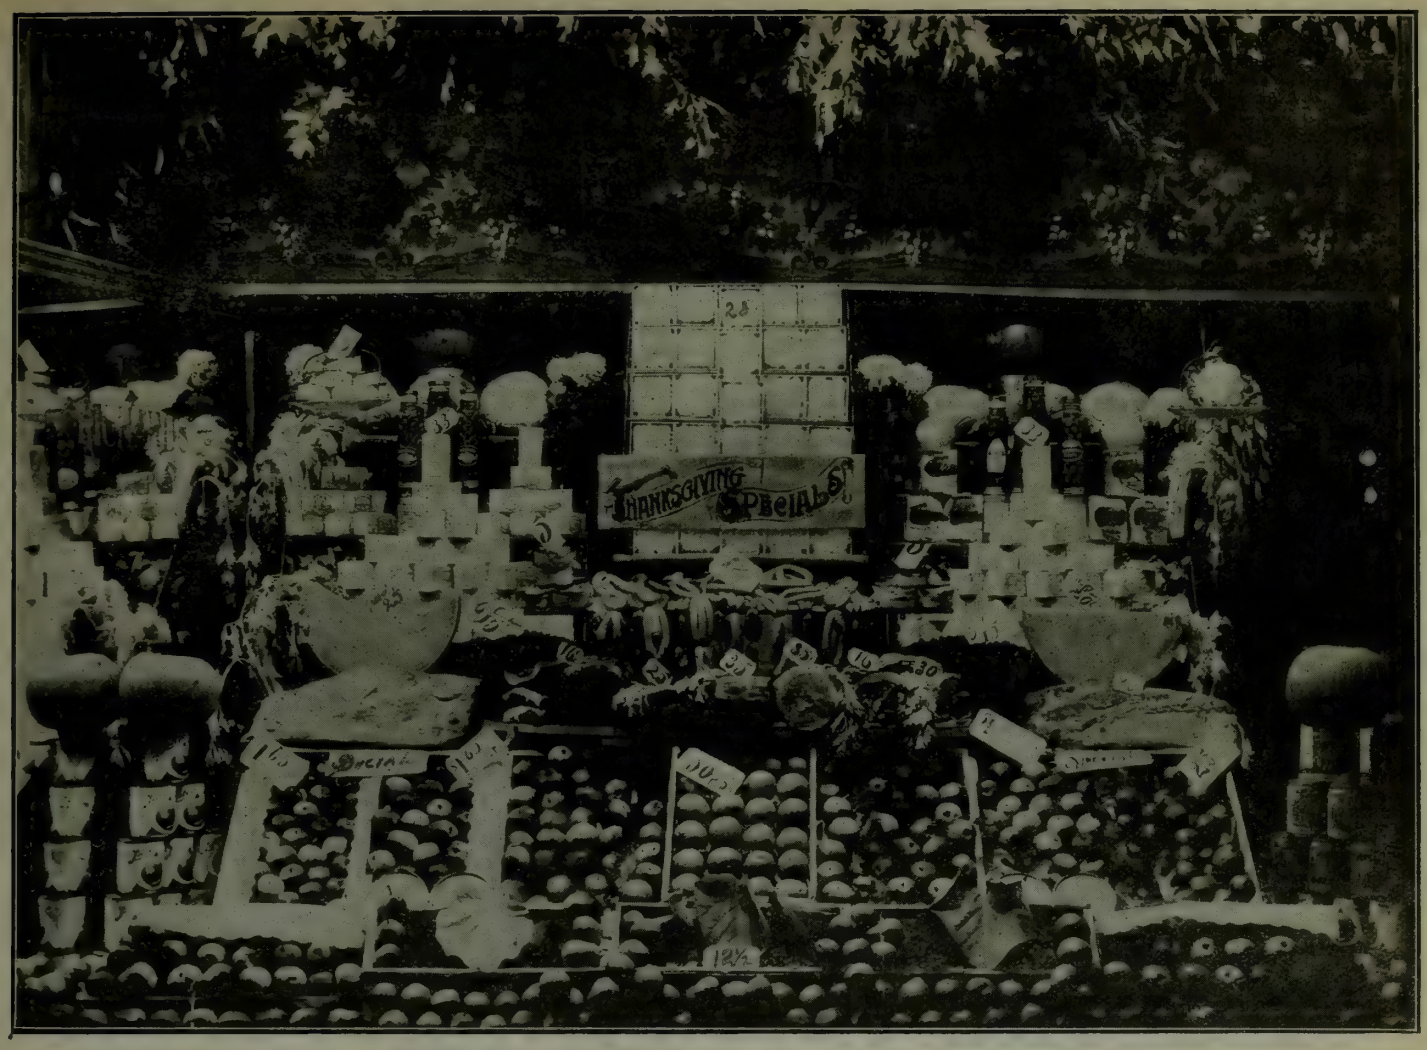
A photograph of a store interior is best when taken during the day. But it should not be taken when the sun is shining on the window. The light should be as evenly distributed as possible to get good results and these cannot be secured with the front of the store too bright. It is much easier, of course, to get a good interior picture than a window, as the photographer hasn't the glass to contend with.

Keep Suggestions on File.

Now that the Christmas season is close at hand, many dealers will be having their windows photographed so that above suggestions will come in handy. This page might well be clipped out and placed on file where it can be looked over when a photograph is contemplated. It should be remembered that apart from the larger cities, there are few photographers acquainted with outside commercial work so that the dealer should be in a position to point out the best time for a photograph and some of the important points to consider. These photographers may be experts at portrait and inside work in their studios where they understand all light changes, but they need a little coaching when it comes to a window photograph where reflections are a trouble.

FIRM MOLASSES PRICES.

Fancy Barbadoes molasses sold steady to firm. There is no molasses to come forward from the Island of Barbadoes except what has been already purchased by importers, and therefore, there is not likely to be any decline in prices between now and February. Easiness then is by no means a certainty as reports from Barbadoes regarding coming crop are by no means encouraging. Of course low prices expected on sugar will have tendency to weaken prices on new crop.



This Thanksgiving display attracted a great deal of attention and made many sales. It was arranged by Bruce McDougall, Ingérsoll, Ont.

A Result Getting Thanksgiving Display

What One Retail Store Accomplished With a Fine Display for That Festive Occasion—Fruits, Meats, Cheese, Butter, Honey and Vegetables Shown—Many Extra Sales Made—Citizens Called to Congratulate the Winner.

By Bruce McDougall.

That the window display is an important seller in the grocer store of today, was proven by our this year's Thanksgiving window, a reproduction of which is shown here. It necessitated a great amount of work to arrange it, but it certainly sold the goods. A good window display places your goods before the public in an appealing and unobtrusive way and with a little care and attention to the arrangement and blending of the goods shown, satisfactory results should always accrue.

This window is made up of a special line of goods for Thanksgiving. They include tasty edibles applicable for that particular occasion. Near the front of the window are a number of boxes of new raisins, and in front of them close to the glass, large russet pears. A row of boxes of choice MacIntosh reds are next the raisins and flanked by a pyramid of canned fruit and vegetables with pumpkins placed on top.

Bruce McDougall, the writer of this article and the trimmer of this Thanksgiving window, is in his father's store at Ingersoll, Ont. He is a young man who is making good in the art of grocery window display, which illustrates what can be accomplished by the salesman who takes an interest in the success of the store. The above window is one retail dealers should place on their files for suggestions for next year.

A couple of stands were erected on either side and to the rear on which were placed creamery butter, cheese, celery, cooking compound, olives, cream cheese, and cabbage. In the centre I built up a semi-circular platform on which to show meats as attractively as possible. Hanging from the ceiling was a heavy plate glass shelf loaded down with sausage and pork pies. This plate glass shelf kept swinging backward and forward, the motion itself attracting a good many people. I may say here that the displaying of meats, sausage, etc. in the window has sold and is selling a great deal of goods for us. Higher up and to right and left may be seen plates suspended from the ceiling also containing pork pies. Everything in the window was priced with small tickets, as we believe these assist greatly in making sales.

The decorations at the top consisted of oak leaves against a background of grapes and other fruit.

RETAILER PROTECTED BY WARRANTY.

Food Standards for Canada are gradually being established to include all lines. In last week's issue several new standards were referred to and more will follow. As these standards go into effect, foods sold by the retailer must be subject to their conditions or else he will have to bear the penalties for conviction as set forth by the Adulteration Act.

The inspection of foods will still continue as under the Adulteration Act, but the legalization of the Standards will have the result of making it a simpler matter to obtain conviction. Many consider the fact that the retailer is liable for infractions of the law as a hardship to him, claiming that the manufacturer of adulterated goods is really the guilty party. However, the authorities look upon the situation in a different light, arguing that since the retailer is the immediate vendor, he is the one directly responsible for their quality.

The retailer, however, can be absolutely protected if he will take the trouble to ask the manufacturer, or his representative, for a warranty that the goods are pure. This warranty is provided for in a section of the Adulteration Act, and once secured by the retailer, he no longer becomes liable. If the manufacturer refuses to give a warranty that the goods are according to Standard, and at the same time represents them to be so, the dealer should purchase elsewhere. He cannot afford to take a chance on his reputation.

Food Standards are intended to raise the standard of quality of goods sold to the consumer and every retail dealer should stand behind the pure food idea with his selling influence.

ADVANCES IN BLENDED COFFEE.

During the past few weeks several large Canadian coffee firms have advanced prices on their standard blends, put up under their own branded name. The upward movement amounted to from 2 to 3 cents per pound.

The advances were inevitable on account of the rise in green coffee. Indeed, advances were made by some firms a couple of months ago. The total advance in prices since the soaring movement began in this line two and a half years ago has been appreciable, ranging from 3 to 4 cents on better grades with most firms to 6 to 8 cents with lower quality goods.

These advances, although they appear rather substantial have been apparently warranted by the course of the green goods, which has been gradually climbing to a higher level, especially on the cheaper grades. Green Rios has during that time gone up about 10 cents per pound, while some of the better grades have advanced as much as 5 to 7 cents.

Therefore it would seem as if the advances in standard blends are well warranted. It was retarded for a long time by keen competition between manufacturers, but at last had to give way to the inevitable. The advance has, of course, been much larger on the cheap grades.

ANNUAL COST OF SCALE INSPECTION.

Government blue books as a rule are dry reading for the majority, but the last one on Canada's inland revenue contains information about weights and measures which will be interesting to every grocer and general merchant. They have to "pay the piper" for the public's benefit and should therefore know the amount assessed them for scale inspection.

The total revenue collected for scale inspection during the fiscal year ending March 31, 1912, was $107,408.60. The total expenditures by the department in the collection of above amount was $124,256.83. It actually cost the Government, therefore, only $16,848.23 to employ many inspectors and maintain buildings and apparatus for the inspection of the scales and measures for the protection of the public. The owners of scales paid the rest whether scales were correct or not.

But the chief objection to the retailer paying for inspection is the fact that in the great majority of cases his scales are correct. The blue book report shows that 63,674 weights (Dominion) were presented for inspection and that 63,238 were verified and only 436 rejected. This places the percentage of rejections at only .683. As regards platform scales, 51,464 were inspected and 1,134 rejected, making a percentage of 2.203. Scales used by merchants have, therefore, been practically correct, yet, whether correct or not they have had to hand over a big percentage of the $107,408.60 revenue collected.

FRIENDLY RIVALRY IN SALES MAKING.

Friendly rivalry between clerks in a store in the making of sales is something to be desired because it will prove beneficial to business.

In a certain grocery store where there are two male clerks employed, it is the practice to go out among customers twice a week soliciting orders. Each male clerk is given one portion of the town to cover. Soliciting orders in ths way is likely to become rather monotonous, unless there is something to keep up interest. In order to do this, one day when the junior clerk, more by good luck than real effort, secured more orders than usual, the proprietor tactfully acquainted him with the fact and intimated that if he would put forth a little more effort he would soon be able to get his orders up to that of the older clerk.

The junior clerk thus had an ideal set up for him to strive for. Better work is always done when a person is attempting to attain a certain end and accordingly his orders began to increase. The older clerk finding how well his junior was doing decided that he would have to get to work or be outstripped in sales. Thus a friendly rivalry sprang up between the two, which has made the work of order taking much more interesting to them and has also proved of material value to the store because of the larger sales.

Many other merchants, no matter how many or how few clerks they employ, should be able to work the same idea to good advantage. Start the sales rivalry in a tactful manner, and the enthusiasm will keep alive itself with encouragement from the merchant at intervals.

EFFECT OF DISORDERLY WAREHOUSES.

A dirty, disorderly warehouse to the rear of a well kept store interior is much like the Queen Anne front and Mary Ann back in a dwelling house. Often the prospective purchaser is pleased with a dwelling almost to the extent of buying, but when a glimpse of the back is secured, the deal is off.

There is something akin to this in the unsanitary warehouse to the rear of the supposedly well kept grocery store. Recently a case has come to the writer's notice where a good customer was lost on this account—she got a glimpse of the warehouse and transferred her account elsewhere. It happened on a chilly day just prior to Thanksgiving, when she went to the rear of the store to stand beside the stove. The proprietor had gone out and had accidentally left the warehouse door a-jar. The customer saw the interior.

Without going into details, it may be said she immediately decided that it was no place for her to deal. Her business now goes elsewhere.

Particular women will not stand for unclean habits in stores. When they are assured that their dealers' establishments are as clean as their own kitchens, there is little chance of losing them. But unsanitary stores are disastrous to trade. There are always plenty of orderly, well kept places to deal in, and these will be found out sooner or later.

GOOD TIME TO FEATURE LEMONS.

This is undoubtedly a time when the grocer should feature lemons, because he will find it greatly to his advantage to do so. There are several reasons for this.

New lemons are now on the market, and the larger shipments have brought reductions in prices at most centres. The downward movement varies on the several markets, according to how high prices were forced previous to the arrival of the new stock, but in most cases supplies of old lemons have been extremely scarce, prices were forced to a high point and are at present undergoing an appreciable reduction.

This of itself would make it easier for the dealer to sell lemons, while he has also good quality fruit to assist him. Not only is the quality good, but the color is excellent, which is rather an unusual thing for new crop lemons.

With all these points favorable to the sale of this line and with the season of good demand now opening up, those dealers who feature lemons should find results satisfactory.

USE WINDOW FROM NOW TILL XMAS.

During the next two months is an excellent and most profitable time for window display in the grocery store, perhaps more so than during any other period of the year.

In the first place, good window displays are possible because the goods which the trimmer now has available lend themselves readily to good window trims. At the present time we have the new canned goods and dried fruits, which may be arranged into some attractive trims, while as the year draws to a close, fancy lines of goods for the Christmas trade should be shown.

The time to give the greatest attention to your windows is when it is possible to make them draw the most business, and from now till the end of the Christmas trade is undoubtedly a time when results should range high. It is merely a case of making hay while the sun shines.

Many dealers have already begun to promote sales of goods for Christmas baking by window display. It is by no means too early. By getting as much of this business as possible over early, the latter period of the Christmas season can be more fully devoted to selling fancy lines of goods for Christmas gifits, nuts, candies, fruits, etc., which do not sell readily until close on the festive day. The window will undoubtedly bring handsome returns for the time spent on it.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

This is the season to sell soups.

The grocer who looks to the future, must sell high quality goods.

It is easier and more profitable to retain an old customer than hunt up a new one.

White beans are not the only ones that are high in price. The coffee bean is well up in the race.

The longer a leak is left unchecked the greater the destruction so far as grocery profits are concerned.

Preparations for war prevent it, say military men. Same applies to the stopping of bad accounts.

The more the clerk knows about the goods in stock, the more confidence he has in his ability to sell them.

When losses through the careless extension of credits are checked, a dealer can stamp himself as a capable manager.

A display of goods thrown promiscuously throughout the window has about as much drawing power as a mob has attacking power.

In entering your Christmas window in The Canadian Grocer's contest be sure to get a good photograph. An article on another page of this issue points the way.

Reproductions of hunting and Thanksgiving windows which have been appearing in The Grocer, indicate the greater attention being given to special occasions. Every dealer has splendid opportunities to increase sales in this regard.

There is no sound reason why Co-operative Societies should get concessions from the Federal Parliament which other joint stock companies cannot secure. The retail trade has been instrumental in blocking them so far, in their efforts to get special privileges, and it should be ever on the alert to do so again if the occasion arises.

How an R.G.A. Prevents Credit Losses

Vancouver Association Has Fo ms Which Members Request Credit Applicants to Fill Out—Customer States His or Her Own Limit and is, Therefore, U nder Obligation to Not Overrun It—The Information That the Form Presents.

How many grocers are there who sell goods on credit to certain customers and who never know when the money will reach the cash register? That many a dealer falls by the wayside on account of credit losses is an indisputable fact and if all the losses from this cause were known the list during the past ten years would be appalling.

In later years, however, the retailer —that is the aggressive retailer—has been paying more attention to his credits and is doing much to eliminate losses by demanding cash from doubtful pay and placing a time-limit on laboring classes who receive their wages once a week, every two weeks, or a month as the case may be. These methods have worked out successfully in a great many cases.

There is, too, the professional deadbeat who goes about from district to district and place to place, seeking credit which he never intends to meet with the money. In cases like this, the retail association can do much to discover his method if a proper system has been organized.

Vancouver Grocers Plan.

In Vancouver, B.C., the Retail Grocers' Association is exceedingly active in regard to extension of credits. A form has been prepared for all members to use in case some one asks for credit. This form is reproduced on this page and a study of it shows the importance to the retailer in having the questions thereon answered.

When this form has been filled out the dealer is requested to send it to the secretary of the association, who gives a report on it. The secretary is in a position to know the character of the majority of those who are asking for credit, and he may have in his possession information that is not included on the card.

Applicant Decides the Limit.

The form will show the occupation of the husband, where he is employed and the day of week or month the customer agrees to settle the account. One of the most important features of having this form filled out is that it includes the amount of credit wanted by the credit applicant. When this amount is stated it places the customer practically under an obligation to prevent the account from going above that figure. He or she has stated the amount desired and there is little difficulty in seeing that the account is never overrun. If the dealer had arranged this limit himself, the difficulty would be greater.

Another good feature of having the applicant decide the amount of credit required, is that he is likely to place it at a fairly low figure. A man or woman in looking ahead usually minimises the amount of purchases. When once the limit has been mutually agreed upon, the applicant will do his or her level best to meet the requirements at the stated time.

This is something that every dealer, whether a member of an association or not, should study. In opening a new account let him have the person applying for credit decide on the amount required. This will always prevent the account running into big figures and possibly being lost altogether when payment is pressed.

For the purpose of obtaining credit, I make the following declaration:

My full name is .....

Present address, No. .....

Tenant or owner?.....

My (husband's) present occupation is...

Where employed .....

I will pay on.....day of each.....

Amount of credit wanted.....

At what grocery did you last trade on credit? .....

Give other references .....

....

I do not owe any past due accounts to any other merchant.

Signed .....

No honest person will be offended at any reasonable precaution in the extending of credit. The above questions are only fair and reasonable.

Reproduction of form presented to credit applicants by members of Vancouver R.G.A.

The Cream Skimmed Off.

This matter of credit extensions should undoubtedly be given more consideration by the average grocer than at present. As many a merchant has said, credit losses take the cream off the profits, and if there are otherwise a sufficient number of leaks, failure is inevitable.

WHY MUSHROOM PRICES ADVANCED.

Authorities Attribute Cause to Feeding Molasses to Horses—An Interesting Discussion.

A rise in the price of imported French mushrooms brings out some interesting facts relating to the causes of this advance.

The immediate cause, of course, is the shortage of the supply, and the growth of the demand. But, back of that shortage, is a defect in fertilization—a defect which was the result of a different system of feeding horses adopted by the French Government.

Most of the mushrooms, as is generally known, are grown near Paris, in great artificial cellars constructed for the purpose. The manure to fertilize the beds is largely secured from Paris, and a quantity of it came from the cavalry stables. Now, two years ago, the experiment of feeding molasses to horses was tried, and as a direct result came destruction to so many mushroom beds that the damage done has not yet been repaired.

It seems the molasses was good for the horses, but it destroyed manure for enriching the mushroom beds. Just what harmful influence it had has not been discovered, but it is known that beds upon which this fertilizer was used, were destroyed.

Of course, in the two years which have elapsed since this manure was employed with such disastrous results, a good deal has been done to put the mushroom industry back on its old sound footing. At the present time some $25,000,000 worth of mushrooms are being exported from Paris, but this is not enough to meet the heavy world wide demand. So the present advance of one dollar a bushel has been struck.

THE BIBLE ON NET WEIGTHS.

Thou shalt not have in thy bag divers weights, a great and a small:

Thou shalt not have in thine house divers measures, a great and a small:

But thou shalt have a perfect and just weight, a perfect and just measure shalt thou have; that thy days may be lengthened in the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.

For all that do such things, and all that do unrighteously, are an abomination unto the Lord thy God.

Ye shall do no unrighteousness in judgment, in meter-yard, in weight or in measure.

Just balances, just weights, a just ephah, and a just hin shall ye have; I am the Lord your God, which brought you out of the land of Egypt.

Goods Shown in Form of Mountain Range

Methods Used to Introduce New Goods to Customers—Value of the Counter Display for This Purpose—Customers Look at the Goods and Then Make Enquiries About Them—A Dealer Who Sells Quality Goods With Best Profit Regardless of What Customer May Ask for.

"A regular mountain range of display," is the best laconic description that can be given of one side of Henderson & Co. store, on Brock Street, Kingston, Ont. In fact, the whole store is one big mass of display arranged with the idea of bringing goods prominently before customers. The majestic showing of goods cannot help but impress the person who visits the store.

This is particularly true of one side. This side has no counter. Commencing about 12 feet from the wall the first ridge of display begins and gradually in step form, rises up close to the ceiling. It is one gradual slope of goods from floor to ceiling, not all evenly arranged, but built up so as to give variety and add to the attractiveness. Steps and pyramids of canned, bottled and package goods constitute the construction. As said before it is not all evenly arranged but suggesting more than anything a miniature mountain range of groceries with pyramids and rows of goods following one another in succession. One cannot help but be impressed with its massiveness. Surmounted with a row of framed advertising material and with a metallic ceiling, the goods are shown to good effect.

Use Attractive Counter Displays.

There is always an extensive display of goods on the counter side. Recently there was a high row of soups adorning the end of the first counter. On a table in front of the counter, cheese was shown. There are always displays of canned goods farther to the rear as well as a biscuit cabinet. The arrangement, of course, is changed frequently.

The idea is to keep the goods forever prominently before people who visit the store. Mr. Henderson maintains that it pays. "If you don't put the goods out where people see them," he says, "you can't expect to sell them. We make a big feature of profuse display of goods. We get them out here and everyone who enters the store sees many articles in which they are interested, or at least, become interested in. Purchases naturally follow. When you get people looking at goods, you are approaching a sale.

"We get as many articles as possible out on the counter, too. When they are there, people will pick them up, examine them and make enquiries about them. The salesman has then a chance to talk about them to the customer."

Introducing Goods to Customers.

Mr. Henderson has a space on the main counter to place goods in which he particularly wishes to interest customers. These lines are frequently changed so that the customer will see something new on each visit. The big display also has to be frequently changed and re-arranged. In order to keep it looking attractive a good deal of dusting is required. The clerks put in their spare time at this work.

Mr. Henderson is another merchant who believes that the grocer can sell the brand of quality goods he wants to. "If people have confidence in you," he says, "they will buy what you recommend. However, the one essential is that you be sure of the quality of the goods first. This must first be made certain of before the goods are recommended for the grocer cannot afford to risk his reputation even for a little extra profit.

"I do not believe in direct substitution, however," he reasons. "For instance, if a customer sends in an order for a certain kind of jam, she gets that kind. I would not disappoint her. I would probably lose more than I would gain. However, if a customer comes in and asks for a certain one that pays a small profit and I have another of equal quality that allows me a better profit, I certainly will recommend it. In this way we find that we can sell what we want to. It is well in these days because many lines pay a small profit. The grocer finds it necessary to pick out the lines that will give him a fair margin above total cost.

"It would seem as if many merchants are in business not for themselves but the benefit of the manufacturer and the customer. They handle goods which allow a margin which will hardly pay expenses. If they have a specially ticklish customer who does a lot of complaining, they will pick out the best goods for her at the lowest price. About the only thing he gets out of it, is the trade. It would be better to do without such business," he claims.

During the summer months, the Henderson store does a big trade in camping goods with campers who have summer homes among the Thousand Islands. Kingston is the route by which many of them go to their summer homes and the Henderson store being close to the station and wharf and an old established business, it naturally secures a goodly portion of this business. They aim to be able to get big orders ready for shipment in a short time and still to have the goods done up properly. This is appreciated by customers and brings them back again when they need further supplies.

Most of the people who betake themselves to the Thousand Islands during the summer are well-to-do, the purchases are large, high class goods are wanted and as these are the best profit-payers, this business is desirable and is well worth, in Mr. Henderson's opinion, the extra attention given to it.

Retail Questions Discussed by R.M.A.

Secretary of Dominion Organization Strongly Opposes Co-operative Societies—Advises on the Need of Co-operation Among the Retail Trade—The Association Should be Supported by All—Officers Elected for Coming Year.

Peterboro, Nov. 14 — (Special). — About 60 retailers turned out to the banquet and annual meeting of the local Retail Merchants' Association last week and many matters of interest to the retailer of goods came up for discussion.

Questions Under Discussion.

Following topics were on the slate and the majority of them were gone into:—

"The removal of the time restrictions on the market."

"To enlist co-operation between manufacturers, wholesalers, producers and legitimate retail merchants."

"To have all weights and measures tested at the government's expense."

"The placing of a tax on all business done in the different municipalities by outside retail catalogue houses."

"To abolish the giving of coupons with goods."

"To co-operate in refusing to give donations, prizes, and buying of tickets during business hours."

"The drafting of a new peddlars' Act to include order takers."

"Credit reporting and collection of bad debts."

"Workmen's compensation in retail stores."

"The blocking of the Bulk Sales Act at the last session of the legislature and why."

"Parcels post."

"The abolition or reduction of the business tax on business places."

President Thos. E. Barrie occupied the chair, and the chief speaker of the evening was E. M. Trowern, Dominion secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada.

Co-operative Store Being Formed.

There is a movement on foot here to establish a co-operative society, the instigators believing that it would successfully lower the cost of living which evidently is charged up by them to the retailer.

Mr. Trowern strongly denounced the project, claiming that it was injurious to the community as a whole. He referred to the introduction of the stores into Toronto, and their complete failure. Of all the co-operative stores established in Canada only a few have had any measure of success, yet while they are established they injure the trade of the straight retailer.

If you took the retail merchants out of Peterboro," he said, "I would not give you much for what is left." Retailers pay the bulk of taxation and they were the best asset of any town or city."

Plea for Better Organization.

The speaker urged more co-operation among the trade. "You can't help yourself without helping the other fellow, and you can't help the other fellow without helping yourself," he declared.

He held that the retailer was not responsible for any increase in prices, and advised that people deal with honest merchants and then they would have no reason to complain. One thing wanted was legislation to punish the man who was guilty of crooked advertising. Mr. Trowern also claimed that the retailers were responsible for the troubles which confront them and appealed for greater co-operation in the building up of their association as well as the Dominion body. Merchants, he said, should not go into parliament or into municipal councils as coal dealers, grocers or dry goods men, but as members of the Retail Merchants' Association.

On a canvas in the banquet hall of the National Hotel, hung the following admonition:—

"Patronize your own merchants. They sell as cheaply and give you as good value as anyone. Boost for your own town."

Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows:—

President.—Thomas Barrie (fur dealer).

1st Vice-President — H. P. Morgan (hardwareman).

2nd Vice-President — R. C. Braund (grocer and general dealer).

Treasurer—J. H. Connal (grocer).

Secretary — N. C. Cameron (men's wear).

CANADIANS LIKE PRUNES.

It would seem as if Canada's appetite for prunes is by no means on the dwindle. At least after receiving her first portion of the crop of 1911, she went back for more than usual during the spring months of 1912. The export of prunes from the United States to Canada during the eight months ending August 31, 1912, was 4,041,596 pounds as compared with 2,446,151 pounds for the same period of 1911.

No Cheap Freight Rates for Co-operative Company

Chapleau, Ont., Reader Asks The Question—Claim Was Made by Railway Employees That They Could Get Cheaper Freight—Under the Present Railway Act Such Would be an Impossibility.

Editor, Canadian Grocer:—Enclosed please find our subscription fee of two dollars for renewal. The writer appreciates your weekly very much, and would not miss it weekly for quite a bit.

Ourselves in common with the other merchants of this town are up against a new experience, and wish to seek advice on one matter in particular. Our town is a railroad centre, and a promoter has formed a Co-operative Co., and succeeded in getting a large number of railway employees here to take stock, promising them to cut the cost of living in half, and also to give them a 20 per cent. dividend on their money. The one thing however, that we are anxious to get advice on is this. One of the reasons that we are forced to get fairly long prices here, is the enormous freight rates we are compelled to pay. This company claim that on account of their stockholders being largely railway employees, that they are to have their goods delivered here at about half rate. We are anxious to know if the law will permit such an action on the company's part, even if they were willing to do so. We think this is a question of importance, not only to us here, but to the retail trade as a whole. We would be pleased to hear your opinion on this matter.

Yours very truly,
READER.

Chapleau, Ont., Nov. 8.

Editorial Note.—While the Canadian Grocer was of the opinion that it would be impossible for any railway company to discriminate against the general public by allowing special freight rates to any one class or company, to make sure of the point, the matter was taken up with the freight department of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

"Under the Railway Act," The Grocer was told, "all the freight tariffs of the company have to be published, and those rates published are open for any person to inspect or take advantage of. Therefore, there could be no lower rates allowed to one party or company than another."

Current News of the Week

Quebec and Maritime Provinces.

W. Rupert Willett, of the Willett Fruit Co., St. John, N.B., died recently.

A draft agreement has been ratified at St. John, N.B., whereby the law firm of Mitchell & Casgrain, Montreal, will, within 30 days, deposit with the chamberlain, of the city, the sum of $100,000, as a guarantee that they will erect a sugar refinery within two years, and operate this to the capacity of 2,000 barrels per day.

A general meeting of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association, is to be held in Montreal Saturday night, November 16th. The time for election of officers is drawing near, and at this meeting nominations will be made. This is not, of course, the biggest item of business but the question of having a banquet at the time of elections in December will also be discussed. The idea seems to be that such a gathering should prove a great success.

Shirley Ogilvie, for a long time connected with the Ogilvie Flour Mills, has severed his active connection with the office management, though he will continue as a director of the company. In view of this break the officials and the whole office staff, gathered last week to express their regret. C. R. Hosmer, president of the company, on behalf of the directors and the employes, presented Mr. Ogilvie with a handsome solid silver tea set, expressing also the regret all felt at Mr. Ogilvie's decision to retire from the active management. Mr. Black also spoke, referring to the pleasure that all had felt in working with Mr. Ogilvie.

W. A. Gordon, of Florence, Ont., has sold his entire stock of drygoods and groceries to Wm. Drew and James McIntyre. The new proprietors are now in possession.

Wm. Miller and D. Bell, Yonge street, Toronto grocers, with Controller Alf. McGuire, were in Buffalo on Tuesday of last week to witness the celebration of the presidential election.

H. G. E. Choate, son of A. F. Choate, general merchant, Warsaw, Ont., was in Toronto this week attending convention of the Horticultural Society. He called on several of the wholesale houses while there.

There has been much talk of late about the middleman being the chief cause of the increased cost of living. It has been especially claimed that farm produce costs much more by going through his hands instead of straight from the producer. Cases frequently discredit this claim. One instance became evident last Saturday. New laid eggs on the Toronto farmers' market that day were being sold at 60c per dozen. At the same time, nowhere in the city were retailers getting as high a figure as that for new laid eggs. This would seem to show that marketing eggs through the wholesaler and retailer can be done at a smaller cost than the producer coming to the city to deal directly with the consumer.

WHAT SHOULD BUYING PRICE BE?

Editor Canadian Grocer.—"If a grocer's expenses are 17 to 18 per cent. of each dollar's business done, what should he pay for a 25-cent article?"

READER.

This was a question which appeared in last weeks' issue when retailers and clerks were asked to do a little figuring on same. One of the replies received reasons as follows:—"Supposing Reader desires to make 6 per cent. net profit on turnover (he does not state what net profit he wants) he would pay 19 cents for the article, providing his expenses are 18 cents on every dollar's worth of business done. The total margin would have to be 18 plus 6 per cent, or 24 per cent of the selling price which is 25 cents. Twenty-four per cent. of 25 cents is 6 cents and 6 cents subtracted from 25 leaves 19 cents—the cost. Trusting this may prove to be sound reasoning,

Yours very truly,
BRANTFORD CLERK.

An Ottawa dealer interested in the problem submits the following reply:—

"In answer to your problem 'What should the buying price be,' it would of course depend on how much over and above cost of doing business that the grocer wished to make. I consider that 7 per cent. is about a reasonable net profit to make. Figuring on this basis, an article that is to sell for 25 cents, should cost him 18¾ cents or $2.25 per dozen.

"The total percentage of profit would be 18 plus 7 or 25 per cent. To make 25 per cent. on a dollar, the cost would have to be 75 cents, while with a 25-cent article the cost would need to be one-quarter as much or 18¾ cents."

Editor Canadian Grocer,—Answering your question on page 38 of last week's Grocer, I would say he should pay 18c for the article to retail at 25c. I arrive at conclusions this way:

I think 10 per cent. net profit on turnover is reasonable, and 10 per cent of 25 is 2½c
Cost of handling or 18 per cent is ..4½c

Total 7

This deduction from selling price gives cost 18c.

Yours truly,
R. R. POWELL.

Montreal, Nov. 14.—An exceedingly busy time this. Orders are pouring in. Wholesalers are experiencing a good deal of trouble filling orders. For some lines they simply have not the goods to make deliveries possible. The satisfactory state of affairs takes away from the interest which price changes bring to the market. On the whole lines are quiet just now, and movements are few. This week has seen one or two changes of importance, but for the greater part prices remain at figures quoted for some time back.

Tomatoes, in the standard three-pound tins, have been lowered in price, or at least some jobbers who had high ideas are a little easier in their views. At the time of the opening price of $1.37½, some jobbers jumped their ideas up as high as $1.70, but are now moderating them somewhat.

There has also come a fall in canned pink salmon which now is quoted at $1 a dozen in place of the old figures of $1.20.

SUGAR.—Refiners have been gobbling up all raw sugar that was offered for immediate delivery, evidently being anxious to get good stock on hand. Then word has come that snow falls on the continent have done harm to the crops. This, it is feared, may so harm the sugar beats that supply will not be nearly so large as has confidently been expected.

But this state of affairs has had no influence locally. Prices have not been changed, and from what can be learned no immediate change is likely.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES. — Corn syrups following easier corn values have been reduced 15 cents per case, and bulk ¼ cent per pound. Some lines of starch are also down ¼ and ½ cent per pound.

Volume of business is increasing, both for syrups and molasses. This is what might have been expected, the cooler weather having a stimulating effect on this market.

DRIED FRUITS. — Several price changes have come here, one downward, several in upward direction. Evaporated apples have been put at 7½c in place of 8c. Valencia raisins, on other hand, have been advanced, approximately 1½ cents. Even at these higher figures quotations are almost nominal, for there is but little stock in the city. California raisins, however, are plentiful, the crop there having been one of best on record. In both cooking and table raisins, therefore, retail demand, which is heavy, will be quite readily met.

Dates have been selling well, and it appears demand will be heavier. New stock which arrived only a little time ago is practically exhausted and handlers are looking eagerly for a new shipment. Unless this comes to hand shortly there is going to be shortage.

Figs are moving better now, than since last year. The supply is only fair.

TEA.—Talk in the States is that a tax is to be put upon tea. Many years ago, in Boston, it will be remembered there was trouble over just such an impost. It is not likely that the Democrats will attempt to put a duty here, for it would bring the cry of taxing the poor man's breakfast table.

Canadian markets are of course largely affected by those in the States so that this tax talk is of importance.

At the time tea is quiet.

Starch.—Some lines lower.

Toronto, Nov. 14. — Wholesalers are apparently having their trials and tribulations this year. The troubles are ones which they have had a taste of on previous occasions—that of the slow movement of freight, due to congestion and shortage of cars. It seems to be particularly bad at present time, and this is quite a critical period—a time when goods intended for lake and rail points at least should be moving forward. They are going out in good volume from local jobbing houses, but in most cases, orders are short of some particular lines.

"The freight situation is bad and is giving us all kinds of trouble," said one wholesaler this week. "It seems to be worse within the province, and includes both car lots and less than cars. The close of navigation is not far off, and we are still waiting for many lines that have to go by this route."

Another jobber held up his hands in horror when the freight question was mentioned. At last he found speech and described the situation as "simply awful." "There is not a day goes past," he said, "that a lot of orders do not go out, short a number of lines."

One important price change of the week has been a reduction in corn products as predicted in last issue. Both corn syrups and starches are lower.

SUGAR. — There is no particular change in general situation, other than a slightly firmer feeling in nearby sugar. For immediate supplies, refiners have had to pay a shade higher figure, but for future months, lower prices are still ruling. The result is a slightly steadier feeling for immediate future, but outlook on whole shows no alteration. Demand, of course, continues along normal lines.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES. — It was pointed out last week that lower prices on corn syrup were warranted by reduced prices on new crop corn. This week, prices on corn syrups have been reduced 15 cents per case, while the bulk has gone down one-quarter cent per pound. We quote the new prices in our quotations. In sympathy with lower corn values, certain lines of starch have also been lowered in price. The declines have been on the lower grades of bulk, the drop being one-quarter and one-half cents.

The United States is expected to have largest corn crop that it has ever produced. The preliminary estimate of total production for this year was 3,169,137,000 bushels, as compared with 2,531,488,000 last year, and the record crop of 2,927,416,000 in 1906.

Demand for syrups is on good scale at present time.

DRIED FRUITS.—Market is now adorned with full array of new season's fruit. The first shipments of California prunes and seeded raisins came in some two weeks ago, but further shipments are now coming to hand. As reported last week there is a general firmer feeling in coast fruits, and especially is this noticeable in seeded raisins, and it is suggested that market has probably reached the bottom; at least, there appears to be more confidence. Local jobbers are pretty well fixed as regard supplies of prunes until the new year. It will be raisins, currants, peels and similar lines that will be in limelight for next six weeks or so. There has been an especially big run on seeded raisins this year on account of their low price, and high price at which Valencias are ruling.

The second steamer with dates arrived in New York this week, and some supplies off her are expected here before week is out. Their arrival will mean lower prices, as values on the second shipments are about 1 cent below the first. The first arrivals were well taken up as the market was bare of dates.

Evaporated apples still have a downward tendency. The size of this year's pack will not be known for a while yet, as packing is still going on, but it will be large.

TEA.—A routine trade is being done in tea. There are no special new features, high grade teas still maintaining their firm tone, while there is a plentitude of low grade at easy prices.

COFFEE.—Same pointers given last week, are true of market at present time. As has been pointed out, several firms have recently advanced prices on standard blends, finding it necessary to do so because of substantial rise in green coffee, especially in the lower grades. It would seem as if the advances of manufacturers are well warranted by higher prices which they have to pay for their supplies.

SPICES.—There is an appreciable demand for spices reported by both grinders and wholesalers. Indeed, trade has been good during the whole fall, and at present time retailers are beginning to anticipate their Christmas wants. One manufacturer handling spices, coffees and associated lines, stated this week that his biggest increase in sales has been in spices.

There are no special new features to markets. A general tone of steadiness is present, cloves, peppers and nutmegs being included. Celery seed may go a little lower.

BEANS.—Beans show little alteration as yet from extremely high figure at which they opened. They are coming in slowly, and in addition, quality is not showing up well. probably result of much wet weather. It would seem as if the Canadian article would have to go considerably lower in price. Good stock Austrian beans are coming in at a lower figure, and besides the quality of Canadian beans has to be taken into consideration.

BROOMS.—There are lower prices being quoted on brooms by some firms, new prices being about 25c per dozen down. Some dealers were expecting low prices on brooms this year on account of large broom corn crop, but amount of really good corn is said to be quite small, while the lower grade stock cannot be used to advantage on account of its length, so that brooms are costing manufacturers more than low prices of poor corn would indicate. Indeed, some makers think high grade brooms may be firmer.

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.—Interest in canned goods at the present time is confined mostly to shipping and receiving of new stock. Retailers have in some cases been complaining that their goods have not arrived soon enough. This would indicate that retailers' stocks are low.

Some jobbers are predicting that lobsters, as during the past two years, will be all cleaned up before the new packing season comes around again. Orders placed early in the season were in most cases filled this year, but local brokers attempted to take no further orders after early summer as packers did not have the goods to offer.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

Winnipeg, Nov. 14.—A noticeable improvement in business has set in with gratifying reports of threshing practically completed and satisfactory movement of western grain. The last estimate of North-west Grain Dealers' Association reports 92,000,000 marketed and 95,000,000 yet to come. Bank clearings last week reached enormous total of $47,574,725. Collections will undoubtedly improve from now on as crop money gets back into ordinary business channels.

Orders for Christmas trade are now coming in and the great bulk of shipments will be made during next two weeks. Christmas trade should beat all records as never was general prosperity more in evidence in Canadian West than at present time.

There are no changes to note in prices in general groceries this week. Apricots and dates are a little stiffer. There is some speculation as to what effect war in Europe will have on dried fruit trade. Currants, Sultanas and figs are lines principally affected. Figs are undoubtedly going to be scarce and dear. Locally stocks of currants and Sultanas are likely to be sufficient for immediate wants. British stocks are reported to be fairly heavy. On whole it would seem to be good policy for retailers to order supplies of dried fruits without delay as certain disorganization at primary points is admitted and will not be long in affecting remotest arteries of trade.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, Nov. 14.—Not only has trouble in Balkans tended to have some effect upon wheat market in Canada, but it has actually interfered already with importations of dried fruits, raisins, in particular, and figs also. Shipments have been considerably retarded, and it looks as if there might be scarcity in figs, especially before coming of festive season. Local dealers who ordered in mid-summer have not yet received deliveries and are now beginning to abandon hope of same. Market contains no new Sultana raisins as yet, and it is hard to tell when Eastern disturbances will allow shipping conditions to be resumed in normal state. Shipments of early dates were received this week, and are selling at advanced price which will likely be lowered when new stocks become more plentiful.

Canadian beans still remain in same unpromising condition with little hope of relief, according to local advices. Damage done by bad weather is not exactly known as yet and no definite prices will be given until thorough knowledge of conditions is at hand. Opening prices on new crop are expected to be stiff and at present dealers are asking from $2.80 to $3.40. There was increased buying of flour this week at lowered prices after drop in Manitoba, although purchases were not extraordinarily heavy, as local merchants are regarding situation as being very uncertain.

Sugar market still retains its easier tone and there is nothing to indicate that prices will be higher. Encouraging reports, with a few exceptions, are received from both the South and Europe concerning crops and should weather conditions continue favorable, there is little reason to expect that prices will be higher. Molasses market remains about same with little prospect of any change for the better. The provision market shows a much stronger tendency and reports received here would tend to show that beef will go even higher than it now stands, and pork will also be firmer.

In dairy produce, butter is scarce mostly because of holdings being made for the winter, and prices are firmer. Eggs are slightly advanced and hennery stock is scarce.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, Nov. 14.—Many large consignments of fruit are arriving from Californian ports. Eggs are still scarce on Pacific Coast. Ranch eggs are following lead of local new laid in soaring game. Eastern cold storage variety is quite plentiful, big supplies of these being held for probable greater dearth of local new laid and ranch eggs. Local new laid are bringing 45 cents a dozen in wholesale market but will inevitably go much higher. New Zealand butter is plentiful, prints going at 34 and solids at 33½, both being retailed at 40. List of wholesale prices follow:

SMOKED MEATS.—Hams, medium, 19; bacon, medium, 22; bacon, smoked, rolled, 23c.

EGGS.—Local, fresh per dozen, 45c; fresh Eastern, 38c; selected eggs, 34c;

BUTTER.—Local creamery, 35c; Eastern townships, prints, 32½c; Eastern townships solids, 32c; New Zealand, prints, 34c; New Zealand, solids, 33½c.

FISH.—Haddies, 10c; salt mackerel, bbls. $14; salt herring, bbls., $5.50; halibut, 15s and 25s., 13c.

FRUIT.—Oranges, valencia, case, $4.25 to $4.50; grape fruit, California, per case, $6.25; lemons, per case, $6.75 to $7; apples, Jonathan, case, $1.75 to $2; apples, snow, per case, $1.75 to $2.25; Northern Spy, case, $1.50 to $1.75; cooking, case, $1 to $1.25.

NUTS.—Sack lots: Walnuts (Cal. No. 1), lb., 20c; Cal. No. 2, 17c; brazils, lb. 17c; almonds, lb., 17c; filberts, lb., 15c; pine nuts, lb., 20c; peanuts, roasted, per sack, $8; peanuts, raw, per sack, $7.25; cocoanuts, per doz., $1.10; honey, case, $4.75; dates, Fords, box $1.50; dates, yellow, lb. 6½ to 7c.

FIG CROP SHORT.

As the trade well knows figs are higher this year than last. A spell of dry hot weather in early summer in the Smyrna fig district, proved adverse to the growth of the crop. Wet weather also interfered with the drying of the fruit, with the consequence that it is said that the quantity available will only be about two-thirds of last years' amount.

TRADE NOTES.

For the eight months ending Aug. 31, 1912, Canada imported 952,870 boxes of oranges from the United States as compared with 993,999 boxes for the same period of 1911.

W. Elliott Sprott, secretary of the St. Vincent Arrowroot Growers' and Exporters' Association, has received word that St. Vincent Arrowroot has been awarded a gold medal diploma at the Canadian National Exhibition.

The first annual convention of the National Federation of Retail Merchants of the United States will be held at St. Louis, Mo., from Nov. 19 to 21. E. M. Trowern, Dominion secretary of the R. M. A. of Canada, is scheduled to speak on "A Mesage From Canada."

Pro and Con for Cold Storage Warehouse

Montreal Alderman Makes Statements Implicating Cold Storage Owners—Latter Reply With Statistics Claiming There is No Trust—Little Money Being Made Says One Cold Storage Man—Importations Have to be Made

Montreal, Nov. 14—(Special). — In Montreal an agitation against the cold storage houses was started a little while ago. With Ald. Blumenthal as the chief agitator, and the papers—somewhat short of copy after the termination of the Becker case—glad to voice his opinions, all was merry for a time. The cold storages, according to Ald. Blumenthal were the menace of the country. He accused them of being a trust; of being conspirators to force up prices upon the wary. He declared for reforms. He, and kindred spirits, held a mass meeting one Sunday when the alleged abuse was again denounced. That, of course, was several days ago, and now the agitation has quieted down, but the statements made will be of interest to hundreds of grocers.

Rather Sweeping Statement.

Some of the remarks made by Ald. Blumenthal were quite sweeping. Those in closer touch with the food situation claim that Ald. Blumenthal's statements show how imperfectly he has ascertained the facts. For instance the alderman remarked:—"There is enough food in the cold storage houses and refrigerating plants of Montreal to feed the whole population of Canada for six months to come"

That was perhaps going a little too far. Quite possibly. "Enough food in Montreal to feed the whole population of Canada for six months to come"—well there are about eight millions of people in Canada, all hearty eaters.

Again Ald. Blumenthal declared::—

"The cost of living is not due to the scarcity of the various commodities necessary for food. It is because of the trust of which I speak and which beyond a doubt exists in Montreal at the present time."

But to get to the conclusion of the alderman's attack. It is, he says, his intention of ascertaining if the Montreal city charter gives the city power to govern the period during which food stuffs may be kept in cold storage.

"If the city has that power," he stated, "I shall introduce a motion in the council calling for the adoption of a by-law which will prevent foodstuffs being kept in cold storage or refrigerating plants for more than three months."

No Trust Says Packer.

Here, now, is the other side as given by Peter Laing of the Laing Packing and Provision Co., Ltd.:

"There is no food trust," he says. "The idea is perfectly ridiculous. The Montreal men are all in strong competition with one another at the present time. There is plenty of it too, and it is pretty hard to make a dollar just now."

"If those who state that a 'food trust' exists in Montreal will furnish themselves with Government statistics they will find that there has been and is at present a shortage of live stock in Canada."

"Lack of farmers to go in for stock raising is largely responsible for the present situation."

Buying Butter From New Zealand.

John A. Gunn, of Gunn, Langlois & Co., also takes issue with the contentions made, bringing out one or two facts which probably came as a surprise to a good number who believe that the district about Montreal is able to supply the needs of the city

"How could a trust exist, especially with regard to butter," stated Mr. Gunn, "when nearly all the local dealers are buying imported New Zealand butter to supply the demand. There is a big shortage of Canadian butter just now and heavy shipments have to be made to keep up the supply."

A Challenge Issued.

Another produce man, Mr. Vaillancourt, quoted a number of figures to disprove the charges made, and ended by issuing a challenge:—

"Does this look like a trust?" asked Mr. Vaillancourt, as he produced a letter from a Renfrew firm quoting dairy butter at 26½ cents, f.o.b. Renfrew. The freight from Renfrew is ¾ of a cent, and we sell that butter at twenty-eight cents, leaving three-quarters of a cent for our profit, out of which we must pay handling and overhead charges. Does that look as if there was a combination to keep prices up? And this butter is not table butter, it is only good for cooking. To-day's quotations at Cowansville, which is a big centre, are 30⅛ and 30¼ cents per lb. f.o.b. Cowansville for creamery butter. These prices are high, but the dealer is getting no benefit from them. It is the farmer who is asking now. Why, we have been unable to ship any butter to England this year, there is so much local demand.

"If Ald. Blumenthal wants to get five thousand dollars for the poor of his division all he has to do is prove one of his charges with reference to butter, cheese and eggs."

Explaining the inadequacy of the supplies which come from the neighborhood of Montreal, Ald. P. W. McLagan, Westmount, of the cold storage firm of Lovell & Christmas, said:—

"Every winter eggs have to be imported from the United States for Montreal consumption. Last March and April 20,000 boxes of New Zealand produce had to be brought to Montreal," he said to-day.

"Orders are now being taken here for New Zealand butter for January delivery.

"Pork has always to be brought in for eastern consumption, and beef is imported for western consumption.

"If butter, eggs, etc., were not bought up by cold storage people when they are cheap there would be a glut in the market, and in turn if not cold-stored, prices would be prohibitive in winter, when hens are not laying."

TOBACCO GROWING IN ONTARIO.

Farmers Receiving Gross Returns of $250 Per Acre.

In the south-western peninsula of Ontario, tobacco growing has become a profitable branch of farming. In order to place the industry on a substantial footing the Dominion Department of Agriculture some three years ago established an experimental station at Harrow, in the county of Essex. The station has been equipped with a suitable barn, a drying shed and other necessary facilities. This is but one of several Tobacco Experiment Stations operated by the Tobacco Division which is in charge of F. Charlan, a tobacco specialist. The Harrow station is in charge of W. A. Barnet, B. S.A., who has prepared a report of the work carried on under his supervision in 1911.

The station which comprises thirty-eight and a half acres is carried on to some extent as an ordinary farm. Last year fifteen acres were devoted to tobacco experiments in which nine of improved Burley and six of Warne varieties were dealt with. Tests were made with different kinds of beds, methods of curing, various combinations of fertilizers, seed selection, combating the tobacco worm, etc.

Referring to the returns from bright tobacco as compared with Burley, Mr. Barnet concludes that white Burley is preferable for the average farmer to grow. During the past three years the average price secured for this tobacco has been twenty-five cents per pound, or an average gross return of two hundred and fifty dollars per acre.

Relief to Acute Rolled Oats Shortage

Expected Shortly—Conditions of Supply Have Been Bad in Eastern Canada—Mills Have Good Volume of Orders on Hand—Some Dealers Looking for Lower Flour Prices Later on—Normal Demand Reported.

Relief to the acute rolled oats shortage that has been ruling in Eastern Canada for some time is expected shortly, and in fact has already been relieved to some extent. Of course, the western part of the Dominion having access to new oats earlier, did not feel the squeeze so much, but the conditions of supply in the East have been extremely bad, some centres being particularly hard hit. Relief did not come as soon as anticipated, for reason that mills on account of the car shortage, could not get the raw material from lake ports.

However, a certain amount is now being fed out by mills, but it will take some little time to get back to normal. At present time all mills are well loaded up with orders and it will take some time to catch up. This being the case, there will not be same inclination to reduce prices, as if millers were anxious for business. However, there is a good crop of oats not only in Canada but also in the United States, and this should eventually have a bearing on prices of rolled oats.

There is no change in Manitoba flour since last week's reduction of 20 cents per barrel in Eastern Canada. As pointed out last week, there were those who expected that the reduction would be greater. "Contracts with bakers have been at lower figure," stated a flour broker this week, "and apparently millers can well afford a lower figure. The price being quoted to the retail grocer at the present time is exactly the same as a year ago—at least this is the case in Eastern Canada. Wheat, on the other hand is considerably lower. A year ago, cash wheat on the Winnipeg market was worth 97, while to-day the same grade is quoted at 86. It seems to me, therefore, that there will be further reductions later on."

MONTREAL.

FLOUR.—The decline of 20c a barrel, announced last week, has tended to stimulate business. Orders have been larger, and shipping departments have been working hard making deliveries. No further decline is talked of as yet.

FLOUR.—There is no change in flour since last week's decline of 20 cents per barrel. Flour is now at same price as one year ago. There were many who expected that reduction when it came would be larger on account of the low prices that were known to have been quoted to bakers on contract. Millers are not predicting any further decline, in the immediate future at any rate.

CEREALS—The acute situation in regard to supplies of rolled oats has not been relieved as soon as some of the mills expected. The Toronto office of one big firm for instance, received 200 bags on Tuesday, the first bulk goods since the first of October. Needless to say, this was of small account as wholesalers and retailers have been hollering for goods for some time. Some mills have been a little better situated, but conditions on the whole have been extremely bad. Mills have all a good volume of orders ahead at present, so that no reduction for a time is looked for.

FIRM N.B. POTATO MARKET.

St. John, N.B., Nov. 13.—(Special).—Hundreds of barrels of New Brunswick potatoes are going to Upper Canada markets, particularly to Montreal. Local wholesale dealers are finding it difficult to make purchases of the quantities they require, because of many buyers from Upper Canadian houses along the north shore, taking all that farmers will allow, and arranging for several carloads to be shipped to Montreal, thus lessening chances of local dealers to procure what they want for consumption here.

Slightly higher prices were offered by Montreal buyers than what were given by St. John merchants but latter would readily come to time if they could buy what they desired. One dealer who had been promised a carload found it sold when he wrote to have it sent along, and it is understood that others have had same experience. In the river sections and about the neighboring counties this is not so generally the case because supplies are being brought to the city in large quantities.

Oranges and Grape Fruit Selling Well

New Florida Oranges Taken Up Rapidly—Large Crop and Reasonable Prices—Grapefruit Improving in Quality—New Lemons Lower—Both Quality and Color Good—Better Keeping Cranberries Coming.

Florida fruits are receiving a good deal of attention at the present time, both new oranges and grapefruit meeting with a favorable reception. Unfortunately, the first shipments of grapefruit were not all to be desired, having been sent out before they had reached a mature state, and thus were not taken up by the public as well as they otherwise would have been. However, the quality is now improving, and as the appearance from the first has been all to be desired, the retailer should find this line will sell well. Sizes this year are the most desirable, running from 54's to 80's.

New Florida oranges have been taken up well, even the first shipments being of quite good quality. They also are in desirable sizes this year, ranging from 150's to 216's. The yield will be large, being estimated as much as 50 per cent. larger than last year, and as a result prices are at a reasonable level, and this will no doubt mean a good demand for this line this year. The lower prices on Floridas is having a tendency to ease values on late Valencias.

The expected and predicted has happened in lemons, the larger shipments having caused a weakening in prices. Of course this reduction has been much larger at some centres than others, depending on how high prices on the old crop had been boosted. There still seems room for reduction at a good many centres. The quality of the new lemons has been good, and so has the color, which is not altogether a usual thing for the early shipments. Lemons should sell well with the retailer at the present time.

Early black cranberries are nearly through, and their place will be taken by the late Howes. These will bring a little higher price, as they are much better keepers. There is a seasonable demand for cranberries. Reports from United States points are to the effect that there is a good supply of cranberries available, and that prices will not likely be forced up during their Thanksgiving season, which comes the end of this month, as is usually the case around this holiday.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS.—But few price changes have been noted this week—though what was reported in the last issue, relating to the probably downward movement of grape fruit, is given further support. The price of grape fruit (Florida) has been dropped to $4.00, a decline of 25c.

Cranberries are selling exceedingly well—though the supply is none too large. Prices remain higher than for past years, but there appears little reason to expect any decrease.

Oranges and lemons remain steady, and the call for these lines is very large. For apples, too, the demand is large. Many barrels are being shipped privately as Christmas presents. More are being bought for winter consumption. The basket trade is perhaps generally larger than that in barrels.

Ontario basket fruit, has, of course, practically ceased to exist. There is, however, a little on the market, but the quotations given are really nominal.

VEGETABLES.—The market has been brisk, but few price changes have come to cause any excitement. Canadian red onions have been dropped slightly, the new quotation being 1¾c. In spite of talk of a probable change, potatoes have not been raised.

For sweet potatoes the demand is becoming quite heavy. Also there is a big call for cabbages and cauliflower. Generally, business is good, but the bad condition of the roads, which makes it hard for farmers to get to the market, is having a slightly depressing effect.

GREEN FRUIT.—The outstanding feature in the market is the lower prices on lemons, which, as pointed out last week, could be expected to be reduced. The larger shipments have caused prices to be lowered down to $5 per case, which is lower than for some time. Retailers should find them to sell much better now, more so as the color is good. New Florida oranges have been received and their reasonable price has caused an easiness in late Valencias. Grapefruit is showing up better in quality.

Grapes are still on the market in fair quantity, considering the lateness of the season. A good volume of apples is coming forward at the present time, selling at $2 to $3.50.

VEGETABLES.—There was a somewhat easier feeling in potatoes last week as a result of larger receipts, but it is hardly so noticeable just now. The better quality of stock coming in has given dealers more confidence in taking hold for their winter requirements. Ontarios are quoted at $1 and New Brunswick at $1.10, but these prices are being shaded in some instances.

The Clerks' Page: Facts About Goods Sold

There was a time and not very long ago either when the housewife considered with a considerable degree of horror the purchase of canned goods from the grocer. That day has passed, and there has in the last few years been a wonderful advance in the canned goods business. New lines are constantly being put up in this form. A pineapple preserved whole in heavy syrup is a recent importation from Havana which is now on the market and offered to those in search of something new for dessert.

Canned milk (condensed and evaporated) is a line which has been making rapid headway in recent years. In fact the demand has increased at such a pace that most factories are unable to catch up with orders. At the present time many are behind as far as 60 days. It has become a necessity in many districts. Not only does it possess all the advantages of fresh milk, but it possesses none of its disadvantages, a feature which has materially helped its sale.

Condensed milk is ordinary milk mixed principally with sugar to preserve it, and as the name implies "condensed."

Evaporated milk is fresh milk, without anything added, merely evaporated and relieved of the water which it contains. It is unsweetened and preserved by sterilization only.

Little did our fathers as they sipped their coffee years ago, dream that to-day we would have this beverage in a condensed ready-for-use form. Not only this, but we now have coffee, milk and sugar combined ready for use. Its sale is on the increase as is also that for cocoa combined with milk and sugar in the same manner.

The prejudice which the housewife once held against canned and condensed soups is fast disappearing. It will continue to disappear if the grocer will hold soups up to his customers in their proper light.

The dealer and clerk can now offer just as good an article as it is possible for the housewife to put up in her own kitchen. He can recommend them both for their flavor and their nutritive value. They are prepared in such a manner as to possess these qualities.

Now is an exceptional season for the sale of soups. Every clerk should push them.

Following items are taken from The Canadian Grocer of November 18, 1892:

"A few days ago a well-known St. Thomas merchant received a letter from London with five dollars enclosed, which was signed, "Never mind who." The individual has evidently become conscience stricken."

Editorial Note.—What a feast the retail trade would have to-day if every live debtor were to become conscience stricken such as this London man! The result—but why consider results, the thing is not going to happen.

"There has been a good local and export demand for eggs and prices are steady. We quote values at 18 to 20 cents for held fresh, and 15 to 16 for Western lines."

Editorial Note.—The above is taken from our Montreal markets of 20 years ago. What a difference from to-day and all because of the great increase of population during the past two decades! To-day, fresh eggs sell for 32 cents to the trade in Montreal, an advance of almost a hundred per cent.

A report is given in our issue of Nov. 18, 1892, of the November meeting of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association in Richmond Hall when the following were present: President Booth, Messrs. Gibson, Mills, Barron, White, Lindsay, Johnston, McEvoy, Doyle, Hambly, Sykes, Williamson, Saunders, Clark, McCleary and Thompson. At this meeting, Mr. Clark moved the association signify to the Provincial Secretary that it is in favor of the Garnishee Act being so amended that $5 be the limit instead of $25. This was carried. At the present time this is a live question, the Ontario R.G.A. having the matter of a petition in hand as reported in last week's issue.

DISASTROUS LEAKS

When canned goods, tea, breakfast foods, spices, etc., are left on the shelves in the grocery for more than the allotted time, what happens? Labels on the canned goods become dusty and dirty and the contents of the cans often impaired; the tea loses its original flavor and absorbs foreign aromas; the breakfast foods lose their crispness and the essential oils of the spices become spent.

All this mean direct losses to the retailer, but worst of all so far as he is concerned, they are losses which he could prevent with a little care to system. When the sale of one of such lines happens to be made, some customer is going to suffer. A complaint may or may not be submitted, and if it is not, the dealer has no means of righting the injustice. In any case the reputation of the goods sold is bound to suffer and this will work injury to the business.

To prevent this leak someone must give close attention to the stock. When new goods are received they should be kept at the rear of the shelves or in the warehouse till the previous shipment of the same line has been disposed of. Dead stock should be prevented. The longer it lies dormant the greater the size of the leak. Thousands of dollars are lost to the retail trade every year from such a cause.

Eternal vigilance is the cure.

Colder Weather Would Help Oyster Trade

Seasonable Trade Being Done But Colder Weather Would Benefit Business—Otherwise Conditions are Favorable—Fish Moving Satisfactorily — More Demand for Smoked Varieties.

Trade in oysters is appreciable for the season of the year, but colder weather would add a great deal of impetus to trade. Outside of climatic conditions which are none too favorable, everything at the present is conducive to a good volume of business. The quality of the oyster which was a little off at the beginning of the season, is now well up on a par with this time last year. Therefore, conditions, as soon as the weather takes a dip downward should be such as to make trade extremely brisk.

Demand for fish continues in a satisfactory manner. From now on there will be a gradual change from fresh to frozen lines. This is already noticeable in some lines. Smoked varieties are moving quite briskly, with supplies quite plentiful. As far as prices are concerned there has been little or no change of late.

QUEBEC.

MONTREAL.—Halibut is now scarce, though strangely enough the price has tended downward. Quotations, however, are largely nominal, as fresh stock is nearly over.

Frozen halibut is arriving in excellent condition, all sizes being available—small, medium and large.

Fresh haddock and cod are other lines of which a good supply is available. There has been no change in the prices here. Neither is there any change for lake fish. Last week fresh lake fish were scarce. They are scarcer now, though there fortunately is a fairly good supply of pan frozen stock.

Smoked fish are plentiful. No price changes have occurred here either, but the demand is growing in very satisfactory style. The cool, fall like weather is doing good.

Oysters are moving better with each week. The supply is good, and prices are not unreasonable. There has been no change in the figures during the week, nor is an immediate change regarded as likely.

ONTARIO.

TORONTO. — As pointed out last week, there will be a gradual change from fresh to frozen varieties of fish. Only frozen halibut is now being sold, and next week frozen trout will be started in on. There is an increasing trade in smoked fish lines, and altogether there is a good seasonable business present.

Although oysters have been doing fairly well, colder weather would help this line considerably, as with less cost of refrigeration more dealers would be inclined to take hold.

NOVA SCOTIA.

HALIFAX.—There was considerable activity in local fish market during past week as result of an excellent run of mackerel and herring along the western shore. Some fairly large hauls were made. There is a good market now for mackerel. Fresh herring are selling slowly, but there is a good demand for salt herring, both locally and in some of the foreign markets.

Despite the stringent laws numerous violations of the lobster regulations were detected on some parts of the coast this week. Fishermen were caught taking lobsters illegally. The traps were destroyed, and the lobsters liberated.

Cod and haddock are fairly plentiful. There is also a good supply of halibut and smoked salmon. Smelts are scarce, the mild weather having prevented any large catches. There is the usual demand for oysters, and the export of smoked haddies and herring continue heavy.

The market for dry fish is becoming more active, though as yet no definite price has been fixed for cod.

Produce & Provisions

New Laid Eggs Commanding High Prices

And are Also Scarce—Storage Which are More Reasonable in Good Demand—Butter Unchanged—Receipts Heavier at Some Centres—Hogs Have Declined From High Point—Some Lines of Provisions Easier.

Fortunate is the housewife whose recipe for the Christmas cake contains only a moderate number of eggs, for this commodity is commanding a high figure. For some time now prices have been climbing upward, and now on threshold of the big baking season, we find prices bordering on the jewelry class—that is for the new laid article. In addition to their high price, the genuine new laid is in scant supply.

These conditions are however, not unusual for this time of year. At this time last year it was the same story—eggs were scarce and high. Indeed, last year, prices ruling in early November were outstripped considerably before year came to an end. Dealers are wondering if the same thing is to occur this year. The moulting season with the egg producers is not yet past, and consequently the small supply. Storage eggs are of course available at lower figure, and as a result the demand for them is quite large at present time.

While butter has not on the whole moved any further upward, it has not moved in the other direction either. At some centres there is noted somewhat lower receipts, especially of dairy, which should have a tendency to check the firming feeling, at least for present. There is plenty of feed in the country, and as cheese factories are closing there should be continued good make of butter but there are few dealers suggesting that there will be any marked weakening in butter values.

The general situation in cheese at the moment sems a little uncertain. There was an easier feeling for a time, but of late there has been a little better enquiry from the Old Land. The exports last week were larger. Up to Nov. 2, the total exports from Montreal were 1,567,007, as compared with 1,676,578 boxes for the corresponding period last year, showing a decrease of 109,514.

Hog values have receded considerably from high point held six weeks ago. The movement of the porkers are larger of late, but by no means as large as a year ago. Under lower prices of past month, there has been a tendency to easiness in some lines of pork products of late. Demand on whole is fairly good.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS. — Cool weather has brought largely increased demand for bacon, pork and fowl. In lard there has been a decline, some lines being quoted at ¼c lower than last week. This is simply result of a larger supply.

Short cut pork is practically unobtainable. It is quoted at prices of past fortnight, but these are really nominal for line is not available.

Bacon and ham are moving well. Here fortunately demand is good. There also is heavy call for clear fat backs, which have been dropped a little being quoted at from $28 to $29.

BUTTER. — Conditions in Old Land have more influence on Canadian situation this year than before. Now Canada is importing, not exporting, and the sum which butter is bringing abroad has a great deal to do with determining the amount it will bring here.

New Zeland butter is still bringing 27c in England. Add to that 1c freight, and the 3c specific duty charged, and the Canadian price is 31c. This means that the Canadian butter will hover about that figure. But if prices in England drop then New Zealand butter could be brought in here cheaper and there would be tendency to drop local prices. True, 27c is a high price for butter in England, yet there does not seem any likelihood of an immediate decline. Rather it appears that present prices will be held both there and in Canada.

EGGS.—Here, as was expected, movement is upward, new laid eggs now being quite generally quoted at 50c. The supply is exceedingly short. The hens do not appear to be laying. Selects and No. 1 are to be secured, but new laid are scarce. The call for them is large, and result has been 5c advance. What will be exact future is a little hard to say, but it is quite likely that a further advance will come.

POULTRY.—Since Thanksgiving rush has subsided, turkeys have tended to fall, 22c now being accepted price. With other fowl turkeys are fairly plentiful. The demand, however, is increasing for all poultry, and it seems there will be scarcity. Owing to shortage of crops, perhaps, fowls are scarce. The opinion is that fewer will be available than were last year, and as the demand is sure to be larger there will be scarcity.

TORONTO.

PROVISIONS. — There have been more hogs coming along and prices are easier again this week, $7.50 being paid at country points. However, the run is much smaller than year ago, when supplies were coming out quite freely. Last week receipts of hogs on local market was only 6,641 compared with 12,347 for same week last year. Hogs one year ago were $6.40 at country points.

As a result of lower prices on hogs, there is rather a tendency to easiness in some lines of pork products. Light hams are ½ cent down. Backs are on the other hand still steady. There is no overplus of long clear.

BUTTER. — The make of butter is keeping at good level, and amount coming on market is larger than some time ago. Especially is this true of dairy. This is only natural, as cheese factories are fast closing and there is lots of feed in the country. In some cases it is said that quality of the dairy butter might be better. Dealers say it is a question whether there will be any recession in prices, as demand keeps up. Still, some dealers note accumulations for first time in a long period. This should at least act as a brake, in preventing further firming.

EGGS. — Quantity of new laid eggs coming along at present time is decidedly small. In addition there is a good deal of complaint from wholesalers regarding quality of some of so-called fresh gathered eggs. Apparently, some country shippers realizing that there would come a period when prices would go up, have been holding back goods which should have been sent to market long ago. A considerable quantity of storage eggs are being sold as new laids are commanding a high figure.

Fooling Oneself in Figuring of Profits

Case Where Dealer Selling Salmon at 28 Cents Thought He Was Making 20 Per Cent. Profit—What Real Profit Was and Its Comparison to Cost of Doing Business —A Profitable Discussion.

"A man can easily be fooled in figuring profits."

"Yes, and he can easily fool himself."

These were the concluding remarks to a discussion on figuring profits that recently took place between a number of grocers. Salmon was the grocery line in the limelight.

"What are you selling sockeye salmon at?"' one man asked.

While a number stated that they were getting 30 cents per 1 lb. tin, one man was selling at 28 cents.

"Twenty-eight cents suits me alright," he said, "that is 20 per cent. and that is pretty good on a line that is a staple and exceptionally high."

Question for Pencil and Paper.

"Would you mind explaining how you figure out 20 p.c. on that price. I sell at 30 cents and consider I am only making 20 per cent," spoke up one man.

So, the 28 cent man proceeded to show how that was 20 per cent. "The goods cost $2.88," he reasoned. "Twenty per cent. on that is 57 cents which makes $3.45. Twelve cans at 28 cents is $3.36—well, pretty near 20 per cent." he concluded.

But his questioner did not by any means agree with him. "In the first place," he pointed out, "you are 9 cents out in your calculations and 9 cents on every dozen of goods we sell would amount to a huge sum in a year.

Figuring Profits Wrong.

"But that is not your worst mistake," he continued, "you are wrong in figuring your profits. You have been figuring profits on your cost price while the more correct way is on the selling price.

"Now," he explained, "I am selling sockeye at 30 cents per tin or $3.60 per dozen. I am making exactly 20 per cent. Twenty per cent. of $3.60 is 72 cents which deducted from $3.60 leaves $2.88 which is exactly the amount I paid for my goods."

Said the 28-cent man as he did some figuring with his pencil, "I guess I have been making 24 cents less per dozen on my salmon than I thought I was."

An Important factor.

Thus, it is shown that many a grocer is not making the amount of profit that he thinks he is, and this accounts for his balance at the end of the year being smaller than he expected. The proper figuring of profits is an important factor in the grocery store and must be correctly done if the dealer hopes to be successful. There are at present a good many grocers fooling themselves by figuring their profits on the wrong basis.

The above case is one instance. This man thought he was making a 20 per cent. profit while in reality he was only making 14 2-7 per cent. on the selling price. He no doubt figures his expenses on turnover and these would exactly eat up the 14 2-7 per cent.

A good many grocers apparently have not learned the all important lesson that figuring profits on the cost price is vastly different from on the selling price. In many cases, the difference means success or failure for the grocer.

The National Canners' Association of the United States is proposing to promote a "canned goods" week, during which the special co-operation of the retailer in creating interest in canned goods will be sought.

HUGH WALKER & SON

Established 1861

GUELPH and NORTH BAY

Why Don't You do Like Him?

H. J. Buckley, of Moberly, Mo., who bought a No. 84 Kingery Corn Popper with Peanut cylinder extra for $94.00.

He writes that the machine is doing fine. I pay $40.00 per month rent and have four people employed, and machine pays rent and help.

Now to get at his profits in this little, big business, let's do a little figuring. Rent $480 per year. Four clerks at $5.00 per week each, $1,040, total $1,520, or 15 times the cost of his machine. Did you ever add anything to your business that beats it? In some cases they have earned more net profit than that of the business of the entire store. Furthermore, its attractiveness turns the eyes of passersby upon your store. Often it is the agent of sending them in. It helps the business in the store. The Kingery Peanut Roasters and Corn Poppers are of many kinds and styles—Steam, Electric, Spring and Hand Power. Ranging in price from $8.50 to $350.00. Sold on liberal instalments.

You should have Kingery's Book of Possibilities and Catalog No. 39. They are free.

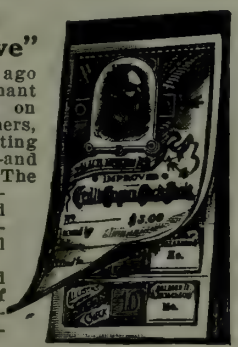
"The World Do Move"



A generation ago many a merchant "went broke" on credit customers, merely by letting things run on—and on — and on. The merchant of today can hold his credit customers and still "play safe." Thousands and thousands of progressive merchants are doing it with

ALLISON COUPON BOOKS

They reduce expenses, eliminate losses, prevent misunderstandings, paying for themselves many times over.

HOW THEY WORK

A man wants credit. You think he is good. Give him a $10.00 Allison Coupon Book. Have him sign the receipt or note form in the front of the book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with $10.00 — no trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten cent coupon, and so on until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10.00 and gets another book. No pass books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes. Allison Coupon Books are recognized everywhere as the best.

For sale by the jobbing trade everywhere.

The Process of Preparing Laurentia Milk

FIRST:—THE VERY BEST GRADE OF MILK IS REQUIRED to produce satisfactory LAURENTIA MILK.
And it must be received at the dairy plant in first-class condition.

SECOND:—IT IS IMMEDIATELY CLARIFIED to remove every vestige of dust and impurity.

THIRD:—THEN PASTEURIZED (Heated to 142 degrees F. for thirty minutes), to keep the milk in good condition until it is bottled, sealed and sterilized.

FOURTH:—NEXT HOMOGENIZED, which is a purely mechanical process, and involves forcing the milk through a valve under great pressure, to smash or break up the cream globules and the other solids in the milk, and mix so completely with the liquids as to be impossible to separate.
The smashing of the cream globules and thorough distribution gives to the milk its extremely rich flavor.

FIFTH:—THEN BOTTLED AND SEALED AIRTIGHT to prevent adulteration or change in the product after the next and final step in the process is completed.

SIXTH:—FINALLY STERILIZED (Heated to 212 degrees F.), to destroy all possible remaining germs, and to insure perfect keeping quality.

HOMOGENIZED

HOMOGENIZING, the mechanical process, discovered by the French Engineer and Scientist, Gaulin, which makes this perfected milk product possible.

HOMOGENIZING permits sterilizing with finished milk more digestible than any other milk.

HOMOGENIZING at last makes it possible to produce and sell milk as an absolutely pure, standard, reliable, non-perishable household staple, and with the highest possible food value, to supply the need where a perfect milk food is required.

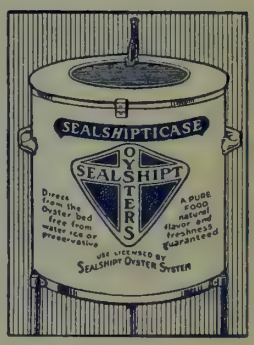
Imposing Factors

¶ The advantage of standing on the "Runways" of the little things is not as a rule fully appreciated. In this enlightened age it is advantageous that the merchant be reasonably familiar with his wares. You can no longer stampede your customer; they have to be shown, and temporary impressions must be avoided for impressions that are more lasting. A little counsel with proper grace is very effective.

¶ The average housewife makes an oyster stew by putting the oysters in the milk when cold; instead, she should bring the milk to a simmer, then put the oysters in; allow the contents to simmer for a few minutes, then serve while hot. Butter and other seasoning can be added to suit the taste. This is one of a hundred little pointers contained in a booklet gotten out by the "Oyster Growers' and Dealers' Association of North America," of which we are members.

¶ The first thousand books cost $200.00 for art, decoration, electrotype, etc., or 20c each. It gives practical and scientific information on oyster propagation and culture, as well as the food values of oysters as compared with other food products, also one hundred tried recipes. The scientific end is from such men as Professor Julius Nelson and Professor Frederick P. Gorham, men who stand high in their profession and men who mix the practical with the theoretical and thereby ride an even keel.



The business of the "SEALSHIPT" Oyster System's Canadian Branch has been taken over by us. We can fill all orders promptly for "SEALSHIPT" Oysters or equipment.

¶ November is to Oysters what June is to butter; they are in their prime now. The satisfaction your trade experience and the volume of business you do, depends largely on the quality of oysters you obtain and you should also not overlook the matter of service. We can assure you of all these.

Selling soap or anything else involves work somewhere by someone.

The Easy Soap to Sell

If the manufacturer doesn't do it you have to, and the more work he does the less there is for you to do.

With "SURPRISE" Soap the selling work is all done before it enters your store.

Because the makers have perfected every detail of the two great selling forces known to merchandizing---the making of a thoroughly good article and the advertising of its genuine merits.

Making generous soap profits the "Surprise" way requires no laboured effort in "pushing" and "persuading"---its quick cleaning qualities are so well known that it sells itself.

Until You Break the Shell of a nut you are wholly in the dark as to the quality of the meat therein. A fair exterior often covers an unsatisfactory interior. Quality depends largely upon reputation—you've got to be guided by that. Standard trade-marked goods are a bulwark of safety. They can be relied upon for quick turnovers with no danger of dead stock.

"STOWER'S" LIME JUICE CORDIAL

is sweetened to suit the most fastidious palates. No hunting for sugar. Add Water and you have the best and most wholesome summer drink. Has no musty flavor—it is the kind your customers will like.

CODOU'S

Macaroni, Vermicelli, Etc.

Finest Taganrog Russian Wheat—the only wheat from which the finest quality of Macaroni can be made, is used in the manufacture of the Codou products. The richness of flavor and tenderness make them most toothsome and satisfying. Genuine French products made by Felix Codou.

Nourishing, Palatable

Coco Fruitine

Vegetable Butter

From the view-point of economy alone, a woman will be interested to investigate the merits of Coco Fruitine in her cooking and pastry. Its purity, rich, delicate flavor and evident superiority to butter, oil or lard, commend it at once to the economizing housewife.

Cox's Gelatine

Served with fresh, ripe fruit, Cox's Instant Jelly Powder makes a delicious dessert for winter luncheons.

Suggest this to your customers, for they will appreciate the absolute purity of Cox's and will be delighted with the delicious flavor.—The standard for nearly a century—British made.

SAVING OIL AND SAVING PROFITS AND PLEASING CUSTOMERS.

instead of the old style tank. The BOWSER pays for itself in savings of oil, the old tank wastes; it delights customers by its accuracy and cleanliness. It shows at a glance exactly how much to charge for oil when filling odd measures, such as lamp or oil stove tanks. It does away with measure and funnel. An automatic stop cuts off the oil as soon as pumping ceases, and prevents dripping. If you want your oil trade to be a profit instead of a loss, a pleasure instead of a nuisance, send us a postal card asking for free Book No. 222 and full particulars.

Did you ever wait five minutes for one cent?

Have you ever been to the Candy Department of a store and noticed nicely-boxed candy with a 49c price marked on it? Have you ever bought a box of this candy, tendered 50c, and waited five minutes for one cent?

Does this condition exist in your candy department or in any other department in your store? Careful investigation shows that most large stores are dissatisfying customers and losing money in just this way.

This sort of thing does not happen in the small candy shop. It has no need to happen in the large department store. It does, however, because the system of handling cash is not suited to the particular requirements of that kind of department.

Study the needs of your departments. Consult our representative as to the remedy.

We Both Do:

We do make a little profit on our 30c tea; so do you, but you make considerably more profit on your better teas, 40c, etc., so do we.

We are continually being surprised at how easy it is for merchants to sell 40c tea when they really try to do it. Last week one of our travellers called on a merchant in Northern Ontario who had a small store in a small village, depending on a very poor class of trade for his customers. The previous trip our traveller had sold him 50 lbs. of Red Rose 40c tea in his order, after trying for over a year to persuade him to stock it. When he called this trip the grocer's wife told the traveller to be sure and insist on her husband buying twice the quantity of 40c tea that he had bought in the previous order.

These instances are coming to our notice all the time, and show us how easy it is for grocers to sell 40c tea when they really try, and remember, when you sell a customer better goods the satisfied customer is decidedly more profitable to you than the extra profit you make on the better goods.

Are you getting your share of the 40c tea trade?

A greeting show card made by Geo. Hill, with J. D. Wisdom, Allandale, Ont. See article for information on how it was arranged.

Functions of the Display Card in Selling

Its Power to attract Attention is Its Chief Value—Once Attention Has Been Fixed on a Particular Article, Sales Often Result—With Approach of Christmas Season Display Cards Should be Freely Used.

The place of the show card in the aggressive retail store, is to-day, a fixed quantity. No one will contradict its claim as a potent factor in securing attention, and attention in vast numbers of cases means extra sales.

Show cards perform many different functions for the merchant who employs them. Here are some:

They call attention to goods on display and can be used to explain their source, quality, flavor, price or other interesting facts.

They are used for announcing special sales on special dates.

They can convey to the onlooker the approach of a special holiday season and advise him to prepare for the occasion.

They are frequently used as the conveyers of greetings prior to festive occasions.

The showcard reproduced above was used for the latter purpose. It was shown by J. D. Wisdom, Allandale, Ont., last year, and arranged by one of his clerks, Geo. Hill. It extended greetings to Christmas shoppers, and the original being 16 x 12 inches in dimensions and in two colors, it naturally attracted attention. To look at the reproduction of the above card, one would naturally suppose it entailed a great amount of work. There is the station and train in the background and the man with the parcels to produce. These, however, were simply a clipping from a magazine, pasted on a piece of cardboard. The lettering and holly decorations, with a dark border around the card represents practically the entire work.

The Wisdom store has usually several of these cards in conspicuous places, using them for practically all the purposes mentioned above. Now that the Christmas season is in sight, dealers should arrange for a number of them. A neat, clean card on a display of new dried fruits, for instance, calling attention to their freshness for Christmas baking, will undoubtedly mean more sales than if it were absent from the display.

The arrangement of such a card as shown above shows that the clerk has an idea and has worked it out to good advantage for a beginner. Any clerk at all artistically inclined can easily make a start in this way and he will gradually become efficient in his work. It was only a short time ago that The Grocer completed a series of 20 articles on the subject of lettering. Many clerks and dealers interested in this work took advantage of the series, either by following them up at the time or by keeping them on file for future reference. The show card is certainly a trade-getter and in view of the small expense attached to its preparation, it should command much wider respect.

In the final dash for Christmas trade, therefore, every dealer should use the show card. The pasteboard can be secured from the local newspaper office and paste, ink and brush from the stationer or art supply store. If the Christmas cards, or, in fact, those prepared for any particular occasion, are carefully preserved, they can be used a year hence.

EDITORIAL NOTE.—The Grocer would like to get, from readers, samples of their cards for reproduction and friendly criticism. This would not only assist them in their work, but would help others who are beginning, in addition to those well on their way in the study of show card writing.

More Solutions of High Cost of Living

Toronto Board of Trade Committee After Studying the Question Brings in Report—Problem Treated From World Wide and Local Standpoint—Heavy Gold Production and War Preparations Pointed to—Would Co-operative Stores Lessen the Cost?—Other Interesting Opinions Arrived at.

In the past two years there have been almost as many reasons assigned for the "high cost of living" as there are sands on the sea shore. The near-sighted—and they have included the vast majority—looked simply in front of them and blamed the "middleman" or the "combines." To them the "high cost of living" was a purely local question and they alone were affected.

To those, however, who looked far afield, it could be seen that the increase in living costs was world-wide, that people in all lands were studying it, and that, therefore, there must have been something behind these local causes.

Some time ago the Toronto Board of Trade appointed a special committee with Prof. M. A. Mackenzie, of Toronto, as chairman, to investigate the reasons. They have submitted their report and it has caused considerable commotion in trade as well as general circles.

A World Wide Rise.

This committee has found that "there has been a world-wide rise in price of all commodities." The introduction of the "all," of course, makes this a rather sweeping statement. It was further found that "Canadian food prices have risen more rapidly than English food prices, and are now on a higher level than English prices." Wholesale prices of butter, bacon, cheese, flour, rice, sugar, etc., are quoted and in this connection a statement is made by the committee of interest to the retail dealer. The report says: "These are, of course, wholesale prices, but the profits of retailers in England are, as with us, reduced to a minimum by free competition."

It is further affirmed that the cost of living is higher in Toronto than in smaller cities and towns of Ontario. Prices of beef, bacon, fresh fish, eggs, milk, butter, potatoes, coal and rent were considered in this connection, but the report adds that "staple groceries are probably as cheap in Toronto as in smaller places. The cities and towns considered were: Ottawa, Brockville, Kingston, Belleville, Peterboro', Orillia, Niagara Falls, St. Catharines, Hamilton, Brantford, Guelph, Berlin, Woodstock, Stratford, London, Ont., St. Thomas, Chatham, Windsor, Owen Sound.

Heavy Gold Production.

Among the principal causes of the world-wide rise in the price level of all commodities, including foodstuffs, are the following:—

The great increase in the production of gold, which has continued now for twenty years. Moreover, the effect of this increase has been magnified by economy in the use of gold on the part of bankers and other manufacturers of credit money, who have succeeded in increasing the volume of credit money in proportion to the gold basis on which it rests. The world's stock of money has thus increased more rapidly than the world's stock of commodities which are measured in terms of this money—in other words, the price of commodities has risen.

The enormous sums expended every year by the great nations of the world in preparation for war. This unproductive expenditure has now reached a height undreamed of a generation ago and it is still mounting, drawing away every year millions of men and billions of dollars which would otherwise be employed in the production of commodities of value.

Too Many Leaving the Farm.

A third cause which has especially affected the increased cost of food is to be found in the migration cityward which has been taking place nearly all over the civilized world. Modern cities have been made more and more attractive in comparison with the monotony and isolation of the farm. This is particularly true of the newer cities of North and South America. Australia and New Zealand. Moreover, the adoption of the principle of protection by the food-exporting countries has greatly increased in such countries this movement citywards, and has in North America, for example, developed great manufacturing industries in the cities, largely at the expense of the country districts; even in a fertile Province like Ontario land has been actually going out of cultivation during the past few years.

Are There Too Many Middlemen?

Not long ago The Grocer published an article from the Farmer's Magazine which declared that there were too many small stores in towns and cities, as a rule. This same point is brought up by the Board of Trade committee. They could find no evidence of any combination among the small retail dealers of Toronto for the purpose of keeping up prices of food. In fact they conclude that the small dealer is barely able to make a living in the keen competition to which he is subjected. But the report goes on to say that "the unnecessarily large number of retail places of business makes for inefficiency and adds to the cost of distribution. For example, a hundred well-equipped and well-placed stores could probably do the whole city business in groceries and do it cheaper than the present multitude of small stores."

Suggestion Adverse to Retailer.

Here, however, the committee expresses some fear. "But," the report continues, "to limit the number of grocers would at once enable the favored few to combine and raise prices." And then comes a serious statement so far as the retailer is concerned: "In order to secure the advantages of the large store for the customer and not for the storekeeper, numerous co-operative societies have been formed in the old country, where the members divide among themselves the profits of the business after the payment of salaries to managers and employees. In 1908, the last year for which complete figures are available, the co-operative societies of the United Kingdom numbered about 3,000, and had aggregate sales amounting to $565,500,000, on which there was a net profit of $55,000,000 for division among the members. But in the United Kingdom the railways and other public carriers, including the Post Office, upon the services of which these societies had to depend to obtain supplies, appear to be in reality the servants of the people, which is not exactly the rule that our own public carriers assume in Canada."

Shipping Facilities Blamed.

The committee also deprecated the poor shipping facilities available for produce coming into Toronto. The members have come to the conclusion that our navigation laws have been drawn up with the idea of injuring United States shipping rather than with the idea of serving Canadian shippers and "certainly not with the idea of serving Canadian consignees." The absence of a public wharf is also referred to, and Parcel Post is advocated.

A Non-Committal Answer.

"How long," said counsel to a witness at Shoreditch County Court, England, recently, "is it before an egg ceases to be new laid?" (Laughter.)

Witness: "I am a fruit merchant, sir." (Laughter.)

Interior view of K. F. Oxley's store at Kelowna, B.C., in which much attention is given to proper grouping of different classes of goods. The business was established in December, 1909.

Shelf Arrangements That Assist Sales

Goods in a Kelowna, B.C., Store are Arranged According to Character—Bottled Goods Occupy Right Side, While Those in Cans are on Opposite—These are Subdivided into Groups—The Value Attached to the Silent Salesman.

System in the arrangement of stock on the shelves opens the way for greater facility in serving customers. Without system there is bound to be too much waste motion, loss of time and inefficient service. The latter frequently results in the loss of a customer, and this is one thing every dealer is anxious to avoid.

System on the Shelves.

On this page is reproduced the interior of K. F. Oxley's store, Kelowna, B. C. An inspection of the shelving shows that on the left only canned goods are shown and on the right bottled goods. The canned goods are subdivided into sections, so that a clerk who has spent a day in the store always knows where to lay his hand on any article in the canned goods line called for. Same applies to the bottled goods. No time is wasted in hunting up a bottle of anything, be it catsup, pickles, meat sauce, or preserved fruit. All glass-packed goods are on the one side and each has its specified location.

There is no reason why every grocery store cannot follow out this principle of system in shelf arrangement. When packages of tea, canned goods, soap, etc., occupy the same apartment on the shelf, besides a waste of time in finding them, there is always a danger of one article taking up the odor from another. A little special thought given to arrangement would obviate this trouble and make the store salesmen much more efficient . In a store where business calls for three or four salesmen, a great deal of time can be saved.

However, just because a dealer is all alone in the store, and customers call at long intervals, he must not think that system in shelf arrangement is not going to be of value. There are times when a rush is on, and it is for such an occasion that specific arrangement is helpful.

Silent Salesman Sells.

Mr. Oxley of Kelowna is a firm believer in the selling power of the silent salesman. He employs two large ones, using them particularly for selling high class confectionery. These silent salesmen are placed just inside the door, where they must be seen by every entrant. The Oxley store works on the principle that an article "to be sold must be seen," and that when displayed appropriately more will be sold than otherwise. These salesmen, therefore, are responsible for selling considerable extra goods.

Has Installed New Refrigerator.

Much attention is paid to equipment and conveniences for assisting sales and the store service. Recently, Mr. Oxley installed a large modern refrigerator for hams, bacon, butter, eggs, cheese and other perishable goods. In the picture may be seen a computing scale, coffee mill, biscuit display rack and the appearance of the metal ceiling adds to the general attractiveness of the interior.

The business was begun by Mr. Oxley in Kelowna in December, 1909, just three years ago. Selling and service have been made strong features in the store's methods and results have justified their adoption.

FLOUR DROPS IN EAST AGAIN.

Manitoba flour has been reduced another 20 cents per barrel in Eastern Canada, making a total decline of 40 cents since the inflow of the new wheat began to bear down on the market. Although prices in Western Canada have been reduced 50 cents per barrel, apparently values in both the East and West are on a similar basis now. This is indicated by the fact that they are both 20 cents per barrel below those ruling one year ago.

There is a good deal of speculation regarding the future of flour, and although prices are now 20 cents below those of year ago, there are those who hint that there may probably be further concessions later on. There is a big yield of wheat in Canada this year, and some grain men who believe the Western crop will not fall far below the 200-million mark, although the Northwest Grain Dealers' Association in their latest statement, estimate it at 188,300,000, added to this we have the good quality of this year's wheat, as well as the large world's yield.

At the present time on the Winnipeg market, cash wheat is 15 cents per bushel lower than a year ago. Flour is only 20 cents per barrel below a year ago, so it would seem that there is possibly still room for some concessions.

TWO WORTHY PETITIONS.

As has already been announced in The Grocer, the Ontario Retail Grocers' Association have prepared two petitions to be presented to Rt. Hon. R. L. Borden and Sir James Whitney respectively. One of these asks that the act regarding the inspection of scales be amended so that the government and not the merchant will bear the cost of inspection.

When it is considered that the majority of merchants' scales tested are correct, and yet inspection of them has to be paid for by the merchants, one will at once see the justice of the Association's request. This is a Dominion government affair and will go to Mr. Borden and his colleagues.

The second petition asks that the Garnishee Law be amended so that a man's wages may be garnisheed above amount of $10 instead of $25 as at present. Sir James Whitney will be asked to give this his serious consideration.

The former amendment affects every dealer in Canada who uses scales. Therefore, to back up the request of the Ontario Retail Grocers' Association as strongly as possible, every dealer throughout the Dominion should sign this petition and forward it to Secretary Wm. C. Miller, of Toronto. The more names attached the more force will it have with parliament.

In respect to the second petition, every merchant in Ontario in every line of business is vitally interested and everybody's assistance is wanted. Already many signatures have been secured from various centres but more are required.

Not only should the petitions be circulated and signed but the assistance of the local members should be assured when the amendments come up in the respective parliaments.

Both petitions were printed in The Grocer of November 8.

THE ROLLED OATS SITUATION.

Seldom if ever has the shortage of rolled oats been so acute and continued for such a length of time as has been the case in Eastern Canada this fall. The situation has been discouraging to the trade, who have been unable to supply sufficient quantities to fill the demand.

While there is some improvement in the condition of supplies, it has been held off later than anticipated, because of the lateness of oats in moving forward, and the inability of the railroads to get them from lake ports to mills on account of the shortage of cars. Indeed, one big mill in order to satisfy to some degree the clamor for supplies, brought in 15,000 bushels of United States oats for Canadian consumption, on which they had to pay a duty of 15c per bushel.

The situation is now clearing, and when it begins to swing back to normal, it seems as if lower prices may be seen. There is a big crop of oats in the West, and at prices ruling, it looks as if a lower figure on the finished product is warranted.

LEAKS IN THE GROCERY STORE.

In order that the maximum amount of water will find its way into the rain barrel, the eave-troughs must be stoutly constructed and firmly erected. If they sag so that the corners sink below the level of the barrel, a large amount of water is sure to be lost.

The profits of the retail business may be likened unto a rain barrel and the business methods of the dealer to the eave-troughs. The size of the profits depends largely on the soundness of the avenues through which the trade runs.

The failure, or, at most, the slow progress of many retail stores to-day, is undoubtedly due to a series of small leaks in the business and not to smallness of the sales. Were these leaks stopped, and were the business methods bolstered up properly, fewer failures would be recorded.

The Grocer has arranged a series of short articles dealing with "Leaks in the Grocery Store" in the hope that they will appeal to readers. One will be observed in this issue while others will appear regularly. The subjects of these articles have been gleaned from merchants themselves so that they are questions which actually arise in the business lives of the majority.

Experiences of dealers with leaks they have found from time to time and remedied will be appreciated. If readers lend their co-operation, this column will be made highly beneficial to all.

ARE CO-OPERATIVE STORES NECESSARY?

Some three years ago Toronto had two or more stores operated by Co-operative Societies. Since then a couple more began operations. To-day there are none. They all failed.

A special committee of the Toronto Board of Trade which investigated the high cost of living problem in that city advises co-operative stores. This committee based its contention on the success of these stores in the Old Country as will be seen from an article on the subject on another page of this issue. The committee has taken the stand that there are too many retailers. But even if such be the case, would the co-operative store solve the high-cost-of-living problem? If a score of Co-operative Societies should happen to organize in any large Canadian city, this could not possibly mean the elimination of all the retailers. The majority would continue in business and competition would be just as keen. In the Old Country members of Co-operative Societies are exempted from a tax on revenue derived by being considered in much the same class as members of fraternal societies. This is not the condition in Canada and not likely to be. Populations in Canadian cities are by no means as dense as in the Old Country and there are too many in practically every district who want service regardless of price, to cater to the co-operative store. In a city like Toronto, where there are some 1,200 grocers, the municipality derives a big revenue in taxes. The entire retail trade, in fact, pay the bulk of the taxes in practically every centre in the Dominion. Eliminate 80 per cent. of the merchants from any place, and what is left?

These are a few facts which evidently the Board of Trade committee overlooked in their reference to the establishment of co-operative stores as a means of cutting down living expenses.

If there are too many grocery stores in any city—and the operators of many of these are bound to be inefficient—why not have every man going into business pass an efficiency examination to exclude the undesirables?

FRUIT LOSSES IN SHIPPING.

Some important subjects were dealt with by the Ontario Fruit Growers' Association at their annual convention in Toronto last week, one of which was the losses entailed by inferior transportation facilities. The statement was made by a Forest, Ont., grower that twenty-five per cent. of the fruit in his home township (Lambton) went to waste because of facilities lacking in the marketing of it.

The claim was made that fruit shipped throughout Ontario was often received in a mangled condition due to carelessness in handling by an insufficient number of railway and express employes.

Since the vast majority of fruit is handled through the retail dealer, could not the latter lend his assistance in making for better transportation? The more fruit marketed the more will be sold because of price reasonableness, and therefore the retailer is vitally interested in the question. The protestations of retail associations should be forwarded to the proper authorities and this should surely assist in insuring more attention to the marketing of this important commodity.

STUDYING GOODS IN STOCK.

The best salesman is one who knows the most about the goods he handles.

Every dealer and clerk should, therefore, study the goods in stock so that they can tell the prospective customer something he or she doesn't know about them. Manufacturers annually spend thousands of dollars on printed booklets, display cards, catalogues and other forms of distributive advertising matters. This is done to enable the dealer to sell those goods more easily.

In a great many cases the dealer is too prone to look upon this literature as matter which is only in the way, and throws it out. But if all clerks and dealers were to read it they would secure valuable information about manufacturers' products which they handle. Some of this matter could with profit be distributed among customers.

It should be remembered that usually the most profit can be derived from that manufactured article where the manufacturer co-operates with the retailer.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The silent speech of the show card often talks more convincingly than some of the alleged salesmen in the store.

The dealer who is in business for the future and not simply the present is under obligation to give satisfaction to his customers.

Extra attention paid to the regulation of goods on the shelves according to their character, will mean time and money saved in the long run.

Now that the Toronto Board of Trade has solved the High-Cost-of-Living Problem, who is going to be the first to put the reforms indicated into action?

A Kingston, Ont., man found a $2,000 pearl in his oysters. With the chances of such prizes as this, there should be a land office business done in oysters.

A good window display, backed up by a convincing show card, and both backed up by live salesmen behind the counter—and you have an effective selling combination.

There should be more co-operation among dealers in looking after the "dead beat." This individual is a menace to the trade and combined effort will do much to head him off.

When the time comes that the amendment to the Scale Inspection Act is discussed by Members of Parliament—when these men are being weighed in the balance before the eyes of the retailer—it is to be hoped they will not be found wanting.

In the olden days the proper carving of fowl was considered an important accomplishment among the elite. No doubt, however, the shades of some of these experts of the past are now being put to shame by the manner in which Bulgaria, Servia, et al. are carving up Turkey.

When the cost of living in Canada is being compared to that in the Old Country, it should not be forgotten that the wage earner here receives much more for his labor than his confrere across the ocean.

Series of Articles on Store Organization

This Will Begin in Issue of December 6—Readers Invited to Join in Discussion—Work Entailed in Moving to New Store—The Problem of Pricing Goods — Sample of Advertisement Running in the Press.

*By Henry Johnson, Jr.

I am asked by the editor to write a series of articles along the line of Store Organization and, as this general subject is one of absorbing interest to me and one to which I have given constant thought for many years, I gladly comply with the request. The series will begin with the week ending December 7, and the first article will be on the subject of Working with the Tools We Have at Hand. As the basis of all organization in business must be the human element, I take this subject to cover the clerk, store assistant, delivery man, stock man, etc.; with the thought in mind that the manager of any business must analyze the character of those under him to get out of each the best and the most that is in him. Ideas along these lines will be more than gladly welcomed at any time from any source. I hope you will all feel that this is a forum for open discussion so that you may come forward and contribute your experiences and plans, etc.

Organization—analytical study—intelligent combination—these are the rocks with which we build. Let us get together, and together "take hold and lift" to the end that we may promote mutual betterment. These articles will run every alternate week to allow time for discussion and general correspondence.

Moving and Attending to Business.

I have just finished the herculean task of moving from one store to another while constantly carrying on a growing business. The new store is a model of convenient arrangement. It should seem that it might almost run itself so far as keeping up the originally planned distribution of stock, and it is so easy to keep clean that one might almost hope to do away with the old idea of having periodical cleanings-up. During the months of remodeling, removing and rearranging, much of the stock has come and gone with only perfunctory checking and with greatly inadequate markings, etc. So at the very start, immediately after the opening had been done with, I put one entire section under the care of one man who has had long experience in groceries and who is one of the best, hardest working and most intelligent clerks I ever saw. I thought I was done with thinking about that section.

More Work Yet Ahead.

I find I was mistaken. The goods are only fairly well kept on the shelves and dirt is already beginning to show. Very many items have no marked sample among them. I can see that some considerable further effort will have to be made to get that section well cared for. A few days ago this man came to me and asked me if my cost book would help him in marking up his shelves—showing, it seemed to me, some poverty of initiative. I told him to go ahead and mark up what he knew about, for that would take a good deal of time, and then we could go over the other things and fill in the gaps; but I see he has not done that. Yet this man is a thinker. He really tries hard to work well and advance the general welfare in every direction.

I believe we shall all have to take lessons from E. W. Darrel, who writes on "When I Stopped Guessing" in System, for we certainly must manage to shorten the steps and cut out the needless rehandling and re-arranging of stocks, etc.

Pricing Goods Important.

With a stock which runs heavily to goods of extra fancy grade, with hundreds of items which cost lots of money and in many cases are sold rather slowly, this matter of having all things plainly priced is very important, for it is not possible for anybody to continually be accurately posted on all values at all times. I buy the goods myself and plan how they may be used and sold; yet I find myself often at sea to know just what a given item should sell for and I seem to lack the time necessary to go over the entire stock as it comes in and have it marked up and priced—yet this must be done. If I delegate this task to others, I find that time is lost sight of and goods cost much more than we can afford just because of the slowness with which most ordinary help will get through a task.

Sample of Advertising.

I have therefore just begun on a new plan, trying to kill two birds with one stone. I am running lists like the following in my weekly ads. and it is my intention to save such lists and post them about the store in their proper places. Thus after a while I hope to get around the circle and have everybody thoroughly posted in every department. Verily, there is no doubt about it that the boss has the unending job—yet I have long taken some little, perhaps pardonable pride in my ability to get others to do my work. Here is the sample list:

Johnson's Blank Brand of Pure High Grade Spices.

One kind of Cinnamon costs 5½c to 6c a pound, while another is worth 45c a pound by the shipload on import orders. Yet each is pure, true cinnamon. The one difference is in the delicacy and pungency of flavor.

Every variety of Johnston's Brand is the finest the world produces—fresh, pure, true. Therefore these spices are the cheapest as well as most satisfying for you to use. TRY THEM.

2 oz. tins of Black Pepper, White Pepper, Cayenne, Mustard, Ginger, Allspice, Cream Tartar, each	10c
2 oz. Cinnamon and Nutmeg	15c
2 oz. Mace	20c
4 oz. Black Pepper, Mustard, Ginger, Allspice, each	15c
4 oz. White Pepper, Cayenne and Cream Tartar, each	20c
4 oz. Cinnamon and Nutmeg	25c
4 oz. Mace	35c

Ask for "Johnston's Spices."

*The writer of this article is one of the most successful dealers on the continent. He has spent almost 30 years in the retail grocery business and is well equipped to answer questions and smooth out difficulties with which others may have met. If a special request is made names of inquirers will be omitted when their letters are printed for discussion.

PARCELS POST QUESTION REVIVED.

A report comes from Ottawa to the effect that Hon. Mr. Pelletier, Postmaster-General, is seriously considering the introduction of a Parcels Post system for Canada. If it is established it will likely be along similar lines to that adopted by the United States which will come into effect on January 1 next year. The charges, as set forth in the "Bourne Bill" which passed the United States Congress, are regulated by distance, the country being divided into eight zones or districts. The weight limit is increased from 4 pounds to 11 pounds with special provisions for transportation of live fowl, fresh eggs, etc. The rates rise from 5 cents a pound with 1 cent for each additional pound in cities and suburbs to maximum rate of 12 cents a pound for all distances exceeding 1,800 miles.

The progress of the system in the United States will be followed and, if the success warrants it, Hon. Mr. Pelletier will no doubt attempt something similar.

CLEAR UNDERSTANDING.

"Please ship me another car of stock, same as last."

"Cannot ship anything until last car is paid for."

"Cancel the order. Can't wait so long."

Getting the Advantage of the "Dead Beat"

Retail Grocers at Association Meeting Discuss Plans to Get Their Money—More Co-operation Advised—Form to be Filled Out by Credit Applicants Suggested—Grocers Will Place Candidate in Field for Alderman.

Toronto, Nov. 21—(Special) — How the "dead beat" can best be guarded against was one of the interesting questions that came up for discussion at the monthly meeting of the Retail Grocers' Association on Monday night. Neil Carmichael, who broached the question, advocated co-operation among the grocers as a means of reducing the loss from this source, which he declared to be enormous in this city.

"There is altogether too much reticence among the grocers in regard to their bad accounts and the 'dead beats,'" he declared. "Many grocers do not like to go to court, because if they do, the other dealers will know that they have got stung. Things should not be such. All members of the association should co-operate to help one another in collecting accounts. I would like to see some measure to make grocers feel that they have the support of their fellow tradesmen in this regard. The public know that the grocer doesn't like to go to court, and for this reason it can impose on him.

To Prevent Bad Accounts.

"Not only would I like to see co-operation among the grocers in collecting accounts, but also in preventing bad accounts. The dealer should not be afraid to say to his neighbor, 'So-and-So was dealing with me, but I cut him off.' He should save his neighbor from contracting bad accounts if at all possible.

Spirit of Brotherly Love Shown.

"I know a grocer who opened up in business on Yonge Street North," said S. W. Hall, " and the day he opened, his nearest competitor walked into his store and gave him the names of 20 people to whom not to give any credit. He has found since that they were really 'dead beats,' and that he was saved a good deal by the assistance of his brother grocer."

"He is the right sort of a grocer," spoke up a member. "We want more like him."

Form for Collecting Information.

"Why shouldn't we require customers who apply for credit to give us such information as will make us certain that they are entitled to it?" asked W. C. Miller. "I see a form in The Canadian Grocer of last week, which is used by the grocers of Vancouver for customers to fill out in making applications for credit. It asks for certain information which every grocer is entitled to before extending credit. One of the important questions is where a customer dealt last. This would allow us to get in touch with his former grocer and ascertain if he is reliable."

"If you ask a good many where they have been dealing," spoke up one member, "they will give you the name of one of the big department stores."

"Well, they have to pay the cash there," spoke up another. "In that case better ask them to pay you cash, too."

Endorse Grocer as Alderman.

The Retail Grocers are taking a keen interest in the approaching municipal elections. David Bell, a member of the association, has already declared himself as a candidate for alderman in Ward 3, and has received the endorsation of the Retail Grocers' Association.

"I understand," said S. W. Hall, "that the peddlers are organizing to knock Controller McGuire, because he supported our legislation re peddlers during the past year."

"I have heard of the same thing," said W. C. White. "If we expect candidates to support our legislation, we must be prepared to support them."

A motion was passed by the association to get out a circular endorsing Alf. McGuire as controller and D. Bell as alderman, and the members of the association pledged themselves to give active support to both these candidates during the week previous to the election.

Action of Baker Complained Of.

"I understand a bread company whose bread many of us sell is taking orders for flour also," said J. Blood. "Don't you think we should let them know that we don't approve of them entering our field?"

"I don't think they will get much trade—especially at the price they are asking," remarked another.

"But, if they are going to be our competitors we should refuse to handle their bread," was a reply.

Dairy Firm Selling Potatoes.

"I hear an ice cream and milk company is selling potatoes at $1.25 per bag," said a member.

"I think it will be a good ad. for the grocer," remarked another. "Some people who got them are sorry now."

"I don't think that the ice cream firms should sell their goods to societies and churches at the same figure as to the grocer," said W. S. Hall. "If we are providing supplies for a supper or banquet, we never get the order for ice cream, as they get it from the manufacturers at the same price as we do."

The New Membership Fee.

Said J. S. Bond, re the membership fee of $2 which will come into force next year. "It is worth three times $2 just for the benefit received from talking over trade matters with other members of the association. A fee of $2 is a ridiculously small sum on which to run an association."

B. C. WINDOW DRESSING COMPETITION.

Vancouver, Nov. 21—(Special)—Commencing week of November 25, displays of "Made in British Columbia" goods will be made in the windows of many local grocery stores. The idea originated with Thomas Connor, secretary of the Retail Grocers' Association, and from the hearty co-operation that is being received from manufacturers and the grocers themselves, the exhibition will be a success. The city has been divided into four sections, with four cash prizes to be awarded in each section. Besides this a prize of $100 will be given for the best dressed window in the entire competition. These prizes go to the clerks, not the owners of the stores, and will be awarded by a committee of competent judges on the following points: Efficiency, as regards sales, 50 per cent.; artistic arrangement of display 25 per cent.; novelty of idea shown, 25 per cent.

TWEED MEN SIGN PETITIONS.

Tweed, Ont., merchants are doing their duty towards the petitions advancing the amendments to the Weights and Measures Act and Garnishee Law. A short time ago, W. C. Miller, the secretary of the Ontario Retail Grocers' Association, prepared petitions to be signed. These were printed in The Grocer and have been returned, the former with 14 signatures attached and the latter with 19. A. C. Barnett, of Tweed, heads both lists.

BRANTFORD R. G. A. OFFICERS.

The new officers of the Brantford Retail Grocers' Association as elected at the last monthly meeting are as follows:

President—John Kew.
Vice-President—Geo. Bickle.
Secretary—Ed. J. Church.
Treasurer—H. Foulds.

A resolution was passed pledging the united support of the members in pushing forward the work of organization in the city and surrounding country.

The firm was, however, acquitted by the magistrate and hence the reason for the libel suit.

MANY HAPPY RETURNS

To HENRY SWAN, of Swan Brothers, retail grocers, King Street E., Toronto. Mr. Swan was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, November 20, 1841. He began business October 1, 1863, on King Street, and has therefore been 39 years in business there. He learned his trade on Yonge Street, Toronto, beginning at the corner of Yonge and Albert Streets, in 1854; later he was at Yonge and Temperance Streets from 1858, until beginning business on present premises. Woodstock has already sent theirs in, while Toronto will probably get theirs under way during the next week. Secretary Miller of 632 Yonge St., Toronto, is sending copies of the petition out to many towns and villages where there are no associations, and asking someone to undertake their circulation. Merchants in every municipality, no matter how small the number may be, are invited to send their endorsation of the amended legislation which the Ontario Retail Grocers are attempting to secure. The association desires to make clear that while this legislation is being promoted by the grocers, every business man is vitally interested in at least one, and in many instances, both of these measures, so that in circulating the petitions, men in all lines of business may be invited to sign them.

Easier Figures on New Dried Fruits

QUEBEC MARKETS.

POINTERS:—

Dates.—Down about one cent.

Sultana Raisins.—Down.

Nuts.—Quite generally down.

Montreal, Nov. 21.—General condition of trade is eminently satisfactory. Orders are coming in well and supply for most part is such that it is possible to fill requirements. No startling price changes have come, but there have been a number of small variations, most of which are in a downward direction. Dates, for instance, have dropped a little, new supply arrived making this possible. Sultanas, too, are arriving, though not before badly needed. Then certain lines of nuts are far more plentiful than they were week ago. This naturally has brought a downward movement of prices.

SUGAR.—Still refiners are taking all the raw sugar which offers, and it appears they are glad to do this, since crop of year hence is none too sure. This is likely to prevent any great decline in prices, though it is expected that market will have moderate tone for some little time.

Of course 1913 beet crop is unknown yet, but something can already be judged of cane, and this does not promise to be as good as this year's crop. In the Barbadoes climate has been dry, and cane is backward. Cuba, on the other hand, has had a lot of wet weather. The climate has not been perfect, but on whole the cane has developed well.

DRIED FRUITS.—Second arrival of new dates has tended to reduce prices, though only slightly because of great demand. Generally quotations are about one cent lower than week ago. As yet no change has been made in price asked for one pound packages, but a small reduction is likely to be made there.

Figs, at present, are firm, demand having grown greatly and supply not having been augmented.

Prunes have generally declined about one-half cent a pound. The demand is exceedingly large, and appears to be growing, but news of fresh supply has caused prices to be dropped slightly. The new supply was long in coming, but should reach Montreal last of this week.

It will be noted that there has also come general decline in Sultana raisins, while Valencia fine are also quoted lower. A better supply, and better news from abroad, is responsible for change.

COFFEE.—On primary market there is still strong underlying bull sentiment, based upon supposition that Santos crop for 1913-14 will be poor. At immediate present things are quiet, unsettled state of affairs in Europe tending to produce a certain inactivity. Locally there have been no price changes.

NUTS.—New supplies in number of lines have been received. Filberts are now much more plentiful and drop of 1½ cents has come as natural result. Walnuts, too, have changed in price, though somewhat strangely. Myette Grenobles have been advanced two cents, because of higher costs abroad, and Marbots have dropped 1½ cents because of a more plentiful supply. Some new lines are not in yet. When they arrive there will almost certainly be further changes.

WHITE BEANS.—More of these are coming forward, though there is still somewhat of scarcity. Farmers leave threshing of this crop until the last, and whatever inducements of price they seem unwilling to change their system. Now their crop is beginning to come forward. The supply, however, is not large enough to justify any lower price.

TEA.—There is some reason to believe that this market is weakening a little. Locally, however, there has been no change whatever.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS:—

Dried Fruits. — Further shipments bring lower prices.

Evaps.—Lower.

Nuts.—New season's stock arriving.

Beans.—Many poor quality Canadian.

Toronto, Nov. 21.—Jobbers are still making complaints regarding slow movement of freight on account of shortage of cars. Situation has been particularly bad this fall and not only has it interfered with local shipments but also materially with those which are being sent out to lake and rail points. There has been a good deal of shipping by this route and some firms have now got decks pretty well cleared. Shipping by boat will be in order for about a week more. Of course, navigation when weather is mild sometimes continues well up into December, but insurance risks are not accepted after November 28.

Full array of new season's dried fruits are now in and are going out to retail trade. Further shipments of several lines have caused prices to be reduced.

Orders for confectionery are coming in freely in anticipation of Christmas trade. New season's nuts are also beginning to go out.

SUGAR.—Refined sugar is unchanged, and outlook for future is same. There is same easiness ahead but there is difference of opinion as to when it will become evident in refined prices. Some dealers think that steadiness may hold until close to the end of year, while others would not be surprised at change any time. Limited supplies available for immediate use tends to put off any immediate reduction. The clearing of the Balkan trouble would probably bring about an easier turn.

Reports from Cuba are still encouraging, and quotations are easier for December and again for January. There are indications of an early commencement of crop making in Cuba.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.—There has been no change in corn syrups since last week's reduction of 15 cents per case. Demand is on an appreciable scale, the cooler weather proving beneficial to retail trade. Conditions at present look favorable for good season's trade in syrups.

DRIED FRUITS. — With additional shipments of several varieties of new season's fruits, there have been some further readjustments in prices. Second shipment of new dates came to hand at end of last week and are quoted lower than initial arrivals. Hallowees are selling at 5½ cents in full boxes and one cent higher in halves. Packages are quoted at 7 to 8 cents. Dates are of good quality this year and have been taken up well.

As has been pointed out before, seeded raisins opened this year at extremely low figure and there have been further concessions since. Goods bought at low price are now coming to hand and quotations to retailers are lower, some lines of choice seeded selling down to 6¾ cents. A big trade in seeded raisins is anticipated this year.

Valencias are also being shaded, new selling as low as 8¾ cents. There is still quantity of old Valencias held here and they are being sold at 7 to 7½ cents. Orders for dried fruits are now being sent forward, especially those lines which enter into make up of Christmas cake. Sultanas are in limited supply as yet but stocks will soon be plentiful. New arrivals will be sold lower than present quotations.

While seeded raisins on the coast are showing somewhat steadier feeling, prune market continues to sag. There are even concessions below present quotations being offered here. Quotations have ruled so high in recent years as to make this year's values look extremely low. Peaches are also great deal lower than last year, and still lower prices are being quoted now than few weeks ago.

COFFEE.—There is a good seasonable demand for coffee reported, both for straight varieties and standard blends. Present is always season of good consumption.

Some firms would quote straight Guatemala at slightly higher figure, one house putting it at 26 to 28 cents. There is nothing particularly new from the big coffee markets of the world. Some sensational crop estimates have been received, to which no attention has been paid, it being considered too early for reliable crop estimates. Action of big factors in market show that they have implicit confidence in situation.

SPICES.—There is no break in firming tendency in cloves. Developments during past two weeks have proven that early reports of short crop were true and it seems quite certain now that yield will not exceed 50,000 bales. There seems nothing ahead for time at least except steadying prices. Peppers hold steady but nutmegs on primary market are hardly so firm.

There is good demand present in spices, covering the whole list. The approach of Christmas baking season is causing retailers to look to stocks.

NUTS.—Several lines of new nuts in shell have arrived, including Sicily filberts, Tarragona almonds and Grenoble walnuts. Latter is in earlier than usual. New stock is quoted at little higher figure, while same is also true of Bordeaux and Marbots. Almonds in shell on other hand are lower. Brazils still remain moderate in price and with quotations much lower than for past years, there should be good trade in them this season. Pecans are high line this year.

New shelled walnuts will be late in coming and probably greater portion of Christmas requirement will be freshly cracked goods which are now selling at 29 to 30 cents. New seasons to arrive around December 15, are quoted at 34 to 35 cents. New shelled almonds are higher again this year, being quoted just now at 33 to 36 cents. One wholesaler stated he would have to sell some of better grades of new season's shelled almonds at close on 40 cents. Shipments of new nuts are being made out to retailers as they come in.

BEANS.—From reports received, it would seem as if quality of Canadian beans is even worse than anticipated. "Instead of 75 per cent. being first quality," said one big dealer this week, "25 per cent. will be nearer the mark, while balance will be hard to sell where people have been used to good beans. Of course, it was the weather that impaired the quality."

It is predicted in some quarters that on account of poor quality of Canadian beans Austrian hand picked will have great run here this year. One firm has contracted for $19,000 worth of them. The duty is 25 cents per bushel. Austrian are, in some cases, quoted as high as $2.70 on local market.

EVAPORATED APPLES. — Weaker feeling continues in evaporated apples. The total pack is going to be large, and accordingly, lower prices. Low price on other evaporated fruits is also a factor. Evaps are being quoted as low as 7 cents.

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.—Retailers have not in all cases received their season's supply of canned goods, although most of them have received some. Those who have had them in for any length of time report that demand has been on a good scale for season.

The local canned goods situation is now more settled, quiet and easier. The easiness is not apparent in any change in quotations, but some jobbers who had ideas above opening prices are beginning to ease them down to original figures. The speculative value as yet at any rate is nil. Of course this is not the case with those who got their tomatoes, for instance, at $1.10 per dozen by placing orders at that figure last spring. Tomatoes are now ruling at the $1.35 to $1.37½ level, which was the opening price.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Corn Starch—Cheaper.

Cocoanut in Bulk—Up 2 cents.

Sultanas—Advanced.

Winnipeg, Nov. 20.—Groceries are moving freely, local houses finding it necessary to work extra shifts to get orders out on time although big rush prior to Christmas has hardly yet started.

In common with other wholesalers, they report satisfactory improvement in collections. This would indicate that big settlement of November 4 had come off satisfactorily and that all classes will now get their share of proceeds of Western crop.

There are some price changes to be noted but none of particular importance in staple lines. Corn starch is ¼ cent per lb. cheaper and the cheaper brooms are down.

Coffee is reported to be firm and advance in ground coffees general.

Cocoanut in bulk has advanced 2 cents per pound.

SUGARS.—The Sugar market seems to have settled to fairly firm basis. There are no changes to report and none anticipated at present. Demand continues exceptionally good.

An Eastern authority states: "There will be a large portion of the crop fully six to ten-pound pickers. A few are up to prime quality, viz., three-pounders, and these are in such urgent demand that the early arrivals are urgently sought for to fill orders in hand. It will take a lot of machine handling to reduce the majority of receipts to a prime basis, which takes time and expense, and delays shipment."

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, Nov. 20.—Arrivals of dried fruits durinng past week have been most encouraging and quotations are gratifying to local trade. California raisins are lower than last year, and currants slightly easier, while peaches are lower than for years, if ever before, in St. John. Advices to customers by local wholesale dealers are to effect that they may advertise that cost of Christmas pudding will be cheaper this year, because of easier tone in flour market, decline in sugar and easiness in dried fruits. Spices remain practically about the same, while nuts will be lower, but peels are a little higher. Brazil nuts will be cheaper than for many years on account of great abundance, while dates and figs will rule about same.

Provision market remains firm and with no indication of relief. Sugar market, according to local advices will be no higher until well after new year, which means that for busy season at Christmas prices will be as easy or even more so than at present. Molasses is strong at 38 cents which is a record and it is apt to be even higher, local dealers say. Reports received from Barbadoes and West Indies are most unsatisfactory regarding crop conditions and those who are fairly well stocked in St. John are not selling in larger quantities than absolutely necessary.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, Nov. 21.—General provision market remains unchanged. Supplies and demands provide situation similar to past two months, there being general steadiness.

Arrivals of Smyrna figs, Hallowi dates, new California walnuts, new almonds, Brazil nuts and new chestnuts from Italy have been fairly good. There also have arrived two cars of bananas, two cars of sweet potatoes, two cars of Spanish onions from Valencia and two cars of Spanish malagas.

First appearance of Japanese oranges is also to hand, and the usual quantities of apples and Ashcroft potatoes have come.

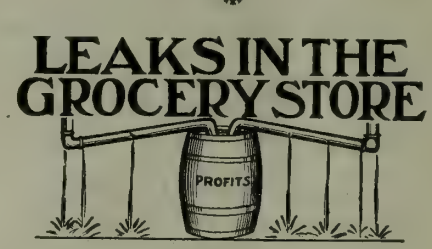
The ruling wholesale prices follow:

SMOKED MEATS—Hams, boiled, .28; hams, boned, .23; bacon, green, rolled, .22; bacon, smoked, rolled, .23; bacon, dry salt backs, .15.

EGGS—Local, fresh, per dozen, .45; fresh, Eastern, doz., .38; selected eggs, doz., .34.

BUTTER—Local creamery, .35; Eastern Townships, prints, .32½; Eastern Townships, solids, .32; New Zealand, prints, .34; New Zealand, solids, .33½.

FRUIT — Oranges, Valencia, case, $4.25 to $4.50; grape fruit, California, per case, $6.25; lemons, per case, $6.75 to $7; apples, snow, per case, $1.75 to $2.25; Northern Spy, case, $1.50 to $1.75.



FORGOTTEN CHARGES.

One of the greatest leaks in the retail store to-day is "forgotten charges." If the total amount lost annually by the Canadian grocery trade in this respect were known, we would probably all be very much astounded.

Forgotten charges occur in those stores particularly where a poor system is operated by careless clerks. This combination is enough to wreck any business and it has laid low a great many.

The meaning of "forgotten charges" is plain. This leak occurs usually when several customers are waiting to be served; as soon as one is served the next in line is waited on without a record of the credit transaction being made at the time. This record is often forgotten for all time, the sale denoting a clear loss amounting to total of invoice cost plus cost of doing business.

Such leaks are disastrous. To avoid them, the dealer should have a system. That system may be that when a credit order is given it must be recorded on a counter-check book. Whatever it is, let the system be insisted upon regardless of who is at the counter. When a business gives away goods by forgotten charges it becomes, in ignorance, a charitable institution.

MORE ANSWERS TO PROBLEM.

Some additional replies have come in to the problem on "What Should The Buying Price Be?" The question as it appeared in The Grocer in issue of Nov. 8 is again reproduced:

> Editor Canadian Grocer.—"If a grocer's expenses are 17 to 18 per cent. of each dollar's business done, what should he pay for a 25-cent article?"
> READER.

The following reply has come from Truro, N.S.:

Editor Canadian Grocer.—"Referring to the article in Nov. 8th. edition of The Grocer, 'What should the buying price be?'

"I think if it costs 18 per cent. to run a business a person should have an average profit of 25 per cent.

"Considering that there is only about 10 per cent. profit on larger articles, including flour and sugar, there should be a profit of 40 per cent. on the smaller articles, including those selling at 25 cents.

"In order to make 40 per cent. on an article selling at 25c it must cost 18c (to be exact, 17 6-7c), being the price at which I think the article selling for 25c should be bought."

Yours truly,
CARL D. RYAN.

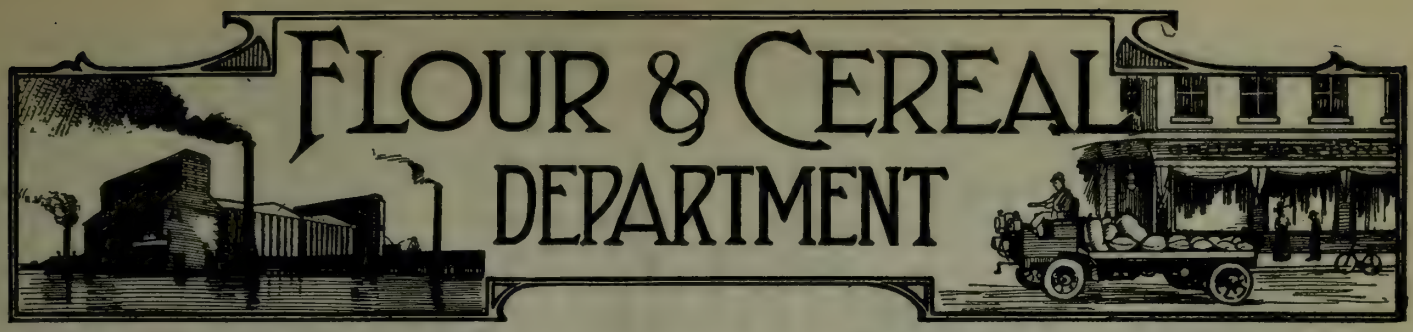
Thos. Hart, a St. John, N.B., reader, writes that the buying price should be 20½c, but he does not state what net profit he has figured on.

BROOM AND WASHBOARD SITUATION.

A good many jobbers and retailers have been anticipating that brooms would take a further downward dip, because of the low prices prevailing on broom corn. True, corn, is low in price, the common variety being lower than for some few years, but in spite of the fact, several manufacturers claim that prices are not going to ease to any great extent. Indeed there are those who claim that high quality brooms are going to be higher.

This same manufacturer hinted that it is probable that wash boards may be advanced in price. "I have been looking for an advance for the past month or so," he stated. "Manufacturers in the United States have put up prices. The reason for this is the general advance in these lines that go into the construction of the wash board. Wood material is high, and the same is also true of the metals used in them. Indeed the cost of manufacture is considerably above what it was some time ago."



Flour Down in Eastern Canada Again

Manitoba Drops Another 20 Cents Per Barrel—Now on About Same Basis as West—Some Dealers Looking for Further Reduction—Rolled Oats Shortage Relieved Somewhat—Expecting Lower Prices on This Commodity

Manitoba flour has been reduced another 20 cents per barrel in Eastern Canada, making a total drop of 40 cents in the East since the new wheat crop began to have its influence on prices. This puts it practically on same basis as the West where prices were reduced 50 cents per barrel some few weeks ago.

It was pointed out at the time of the other 20 cents reduction two weeks ago that prices in the East would likely see another drop in order to bring prices on level with wheat, as well as values on flour in the West.

It is felt in some quarters that flour prices are not yet at the bottom. Reduction has been quite large but Canada and the world, as a whole, has a good yield of wheat this year. One man who is expecting that future will see lower prices still, put forth this argument:—"Flour to-day in both the West and East is just 20 cents per barrel below that of year ago. The change in wheat, however, is on much larger proportion. Cash wheat in Winnipeg on November 18 of last year was 98⅝ cents, while to-day, same grade is only 83¾ cents. This is difference of 15 cents per bushel and the difference in flour is certainly not on similar proportion."

As pointed out last week, situation in rolled oats in regard to supplies has been particularly bad for past two months in Eastern Canada—worse than has ever been experienced before. Some mills are making a little headway with orders but there are others who are having no end of trouble getting raw material from lake ports on account of car shortage.

It is probable that lower prices, however, will be seen on rolled oats as soon as situation begins to clear. Prices of oats warrant lower figure.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR.—As hinted as probable in past issues, Manitoba flour has been reduced another 20 cents per barrel. This is a total drop of 40 cents for month, and brings first patents locally down to $5.40 per barrel.

CEREALS.—Market is steady and orders quite large. Indeed, mills have orders on file which will keep them busy for some time to come. It is not thought in view of this fact, that there will be reduction for some time at least.

TORONTO.

FLOUR.—Manitoba flour has been reduced another 20 cents per barrel, making a total decline of 40 cents during the month, and bringing first patents in jute down to $5.30 per barrel locally. This reduction is in keeping with expectations, as lower values on wheat well warranted lower figure than those struck two weeks ago. Even now, there are those who will believe that bottom has not been reached for, while flour is now 20 cents per barrel lower than year ago, wheat is also much lower. Flour in cotton sacks is quoted at 10c per barrel above jute.

CEREALS.—Relief to acute rolled oat shortage has been held off much longer, with some mills at least than was expected. Some are beginning to catch up, but there are still some big companies who have done little in this direction. The reason for relief being so long in coming is that mills have been unable to get the raw material from lake ports. In order to supply orders to some extent, one big mill actually brought in 15,000 bushel of oats from the United States to grind for home consumption, and on which they had to pay 15 cents per bushel duty. Things should begin to run more smoothly before long.

The yield of oats and the price at which they are quoted really warrant lower prices on rolled oats but this has been deferred on account of condition of supplies. With situation clearing, lower prices will probably rule.

MILL FEEDS.—There has been no change in either bran or shorts. Drop expected with increased grinding of wheat has not made its appearance. A good call, with approach of cold weather and better season of demand has changed views of many dealers in regard to probability of much lower prices. Still, there is no denying that mill feeds are high.

STRONG DEMAND FOR TEA.

The "London Grocers' Gazette" of November 2nd says: "It was again this week essentially a fine tea market, and particularly in the case of high-priced Pekoes, there was often an advance of anything up to a penny per pound. The teas were no better either, so it was not a case of improving quality, but the demand ran tremendously strong. Poor teas were generally easier."

A VALUABLE ASSISTANT.

Editor, Canadian Grocer,—I find the Canadian Grocer to be a very valuable assistant. Would miss it very much if it did not come.

Yours truly,
FRED. L. GILES.

New Lemons of Good Quality and Color

Should Sell Well—Color Exceptionally Good For First Shipments—Navel Oranges Now on Market— Quality Apparently Varies—Grapefruit of Better Quality — Cranberries Are Firmer.

New lemons should sell well, for not only are prices lower than for past few months but quality and color of new stock is good. It is unusual to see the early shipments of new lemons so well colored. They are generally rather green, which while not impairing the quality any, seems to interfere with their sale. This year, probably on account of earliness of season, first shipments came along with a color that should appeal to most exacting buyers. It is for this reason that many dealers are finding it to their advantage to push lemons. Prices under larger shipments are still lower again this week, at several centres.

New Navel oranges from California have become quite general throughout Western Canada, while there has also been an odd shipment to the East. This is particularly early for navels to come forward. In some cases, the quality is said to be good, and in others directly the opposite. It is somewhat the same in new Florida oranges, for while some are of excellent quality, others are not quite so good.

Grapefruit from Florida which was off in quality at first of the season is showing an improvement. If this continues a good season can be expected as crop is large and prices much more reasonable than they have been for several years.

There is a firmer feeling in cranberries with the arrival of later varieties, which are acknowledged as better keepers and therefore command a better price. The demand is seasonably good.

A report from Kingston, Jamaica, says that the banana cultivation was damaged considerably by strong gales, accompanied by heavy rain.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS.—Week has seen several changes in prices. Apples are generally quoted somewhat higher, not that the supply is short, but because the demand is great. No. 1 fall apples are now being quoted as high as $5.50, while for No. 2's, four dollars is frequently being asked.

In cranberries another advance has been made. Price last week varied from $7.50 to $8.50. Now the finest quality is being sold at $9.50. The supply is none too large and demand has grown steadily since cool weather set in. There is possibility that cranberries will go still higher. Again grapefruit shows its downward tendency, some lines of Florida now being sold as low as $3.50 a case. The prediction that grapefruit will soon be as cheap as oranges seems possible.

Oranges tend a little higher, Valencias now being generally quoted at $4.50, whereas a number of lines were last week quoted at $4.25.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS.—With continued influx of new lemons, prices have continued their downward movement, now being quoted at $4 to $4.50 per case. Quality and color is such as to cause them to sell freely. Some lots of Florida oranges are good, while others are lacking somewhat in quality. First navel oranges came in this week, which is exceptionally early. One firm said their car was good, while another house stated that they wouldn't accept shipment.

Apples are quite a feature at present time. In addition to Canadian varieties, there is shipment of fancy stock from Washington State in this week, selling at $2.50 to $2.75 per box. Canadian grapes are done. Malagas are selling quite well.

Following items are from the file of The Canadian Grocer of November 25, 1892:—

"On December 1, J. E. McElderry who has so successfully conducted the grocery business in Day's Block, Guelph, Ont., for twenty years, will admit into partnership James A. McCrea, who for the past seven years has been traveling for Davidson & Hay, wholesale Grocers, Toronto."

Editorial Note.—The name of J. A. McCrea is still a well known one in Guelph. The business above referred to is now operated under the name of J. A. McCrea & Son.

This item was taken from our Toronto market report of November 25, 1892:

"BEANS.—There is nothing new to say of the bean market. The price is unchanged at $1.20 to $1.25."

Editorial Note.—To-day new prime beans are quoted at $2.90, and handpicked at $3 per bushel. The demand for beans at present time is, of course, much above that of 20 years ago in view of the large amount required for railway construction, lumbering and mining camps.

"The retail merchants of Montreal held a meeting on the 17th inst. and appointed a committee which was instructed to obtain legal advice as to the constitutionality of the business tax imposed in the Province of Quebec. The committee is to report this week. The business tax was bitterly denounced by several of the speakers for its unfairness to the merchants. There is some talk of resisting the collecting of the tax. There appears to be a spirit of accommodation manifested by the provincial government as all the collectors of revenue have been notified that they are to take no action for the collection of the obnoxious tribute until they are further advised."

Those dealers who have been selling caviare will be interested in knowing that prices are higher this year by 25 per cent. than last. Russia is practically the only source of supply. Caviare is made from the sturgeon, and it is claimed this fish has been caught in recent years regardless of necessity for close season being observed.

LIVE BEARS ATTRACT BUYERS.

St. John, N.B., Nov. 20.—(Special.)—A novel window display was shown last week in store of Vanwart Bros., Charlotte Street. It was a showing of four bears, a mother and three cubs, which had been shot near McAdam, N.B., and brought to the city where they were displayed in the Vanwart store. It was a good advertisement for the store, for great numbers of people came from different parts of the city, and taking advantage of this fact, the other windows in the store, adjoining that in which the animals were shown, were filled with a tempting array of fall fruits, provisions of various kinds, and up-to-date lines of groceries which were boosted considerably through the spectacle presented so near hand.

A FOUR DAYS' SALE.

O. Lacroix, 19 St. Joseph St., Quebec, P.Q., put on a four days' sale from Nov. 11 to 14, inclusive, and advertised it in the local papers. The advertisement was introduced as follows: "During the above four days we will have bargains in all our lines to offer to the economical housewives. Prices are figured regardless of cost—some of them are even lower than wholesale prices. We want to make this November Sale one of our biggest sales of the year.

"Christmas will soon be on and many of the Holiday goods are offered."

Following up this, was a lengthy list of goods with their prices.

London Grocers Looking After Petitions

Committees Will Wait on Local Members of Parliament to Ask Their Assistance with Amendments to Garnishee Law and Scale Inspection Act—Signatures of Grocers, Butchers and Milk Dealers Secured—Association Will Bring Out Aldermanic Candidate.

London, Ont.., Nov. 21—(Special)—The Retail Grocers' Association at their last regular meeting discussed the petitions on the Garnishee Law and the Scale Inspection Act, which are to be presented to Premiers Whitney and Borden respectively.

The petition to Sir James Whitney asking him to amend the Garnishee Act was signed by all the grocers, butchers and milk dealers. A committee consisting of Pres. John Diprose, H. Fountaine, Thos. Shaw, E. J. Ryan and Jos. Scandrett was named to see the Hon. Adam Beck, to ask him to support the above measure.

Adam Palmer, J. A. McFarlane, G. B. Drake and Harry Hanahan were named to wait on the members of East, West and North Middlesex to request them to support the measure.

Another largely signed petition will be sent to Premier Borden, showing forth the injustice of the merchants paying for inspection of scales when it is done in the interests of the purchasing public. Building and health inspectors, it was pointed out, are paid salaries instead of fees.

Committees were also named to wait on the local members of the House of Commons asking them to use their influence to have the above injustice remedied.

A resolution was also passed asking The Canadian Grocer to urge all Grocers' Associations and merchants where there are no organizations to see their members of Parliament asking their support of the above measures when they come up. President Diprose stated the Ontario Retail Grocers' Association would see that both petitions were presented at the coming sessions.

A resolution of condolence was requested to be sent to the family of the late Wm. Hayes, grocer, who was buried a few weeks ago.

The meeting was of the opinion that the grocers of the city should have a representative on the aldermanic board for the coming year. Thos. Shaw was urged to stand, but would not consent. The members present refused to take "no" for an answer, and gave him till next meeting to consider the matter.

Dealers Preparing for Advent Trade

This is Expected to be Heavy—Advent Season Opens on Dec. 1.—Supplies are on Liberal Scale—Temperature Now More Favorable—Seasonable Movement of Oysters.

Dealers, both wholesale and retail are preparing for the advent fish trade which will be under way in little more than a week, Dec. 1 being the first Sunday of the Advent season. While wholesalers are putting forth the greatest effort, retailers are looking forward and by end of next week should begin to order on larger scale in anticipation of a bigger demand during coming weeks. Prospects are bright for good trade during this period. Supplies are on quite liberal scale and all that is needed is suitable weather. The temperature of late has been more favorable to the fish trade, and should continue to become more so.

QUEBEC.

MONTREAL.—The cooler weather is having a stimulating effect upon this market. For oysters especially the call has increased. A demand for both shell and bulk stock has developed which is far in excess of anything noted so far this year. It is likely, however, that orders will grow greater still before December is well under way.

The cool weather has also meant much to the smoked fish market. Haddies, Kippers and Fillets are now arriving in good quantities, the quality being well night perfect. The demand also has improved greatly.

At present time, fresh halibut is extremely scarce, and it is doubtful if there will be any greater supply next week. Fresh lake fish too are finished. However, there is a fine supply of Cod and Haddock, and frozen lake fish are in good supply. New frozen herring, smelts, striped bass, mackerel, and salmon, also arrived on Tuesday, enabling a wider range to be offered.

Few price changes have been made. Herring is quoted somewhat higher. Smelts too are advanced, being now quoted at 11c instead of 9. Whitefish, on other hand, has dropped to 11 cents.

ONTARIO.

TORONTO.—Plans are being made by wholesalers, as well as good many retailers to get full benefits from Advent season which will be here in little more than a week. Prospects for trade during this period are bright.

The change is gradually being made from fresh to frozen varieties of fish, the list of fresh caught being decidedly on the dwindle. Smoked varieties are doing quite well, haddies and fillets being in demand.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

ST. JOHN.—Arrivals of fresh stock during week were somewhat disappointing. Sales with most dealers have, however, considerably increased during last few weeks, and with Advent fast approaching they are looking forward to further increased trade. For first time in St.John, Scotch cured herring are now being sold.

The lobster fishing season was opened on the 15th of this month, and prices range from 20 cents to 60 with demand quite encouraging. The opening this year is a little earlier than last season, and much in advance of what it was a few seasons ago.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

HALIFAX.—The fishing season on the Cape Breton coast is now about closed. Season on whole was not as good as last year. There was a large decrease in catch of codfish as compared with 1911. Mackerel also show slight decrease, while herring are about same as last season. Lobster fishing was pretty good this season, and prices not so high as last year.

Salmon was above that last season. There is also decrease in catch of halibut this season. Last year was one of best in many years.

SARDINE PACK NOT GOOD.

The foreign sardine pack on the whole has not been good this year. It is said to be now certain that the catch of French sardines will be the poorest on record. In Portugal, the supply of suitable fish is not equal to the demand, while the Norwegian catch is poor.

Produce & Provisions

An Easier Feeling In Pork Products

In Sympathy With Lower Hog Values—Should be More Liberal Supplies From Now on—Increased Supply of Butter Acts as Check on Firming Market—New Laid Eggs in Scant Supply.

There is a general easier feeling in pork products of late, with a few exceptions of certain lines in which there is still a dearth of supplies. At a number of centres, however, there has been weakening in prices of many lines of provisions as well as in lard in sympathy with the lower values that have ruled on live hogs during this month.

For a considerable time this fall, run of hogs was scant and with a good demand, pork products were kept well cleaned up. Hogs, however, have come forward more freely and prices have eased. While the porkers on Toronto market early in October went above $9 per cwt., at present time they are down to the 8 cent mark and thus the easier feeling in the products. Probably the decreased consumption by reason of high prices has also been a factor.

At this season when prices on provisions are usually at low point, we find them abnormally high on both sides of Atlantic, although there has been some slight reaction of late. The small supply of hogs has been the cause. There is plenty of feed in both the United States and Canada and with good corn yield, there should be more liberal supplies of bacon.

There have been better supplies of butter on several markets of late, acting as check on firming tendency present for some time. The plentitude of rough feed in country will likely have an important bearing on butter, resulting in an increased production, while the advent of New Zealand butter will also be a factor. There is a lull in demand from the West, although buyers are ordering their goods held in store to be shipped.

New laid eggs still continue scarce and high in price. There is good demand for storage article.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS.—For bacon and pork there is a great call. Short cut pork is still almost impossible to obtain. Bacon is more plentiful, also ham. Lard also is being largely ordered.

BUTTER.—Market here remains steady, prices still being largely governed by state of affairs in England. Local demand is large, but supply is not at all what could be desired. From present indications, both in Canada and in the Old Country, prices are likely to be maintained at practically present figure. No advance is expected until nearly Christmas. Possibly a higher figure may not then be struck, though it is impossible to predict so far ahead with any surety of being correct.

EGGS.—There has been tendency upward here, though quotations remain same. New laid eggs are exceedingly difficult to secure. There seems no doubt that this condition is in part due to decrease in market gardens, caused by increase in real estate subdivisions. Then, colder weather has, of course, had its effect upon the hens. The bad roads, too, are keeping some farmers from getting to town. All things, indeed, seem to have combined to make eggs scarcer. At same time demand is greater, so that slight upward tendency is not to be wondered at.

Probability seems to be that no great change will occur here for fortnight or more.

POULTRY.—More fowl are coming forward now than formerly, so that supply is probably equal to demand. This, however, has increased. Now there is call for geese, and ducks are moving largely. For turkey, too, there is demand.

Prices remain at old figure, nor is any change expected.

HONEY.—Supply of honey is wofully short. Rainy weather interfered greatly with the bees. Many, indeed, were killed. The whole honey crop was curtailed. Little is in warehouses now, and there is little more to be secured from Canada. Honey is to be brought in from Bermuda, but this supply can not possibly reach Montreal for three weeks or perhaps more.

Prices have stiffened a little, Buckwheat now being generally quoted at 10½ instead of 10.

CHEESE.—This market is rather weak in tendency. On English market bottom seems to have fallen out of cheese. Evidently there is a supply being brought in from New Zealand or some other place. As result, less is being taken from Canada at the moment. Therefore, there is an ample supply on local market. Prices are steady for the time, but a slight decline would not be altogether surprising.

PROVISIONS.—There is an easier feeling in some lines of provisions this week in sympathy with weaker tendency in live hogs of late. Smoked hams are down ½ cent per pound, while several firms are quoting lard ¼ cent lower. Hogs have been running heavier of late accounting for production of more lard.

Movement of hogs is better at times. In some quarters more liberal supplies are expected from now on.

BUTTER.—Butter is less firm than week or so ago, although the somewhat easier feeling has not made itself noticeable in any lower quotations. There is a good deal of freshly made butter coming in, particularly of dairy, and there have been some accumulations. With good receipts of butter and plenty of feed in the country, a check should be put on the firming tendency of butter.

EGGS.—The scarcity of new laid eggs still continues. Indeed in this particular variety, local wholesalers say little relief can be expected this side of the new year. Provision Market Higher Than in 1911

Breakfast Bacon About 5 Cents Above Last Year's Price to the Retailer—Lard, Ham and Pork also Higher—Comparisons With Past Two Years—All Has Depended on Supply of Hogs.

Following the trend of live hogs, provisions at the present time are at a comparatively high figure, especially when compared with a year ago. Of course the situation is much different from that which ruled last fall. In the fall of 1911, beginning from early September, live hogs began to come forward on a very liberal scale, and prices accordingly kept tobogganing until farmers who had hogs to sell thought that there was no bottom to the market.

Hogs Higher Than Year Ago.

One year ago, live hogs on the Montreal market were quoted at $6.65 per cwt., while to-day the price is $8.60, or practically 2 cents per pound higher. In the face of this fact and a good steady demand for pork products that has prevented any accumulations, it is not surprising to find that prices to-day are considerably above those of one year ago. Long clear bacon for instance is about 3 cents above a year ago, prices of light weight at Montreal being 14½ cents as against 11½c a year ago. Lard is also higher. Hogs have been running light in weight during most of the fall, and the production of lard has been small, although showing up a little better of late, with a slight easing in prices at some points.

Comparison With Year Ago.

Here is a comparison of present prices on Montreal market with those of a year ago:—

	To-day	1 Yr. ago.
Long Clear bacon, light	14½	11½
Hams, medium, 15 to 19 lb.	16½	14½
breakfast bacon, boneless	19	14
Boiled ham, skinned	26	24
Spiced rolled bacon	16	12
Pure lard, in tierces	15	12
Compound lard, tierces	10	8¾
Heavy short cut clear pork	$25.00	22.50

Not so High as Two Years Ago.

This comparison, without doubt, gives the idea that provision prices at the present time are extremely high, but it is an old saying, that things are never so bad that they couldn't be worse. For instance, if we look up prices of two years ago, we will realize this. In the fall of 1910, the supply of hogs was very meagre, and pork products had attained probably a record height. Here are comparisons of the past few years on three lines:—

	Now	1911	1910
Long clear bacon	14½	11½	15½
Medium hams	16½	14½	18½
Pure lard tierces	15	12	15

Here, it is shown that prices in 1910 were even greater than to-day. Most retailers well remember that period of high prices as it interfered to no little extent with sales.

A Matter of Supply.

The cause of these wide price fluctuations from year to year, lies with the farmer. Because in 1909, hogs were low, he gave no attention to them, and prices in 1910 went up. Then all the farmers went in for hogs, and prices last year went down. Again, the farmer neglected hogs and history has repeated itself this year, by prices again attaining a high point.

ONE SELLING REASON BUT THERE ARE MORE

It is human nature to prefer to sell goods guaranteed in quality by the manufacturer, and it is human for the public to prefer that class of goods. Elgin Brand Pure Lard, Cooked Meats, Smoked Ham and Bacon are guaranteed quality; but we don't want you to sell for that reason alone. There is another.

Very shortly after you start to sell it, Elgin Brand goods will give you another reason. It very seldom loses an adherent, once it gets him.

THE "WANT AD."

The "want ad." has grown from a little used force in business life, into one of the great necessities of the present day.

Business men nowadays turn to the "want ad." as a matter of course for a hundred small services.

The "want ad." gets work for workers and workers for work.

It gets clerks for employers and finds employers for clerks. It brings together buyer and seller, and enables them to do business though they may be thousands of miles apart.

The "want ad." is the great force in the smal affairs and incidents of daily life.

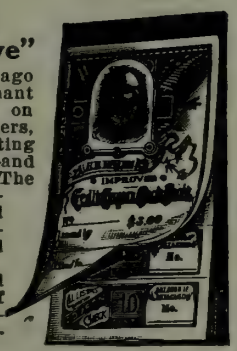
"The World Do Move"



A generation ago many a merchant "went broke" on credit customers, merely by letting things run on—and on — and on. The merchant of today can hold his credit customers and still "play safe." Thousands and thousands of progressive merchants are doing it with

ALLISON COUPON BOOKS

They reduce expenses, eliminate losses, prevent misunderstandings, paying for themselves many times over.

HOW THEY WORK

A man wants credit. You think he is good. Give him a $10.00 Allison Coupon Book. Have him sign the receipt or note form in the front of the book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with $10.00 — no trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten cent coupon, and so on until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10.00 and gets another book. No pass books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes. Allison Coupon Books are recognized everywhere as the best.

For sale by the jobbing trade everywhere.

Choice eating apples for domestic and export use, supplied in any quantities.

When one of your best customers call and ask for SUN GOLD VINEGAR, what will you say? Will you apologize or cheerfully supply?

It is already an established fact that housewives have discovered that there is no other vinegar to compare with SUN GOLD. It is a cider vinegar made under model conditions and without a rival in its quality. It is also moderate in cost.

Now, can you refuse our exceptional prices for a year's supply? This has been a good apple year, and our orchards have yielded over 160,000 barrels of picked apples; we are therefore prepared to demonstrate our superior facilities to supply the trade DIRECT at rock-bottom prices.

Will you allow us to quote you? If so, you will surely accept.

P.S.—Our prices of new cider and apples in any quantities are equally interesting.

You always lose when you "Money-back" a customer

FIRST—you lose your profit; second—you lose your time; third, you may lose your customer.

Further, your recommendation is weakened in effect, and then there is the annoyance of claiming on the miller.

And when finally you get your money back—why, you are still out of pocket.

Anybody with a new product can "guarantee" to money-back.

But guaranteed flour is not enough, Brother Grocer.

Isn't it enough to sell flour without having to buy it back?

Don't sell on suspicion when you can sell on certainty.

It is immaterial what brand you are selling now, FIVE ROSES flour will bring you easier, larger sales.

It will bring you a greater volume of net profit.

Because it is more than merely "guaranteed"—it has established a belief.

A guarantee is based on promise, but a belief is based on performance. Since 1888, housewives have tried FIVE ROSES, tested it every way. And now they KNOW.

Sell a flour that needs no "guarantee," Brother Grocer. Packed in sizes to suit YOUR trade, ask your jobber for FIVE ROSES or write our nearest office.

Imposing Factors

¶ The advantage of standing on the "Runways" of the little things is not as a rule fully appreciated. In this enlightened age it is advantageous that the merchant be reasonably familiar with his wares. You can no longer stampede your customers; they have to be shown, and temporary impressions must be avoided for impressions that are more lasting. A little counsel with proper grace is very effective.

¶ The average housewife makes an oyster stew by putting the oysters in the milk when cold; instead, she should bring the milk to a simmer, then put the oysters in; allow the contents to simmer for a few minutes, then serve while hot. Butter and other seasoning can be added to suit the taste. This is one of a hundred little pointers contained in a booklet gotten out by the "Oyster Growers' and Dealers' Association of North America," of which we are members.

¶ The first thousand booklets cost $200.00 for art, decoration, electrotype, etc., or 20c each. It gives practical and scientific information on oyster propagation and culture as well as the food values of oysters as compared with other food products, also one hundred tried recipes. The scientific end is from such men as Professor Julius Nelson and Professor Frederick P. Gorham, men who stand high in their profession and men who mix the practical with the theoretical and thereby ride an even keel.

The business of the "SEALSHIPT" Oyster System's Canadian Branch has been taken over by us. We can fill all orders promptly for "SEALSHIPT" Oysters or equipment.

¶ November is to oysters what June is to butter; they are in their prime now. The satisfaction your trade experience and the volume of business you do, depends largely on the quality of oysters you obtain, and you should also not overlook the matter of service. We can assure you of all these.

ST. VINCENT ARROWROOT

can be made up into so many and so delightful dishes that its popularity is easily explained. Medical science is loud in its praises of St. Vincent Arrowroot as a dish for infants and invalids because it is so strengthening and easily digested.

You have but to acquaint your trade, Mr. Grocer, with the fact that you have St. Vincent Arrowroot and you can be sure of a steady sale. There's good money in it, too.

Write the Secretary for information and samples.

FOR THE CHRISTMAS BAKING

Every home-cook wants her Christmas puddings, pies, cakes, sauces, etc., to be extra good. It is a good time to introduce to her. She will be glad to know about this real extract of Mexican Vanilla Beans. Glad to know that it will make her Christmas dainties even more delicious than they were last year. The real Vanilla flavor will be a revelation to many women, since most women are used to the inferior and somewhat harsh taste of chemical imitations of the genuine Vanilla flavor.

Shirriff's

Other delicious Shirriff Flavoring to introduce to her are — Lemon, Almond, Rose Pineapple, Strawberry, Ratafia, and ninety others.

There's a good margin of profit in Shirriff's Flavorings. And it adds to a dealer's reputation to sell and recommend them.

OTHER GROCERS SEE THAT IT PAYS TO SELL

"SALADA"

One of our city customers wrote us this week as follows :

"After reading your advertisement in the "Grocer"
"of November 15th, I did some checking up and "found that on all individual lines I handle, only
"about six articles show me more profit weekly
"than "SALADA." It begins to look like a mistake
"to keep "SALADA" on the back shelf."

We go further, and assert that if Canadian Grocers will carefully go into their profits they will find that there is no article with the possible exception of bread, that shows as large a net profit weekly as "SALADA." They must take into consideration the amount of capital invested, the effort expended in making sales, etc.

Increasing Sales on "Good Profit" Line

How the Window Backed up by Organized Salesmanship Inside the Store Makes Strong Selling Force—Display of Semi-Luxuries Shown Recently in Hamilton Window—Importance of Selling as Many Profitable Goods as Possible—Frequent Changes in Display Emphasised.

Scarcely enough attention is paid by many retail grocers to what may be termed the semi-luxuries. These include goods which possibly the consumer could get along without, but which are bought up in large quantities by the wealthy and middle classes.

It is on this class of food products that the dealer can make a fairly good profit and that is an important reason why more selling force should be placed behind them. As a retailer in a recent letter to this paper stated, there is very little profit in many cases on some of the necessities of life such as butter, eggs, potatoes, etc. Competition is so keen in his locality that he cannot make much more than 8 or 10 per cent. on such lines and they are lines that form half, if not more, of the annual turnover of a retail grocer. If cost of doing business is from 14 to 18 per cent., where then, is the merchant to profit unless he does sell many of these high-class, semi-luxury lines?

The accompanying window is a splendid illustration of how these goods can be effectively displayed. It was one shown some time ago by A. G. Bain & Co., retail grocers of Hamilton, Ont. The Bain store is situated in the heart of the city on a street where there is an extensive traffic. It thereby has the opportunity of attracting trade from a wide area. The opportunity is made valuable use of by bringing the window into play.

The display includes olives, kippered herring, potted meats in glass, sardines, soups, corned beef, canned tongue, canned sausage, etc. The simplicity of the display itself backed by the attractive selling made it a strong seller, as are all the windows of A. G. Bain & Co. A glance at the picture will show a fine symmetrical arrangement. The pyramid style is used for goods in the background with an occasional article lying flat on the top. On the floor in front, olive bottles are lying in white excelsior with a definite arrangement carried out. The four show and price cards are artistically lettered and they assisted greatly in the selling.

Window dressing in the Bain store is looked after just as systematically as the display shown here is arranged. Once a week each of the two large windows is newly dressed, the work being done under the direction of Mr. Bain himself. He is a firm believer in the selling power of a good display and insists that his windows be always attractive and strong in the art of drawing business.

Mr. Bain argues that when goods of a semi-luxury character are placed in stock, the dealer must get behind them. The fact that the profit is always fair makes it worth while. These are goods which will not sell themselves. They must be backed up by aggressive selling work on the part of the entire staff. Every opportunity must be seized to move them out. In addition to using the window, A. G. Bain & Co. display the same goods inside, thus insuring that every one's attention is drawn to them. "There are not $25 worth of unsaleable stock on our shelves," was the remark made by one member of the firm, indicating how well this high class stock is moved out when attention is given it.

The experience of this firm can well be turned to good effect by all dealers in districts which include some fairly well-to-do people. Women are constantly thinking of dishes for lunches, afternoon teas, receptions, etc., and among the high class semi-luxury lines can usually be found the goods they want. A great part of the work of the sale's staff lies in becoming thoroughly acquainted with such goods and in suggesting one or more of them at the psychological moment. "I wonder what I'll get for lunch," can then be met with the suggestion that canned or condensed soup, tongue in glass, sardines in olive oil, olives, etc., be used. Many stores are making good money in this way and if more would undertake to push the high class lines, the grocery trade would receive a much larger revenue annually.

As stated above, profits on these goods make it worth while to push sales. The majority of the staples sell themselves, and, while staples should not be overlooked, much of the energy of the selling staff should be directed to the others. The Bain store is a concrete example of what is possible. One of the two windows is never without a good showing of semi-luxuries. Olives for instance, are displayed the year round—not for the want of something to show, but because they sell and produce good profits.

Christmas Trade Main Feature of December

Early Efforts Should be Made to Move Out Goods for Christmas Baking—Dried Fruits, Peels, Nuts, Icing Sugar and Spices Among the Most Important—Mincemeat and Plum Puddings Will Be Good Sellers—Season for Fish and Oysters Here—Advent Begins December 1—Good Use Should be Made of the Window.

The main pivot around which trade in December revolves, is the fact that Christmas comes during that month. It affords great opportunities for the live retail grocer.

The dealer should give particular attention, especially during the first part of the month to all those lines which enter into the make up of the Christmas cake and plum pudding. Every day nearer the festive season, means less chance of selling these lines, so that this trade should be gone after strongly at an early date. Raisins, currants and peels are perhaps the most important items, but there is a long list of other goods which should not be forgotten. It includes such lines as dates, figs, flour, molasses, mincemeat, spices, plum puddings, nuts, flavorings, icing sugar, etc.

Get Behind Quality Goods.

Every dealer will find it to his advantage to sell the best grades in these goods. The Christmas cake and plum pudding are the most important creations in the baking line the housewife attempts during the year, and the average woman does not want to take any chances on its goodness, even for a considerable difference in price of the material. Many dealers feature this point to good advantage, pointing out the folly of taking chances by buying poor quality goods.

The window can and should be turned to good use by every dealer in promoting the sale of Christmas baking goods. They are all lines that lend themselves readily to good display and some excellent trims can be prepared. This should be given special attention during the first couple of weeks of the month. After that, the dealer may feel it more desirable to show other lines such as Christmas gifts and nuts and candies. Many dealers who have two display windows, start showing nuts, candies and fancy lines in one, soon after the turn of the month, still devoting the other to baking goods until close onto Christmas. There are always a certain number who leave the making of their Christmas cake until rather late, and it is to catch these, that a display is kept in the one window.

Confectionery and Nut Month.

December is the month in which confectionery and nuts, take a big step to the front, and they should be made an important feature by every dealer. The reason for this is obvious. People will be buying a certain quantity anyway, and the best time to push an article is when it is wanted. However, the grocer should realize that demand for these lines is by no means a fixed quantity. It can be increased materially by proper methods, window and interior display being an important factor. The season of long evenings around the family hearth, and of many social gatherings, is here in real earnest, and thus the suggestion of nuts or confectionery should bring good results. As the festive season draws closer, extra attention should be devoted to these lines.

Prepare for Trade in Poultry.

Next in importance, or perhaps equally so, to the Christmas cake for Christmas, is poultry. At any rate, it is essential and as the housewife knows she will be wanting some variety for the occasion, there is no reason why her order should not be secured in advance. It would be to advantage of both customer and dealer, as the customer would be sure of her requirements, and the dealer would be better enabled to arrange for his supply. For this reason, it behooves the grocer to sell and arrange for his supply of poultry as far in advance as possible.

Special Fish Season Here.

The first of December marks the opening of Advent—a season when fish will be in special demand, and for this reason should receive special prominence in the grocery. There is no reason why dealers who have not yet commenced the handling of fish, should hold off any longer. Supplies are on an extensive scale, the weather is favorable for handling, and the public will now be wanting the goods. Oysters is a kindred line that should sell well. The quality is now such as to appeal to the customer, and there should be many oyster suppers during the month. The number can be increased by the dealer suggesting this line in display and advertisement.

Entering now upon the threshold of the last month of the year, the dealer should put forth his best efforts to make it, as well as the total for the year, a record one in point of sales. The month is rich in opportunities and they should be realized on to the best possible extent.

This is one of the months of the year when advertising should be specially used. Good strong copy in the local paper about the goods peculiar to this season which you have to offer, combined with careful attention to display and personal salesmanship should be productive of good results.

As pointed out before, trade during the month centres around Christmas and it should be the aim of the dealer to get the public filled with the spirit of the occasion, as early in the month as possible. It gets them thinking about the day and promotes purchasing. Extra trade can be induced by putting the shop and window in holiday trim early in the month.

DOLL CONTEST TAKES WELL.

McKay & McCaw, grocers, Dundas St., Toronto, who have a store also at corner of Arthur & Shaw Sts., managed by Mr. McCaw, have a doll contest in connection with both stores with a view to increasing December sales. The dolls are grouped around a small table, each with cup and saucer placed before her on the white cover. The two dolls to be given as 1st and 2nd prizes in the Arthur and Shaw St. store, were dressed by Mrs. McCaw, who has shown taste and skill especially in the millinery portion of their attire, while the 1st and 2nd prize dolls in the Dundas store window were dressed by Mrs. McKay, the respective wives of the partners. Mr. McCaw reports that there were 30,000 votes at last year's contest, and great excitement prevailed on the closing day, when the prizes were awarded to the successful competitors. The entrance to the store was completely blocked for a time, and Mr. McCaw, whose interests then were entirely confined to the Dundas store, declared you would have thought it was election night.

In our issue of November 15, a window display of the Hudson's Bay Co., Kamloops, B.C., was reproduced in The Grocer. It was stated that this window was dressed by R. George, but now we find that E. F. Williams was the trimmer. Mr. Williams dressed also the 1911 Christmas window of the above company, which appeared in our Fall Campaign Number.

Collecting From Good, But Slow Pays

Good Advice on How to Deal With the Man Who Has the Money But Who Neglects His Grocery Bills—A System Gathered From Experience — Dealer Must Have Business Well Organized to Follow Up Promises Properly.

*By T. F. McDowell.

To keep accounts well collected and still retain your customer's trade is of great value to your business. Engine and rudder steer the ship at sea. Money and experience steer the ship of commerce. The great percentage of failures rests on not knowing how to do business and in failing to collect for what you have sold. One reason for forming associations and having our protective lists is to avoid becoming entangled with people unscrupulous in settling their accounts. The banker must know something of your personal record and your worth before you can secure a line of credit. From our commercial agencies they gain this information, to verify your personal statement. Why then should we not make every effort to put our protective lists in such shape that the grocer, the meat dealer, the hardware merchant, or any one doing a credit business may obtain such information that will justify your first step in opening an account.

We might ask ourselves, "Why people who can pay, don't pay? Do we find this class of people behind in their insurance policies or their obligations in transactions in which their personal worth is in danger? Very seldom.

When his premium is due to his insurance company he realizes that if it is not paid his insurance becomes worthless, and at the expiration of thirty days he must, if not then paid, lose the risk. Against this obligation he is confronted with new medical examination if he wishes reinstatement. Time has elapsed since his former certificate of good health and he may now be physically unfit, but he prevents all this risk and pays his insurance when due.

What a revolution in trade we would have if our accounts were settled when due. Some people assume obligations with the idea that if they get short of cash at any time the grocer can wait, but he (the customer) finds money to pay his insurance. Our several associations, and those affiliated in one, The B. C. Retail Merchants' Association now in convention, can do a great work to establish prompt settlement of accounts. It is the duty of every member of a retail organization to report to our secretaries those customers who are unscrupulous in their payments.

*Mr. McDowell is a Vancouver, B.C., grocer, who is making good in that city, where he has been in business for several years. He is a native of north-western Ontario. This address was given before a convention of merchants recently, and is so full of valuable suggestions that it should be read by every dealer.

A Practice to be Stopped.

Suppose you are in business in Vancouver and you approach your customer whose account is past due. He reports by saying, "Why do you bother me about a cheque? When I lived in Victoria my grocer waited three months for his money." Or he might say, "Before I opened my account with you I dealt at your neighbor's grocery and he never asked me for money; now, if you don't want my account under these conditions I will deal elsewhere."

Now, gentlemen, this is the point I want to bring out: Let us stop this now and forever. None of us want to lose a good customer if he is well-to-do, but we want to feel that our neighbor grocer will act as we have, and not allow such dilatory settlements.

Mr. Smith may speak to you in regard to opening an account before he settles with his former grocer, but if he finds a rule prevailing among tradespeople (not only grocers) insisting on prompt settlement, he will in all probability remain with you, and pay up.

Under Obligation to the Dealer.

Let us now deal with Mr. Jones. He approaches you for credit; he finds it more convenient to order by 'phone, pay by cheque, or his income may demand a certain time of settlement. Do you transact this business over the 'phone with a man you do not know personally, or only by reputation? Never. He is asking a favor; he must come to your place of business. Now is your time to arrange details. Personality must play a great factor at this meeting. You must show a certain degree of independence; impress the idea on your likely customer that you are in business to cater to his requirements and to please. In making these arrangements, state your terms, then give him the privilege of stating his time of settlement. If your date is the 10th of the month following statement and he pays all his household bills on the 15th, by all means grant him his request, by thus consenting you gain your first point, but make a record of it.

Recording Transactions.

The system for this purpose is very simple. A little cabinet file with several cards divided in sections A, B, C, etc., and on one of these cards you write thus:

Name .. ..
Residence ....
Owner of Residence .....
Residence or Office 'Phone .....
Previous Grocer ....
Date of Settlement as Arranged .....
....

Also leave room on these cards to record any court transactions which you may obtain from Bradstreet's or Dun's weekly reports (for the best of us sometimes get into trouble).

I believe it wise to enclose in your first statement to a customer a memo of this description:

Dear Sir,—
To avoid any misunderstanding in connection with the payment of this account, we respectfully state the terms of settlement as arranged to be August 15.
Faithfully yours,
Name ....

Account Not Likely Forgotten.

As a rule, the grocer's statement when received from the mail is opened by Mrs. Jones. At a glance she sees the arrangements (probably Mr. Jones has not told his wife of these terms) thus she is likely to keep busy Mr. Jones posted about August 15, or date agreed upon. If the account is not paid on August 15, send him an account rendered, and enclose one of these little notices which I have just mentioned. This transaction should be recorded in your collection journal, and a date set for renewed action in case of default. On that date your next action is to get in touch with him over the 'phone, speaking to him courteously and asking him for a cheque. He may say, "I will send you a cheque on August 25." "Thank you, sir," should be your reply. Record this date in your collection journal. August 25 passes and you have not received his cheque. Before you close business on this date attend to Mr. Jones in some way. I would suggest a letter like this:

Dear Sir,—
We respectfully draw your attention to your July account for $59.45, which you failed to settle to-day, according to arrangements made August 20.
Yours truly,
Name ....

Next morning he opens his mail and is confronted with this letter. "By jove,

SELLING CHRISTMAS GOODS EARLY.

The sooner the dealer creates a Christmas atmosphere about the store, the sooner will he sell Christmas goods. December makes its bow in a couple of days, and with its arrival every grocer should begin plans for a bigger trade than corresponding month of a year ago.

Already many dealers are showing attractive windows of new dried fruits and other baking material. Grocer representatives have observed these all over the country in some of the most progressive stores. They are bringing in business that could not be secured in any other way until a couple of weeks prior to Christmas Day.

Getting the public to shop early benefits the retailer in still another way. When the bulk of the Christmas trade is forced into the last three or four days, good service cannot be rendered and this is sure to cause complaints. Neither can the proper attention be given to wants of regular customers. But when these have been educated to buy early in December, sales of extra goods —goods over and above those actually asked for—can frequently be made. This is what increases sales and makes the month's business supersede that of a year ago.

CO-OPERATIVE STORE HANDICAPS.

In two or three cities and towns in Ontario there are efforts at work at the present time to establish co-operative stores. These, as has been frequently explained in the past, are merely joint stock companies with an overabundance of small shareholders, usually an unwieldy number, if we are to judge from the success and failures experienced in this country already.

The cry that brings in the shareholder is, of course, "the-high-cost-of-living." This is alleged to be largely due to excessive profits charged by the retailer. At the very beginning, therefore, co-operative stores are under a serious handicap because of this belief.

As anyone who has been in the grocery trade in this country knows, there are many staple lines of groceries that no one except a legitimate retailer can purchase, and they must be bought from legitimate wholesale grocers at prices set by the manufacturer. These include certain well known brands of sugar, cereals, starch, syprups, canned goods, soaps, etc., etc. Co-operative stores cannot buy such goods any cheaper, and how they can sell them much cheaper than retailers is a difficult question to answer, if any kind of service is to be rendered.

In Great Britain and Germany the success of these enterprises has been largely due to national habits of thrift and density of population. A Scottish or a German housewife, it is said, will walk some distance to make a small purchase at the co-operative store. She is prepared to put up with inconveniences in complying with the regulations of the society. But the temper of the people on the American continent is different. Minor rules and regulations are apt to be resented by the average housewife here. Students of the movement in the Old Country declare it is the eager desire to save on the part of the housewife that permits of the success of co-operative societies there.

In Canada during recent years there have been many co-operative stores established. A few of them are no doubt making money, but from all appearances the majority have failed in their hopes. The prospects are therefore not very bright for the co-operative store stock subscribers in this country.

LET CHEAP HELP DO CHEAP WORK.

Not many days ago in an Ontario store, a high-priced clerk was found sorting out bags in a rear storehouse. At the same time there were several customers in the store and a junior clerk was serving them, or at least trying to.

This looks like a case of bad policy on the part of the merchant.

The clerk did not really object to this less agreeable work because he felt it was his duty to do that which his employer wished. He was not there of his own accord, however, and would rather have been selling goods.

His employer had asked him to do it, while a clerk of much less experience and who was sadly lacking in the qualities of salesmanship was detailed to serve customers. It is probable that if the duties of the two clerks had been reversed, the total sales for that afternoon would have been much larger, for the elder one was a good salesman. But this dealer apparently had not learned the wisdom of allowing the cheap help do the cheap work.

There are many other merchants pursuing a similar policy. A high-priced salesman is frequently given some work of lesser importance when he might better be employed in selling goods.

A high-salaried clerk should be kept at such work as will allow him to bring returns in proportion to his wages and the cheaper help given the cheaper work. The merchant should use his judgment in deciding on the work of each clerk.

DECEMBER A FISH MONTH.

With the opening of the Advent season on Monday next, the retail grocer who sells fish has a splendid opportunity to increase sales. Advent marks the time when frozen fish comes once more for attention, and as there is always an extensive demand for it, a variety stock is certainly worth while just now.

Fish should not simply be kept in stock in view of the existing demand. If this is the case, sales will not be large unless the community is composed largely of people who observe Advent. That does not at all mark the extent of sales. Scores of others buy fish when it is brought to their attention. There is always a feeling abroad that some of us consume too much meat. Whether this is true or not, a great many believe it, and on this belief the trade can do some effective work.

During December, therefore, fish and oysters should be energetically sold. A great many dealers already get behind these lines, and the turnover on them warrants their efforts. Others can do the same. A stock of frozen fish is easily handled with none of the attending difficulties which mark the hot summer season. They can be displayed advantageously in cool weather and with the assistance of show cards and advertising, displays can readily be turned into profit.

Now is the time to sell fish. It requires little energy to create demand; stocks can readily be kept without fear of loss and the Advent season is here. Now is surely the psychological moment.

BE PROTECTED AGAINST FIRE.

At this time of year retailers should take a look at their fire insurance policies. Around Christmas time decorations are usually added to the store interior, and if these are of an inflammable character, the retailer is apt to lose in case of fire.

In connection with this matter the Fire Underwriters' Association has issued the following circular which all should read carefully:—

> "Following our usual custom at this season of the year, I beg to call your attention to the dangers to life and property from Christmas decorations, displays, etc., which are frequently made at this time of the year. The use of Christmas greens, harvest specimens, and other inflammable materials, such as draperies, scenery, cotton to represent snow, and the like (especially in connection with electric and other lighting systems), is decidedly an increase of hazard, it being impossible to make displays of that nature perfectly safe.
> "The statutory conditions of your insurance policy read in part as follows: 'Any change material to the risk, but within the control or knowledge of the asured, shall avoid the policy as to the part affected thereby, unless the change is promptly notified in writing to the company or its local agent.' "

The danger to life in stores in case of fire is so great in view of possibilities of a panic, that every precaution should be taken by the trade to prevent the slightest possibility of one occurring.

CUSTOMERS ENTITLED TO SATISFACTION.

"When buying goods, I always consider quality as well as price and in that way I give my customers the satisfaction to which they are entitled."—A. H. Schweitzer, Berlin, Ont.

In the above brief statement, there is an important point for the dealer who desires the continued confidence of his customers. Price without quality is a poor foundation on which to work. It may be suited to the here-and-there merchant who disappears in the night, but for the man who wants to build up a reputation—to secure a good-will worth while—this policy is a great handicap.

As this Berlin dealer intimates, customers are entitled to satisfaction. They know this is due them and if they cannot get it at one store, they go where it can be secured. The grocer with his ear to the ground will easily discover this. When a woman buys a package of butter from her dealer, she expects good butter. If it is not, her butter account at least, is usually transferred elsewhere. Same applies to other lines such as bacon, eggs, cheese, tea, coffee, etc.

Articles of quality must be selected and customers must be given satisfaction if the business is to grow to any proportions.

GETTING AT THE NET PROFIT.

Simmered down to rock bottom, the most important duty of the dealer is to keep in touch with ihs net yearly profit.

To do this he must know his yearly expenses and yearly volume of business. He must know on the one hand his cost of rent, light, fuel, salaries of employes, horses, wagons and upkeep of same, insurance, advertising and sundry expenses, and on the other the gross amount of business done, gross percentage of profits and gross profits. By deducting total expenses from gross profits, the all important figure looms up.

The aim of every dealer is to have the net profits as large as possible. To do this, the greatest possible business must be done at the least expense. How can this result be brought about unless he knows his exact expenses, his cost, his exact sales and the value of the goods in stock at the beginning and end of the year? This is the information every dealer should be assured of at the end of every fiscal year of the business. To get this requires but four things—an expense book, a cost book, a sales book (or their equivalents) and an inventory.

If expenses are known; if invoice cost is known; if total sales are known, and if the quantity of goods in stock at beginning and end of the year are known, how easy it is to know the net profit. Every dealer's business instinct demands this knowledge and those who haven't got it are running counter to what their business instinct calls for.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Now for a record month to finish up the year.

Appropriate decorations in the store spread the Christmas spirit and promote buying for the festive season.

Opening of Advent brings with it the first big fish season, and every dealer should profit by the added opportunities.

Getting money regularly from the man who can but doesn't pay is a work in which every dealer should be an adept.

Fortunate indeed is the housewife whose Christmas cake recipe calls only for a limited number of new laid eggs this year.

Successful salesmanship from the clerk's standpoint, consists largely in giving service and in the exercising of taste in personal appearance.

To hear some people talk, one would think the dealer is not entitled to any profit when he sells to the consumer. The fact that he gives a service is seldom taken into consideration.

A PAGE OF VALUE TO THE GROCERY CLERK

The Clerk of to-day is the Merchant of to-morrow

Because the clerks of to-day are the merchants of to-morrow, there is a great reason why every clerk should study thoroughly every phase of the retail business. His studies must include the all-important phase of Selling more particularly than anything else. It is a salesman that the employer needs more than anything else, and there are probably more positions open in the country to-day for salesmen than for any other class of men.

The merchant must not only be a good buyer; he must be a man who can organize his selling force to get the maximum amount of business. The clerks of to-day who are the merchants of to-morrow must, therefore, be men who can sell.

As a bright young salesman remarked to the writer recently, the matter of personal appearance and approach has much to do with making sales—even more than the majority of people are inclined to think. When a clerk who is slovenly dressed — dirty linen, dirty clothes, uncombed hair, etc.—attempts to make a sale he is handicapped before he ever opens his mouth. He may take an order but as far as selling anything else is concerned, he has little chance. The salesman must be cleanly attired, smart on foot, with a keen eye and clear head.

The clerk without the power to concentrate is far from being a salesman. When a customer is before the counter and one's efforts are directed to selling her goods, she and her requirements must be concentrated upon. That a rolling stone gathers no moss doesn't apply here. "Look the customer straight in the eye" is a maxim of all good salesmen and "concentrate alone on the work of selling that customer." When the clerk's eye wanders about the store it is impossible for him to properly appreciate the thoughts of the customer. The straight eye holds attention and secures, too, the undivided attention of the customer.

Have you, as a clerk, ever introspected your method of approach? When a purchaser enters the store and it is up to you to serve her, what is your attitude towards her? Have you ever given this special study or thought? If not, it is worth while looking into. The difference in results between the indifferent and don't-care-whether-you-buy approach and the gentlemanly, attentive clerk is frequently wide. To the employer, it often means the loss or gain of customers. It should not be forgotten that the employer notices all these things. If he doesn't, and pays no attention to them himself, he is not destined to any prolonged success. The approach that bespeaks interest in the customer's wants, and confidence that you can give the service and satisfaction looked for, is what attracts trade, sells goods above demand, and brings back the purchaser day after day.

No clerk can do best work in selling unless he knows the goods. The first requisite of the men who sell such appliances as the cash and credit register, the silent salesman, computing scale, etc., is that they know all there is to know about them. Where they are made, what they can do, how they overcome this or that—these are things that must be known by the seller destined to be successful. Same applies to the clerk in the store. Every clerk should know where the best coffee comes from, why it is best, and all reasons why he recommends it. He should know what there is to know about various brands of canned goods, tea, baking powders, meat sauces, olives, etc. It is his aim to sell the best and this can only be done when he is fully acquainted with all.

In this matter of knowing goods, the employer always plays an important part. The latter knows, or should know, his stock and he should have some methods to impart what he knows to the clerks. Too often the dealer gives only meagre information. When the price of an article, for instance, advances, he merely informs the staff of the advance. The reason for it is not stated and when a sale is made the customer is informed that the price has gone up, with the probably meaningless addition that this has been necessary on account of "the high cost of living." If currants or figs advance, and the cause is the Balkan war, the clerk should know this so that he can sell intelligently.

In selling goods from the retail store display takes a prominent place. The displaying of goods is something with which most clerks have to deal both as to interior and window arrangement. Many sales are made in this way and the credit of them should go to the one who constructed or arranged the display. The ambitious clerk is a believer in the power of showing goods and he has ideas enough to make displays that sell. In many of our large Canadian stores, window trimmers are paid substantial salaries for showing goods only. They are experienced men and because they produce windows that sell, they deserve good salaries. The art of display is assuredly one of the accomplishments of the retail clerk.

Another important acquisition to the salesman is accuracy. He must be accurate in his statements, in his counting, weighing, measuring, and in that portion of the book-keeping he has to look after. Too many errors are made with the counter check book. This breeds dissatisfaction among customers —particularly if the error is unfavorable to them. Accuracy in weighing is very essential. If underweight is given, there are bound to be suspicious buyers and if overweight, the dealer loses. This is all a part of the good salesman's work. He must be accurate before he branches out on life's journey alone.

In subsequent issues, a number of the above points and others will be taken up and illustrated with concrete examples. The Selling of goods will be dealt with exhaustively as this is the pivotal point in the life of every clerk whose future plans are for a business of his own.

Co-operation With Retail Trade Suggested

Speaker at Meeting of Canadian Credit Men's Association Advises Assistance to Retailers in Getting Amendment to Garnishee Act Passed—In Return Association Would Like Aid to Getting Bulk Sales Act in Force—No Honest Man Could Object to Either, He States—Objects of Association Exemplified.

Toronto, Nov. 28 (Special).—At the monthly meeting of the Ontario Division of the Canadian Credit Men's Association at McConkey's on Friday night last, L. J. Ball, the secretary, gave an address on the aims and accomplishments of the association. A full and complete explanation of the work being done, illustrated by lantern slides of the several forms used by the association, was made. One of the points touched upon was the fact that many retailers do not carry sufficient insurance. One thing the association is doing, is persuading many retailers to put on more insurance—a good thing, it was explained, for both wholesaler and retailer, as it affords protection for both.

Several of the members testified to the benefits they have received since joining the association, among them being H. D. Eby, of Eby-Blain, wholesale grocers, Toronto.

E. Leith, of Balfour, Syme & Co., wholesale grocers, Hamilton, gave a number of actual instances of how his firm have saved money by the association's reports. Speaking of the Bulk Sales Act, which, as the chairman, A. G. Malcolm said, would again be brought before the Ontario Legislature during the coming session, Mr. Leith said:—"This is one law that we certainly should have. It has been pointed out that it did not go through at the last session because of the opposition from country districts. I suggest that our attention be given to the retail merchants throughout the country, to show them that it is for their benefit as well as ours."

"I was reading in the 'Twenty Years Ago' column of The Canadian Grocer a few weeks ago that the Hamilton Grocers' Association of 20 years ago were trying to get a law passed to have laborers paid once a week by the large corporations. This was so they could get what was coming to them, and it could not be objected to by the honest man. In the same way the honest retailer cannot object to a Bulk Sales Act. In fact, it is to his advantage.

"I suggest that we co-operate with the retail merchants. Let us help them and let them help us. At the present time they are trying to get a bill passed reducing the amount of exemption in garnishment from $25 to $10. The honest man cannot object to this, any more than can the honest retailer object to the Bulk Sales Act. Why not help the merchants to get this legislation through, and in return get them to use their influence on their local members to get the Bulk Sales Act passed."

The membership of the Ontario division is now 158. A campaign is being undertaken to raise it to 200.

COLLECTING FROM GOOD, BUT SLOW PAYS.

I forgot that matter yesterday, I must send him a cheque at once," he says.

A collection journal is a book with consecutive days and dates and on each day and date have plenty of room to record different transactions such as:

Call on Mr. Jones for July account by request.

Mr. Smith promises a cheque by mail to-day.

Mr. White's note on account due to-day.

Sent Mr. Blank a statement on Aug. 15; he promises to pay to-day.

Sent Mr. Kelly a statement August 15, unable to get in touch with him; write him again to-day, etc.

When you have sent your accounts out, take from the ledger a list of names of every account owing, and their amounts. You know by so doing how much each person owes you. Accounts should be in alphabetical form, and when payments are received make it a daily duty to mark "paid" opposite their amounts, or if paid on account mark "paid on account $20.00." On the 15th look over this list and make what I would term a collection list. On this list you have before you the balance of your unpaid accounts. Watch them carefully.

Must Have Organization.

Collecting accounts from people who are slow pay, but well-to-do, and still retain their patronage, is a difficult task. You must have your business well organized, your office work must be given daily attention, your goods and your service must be absolutely satisfactory. To a marked degree your customer ought to feel he cannot better himself by dealing elsewhere.

If you are compelled to resort to methods of collecting, you must have facts in such shape with which to confront him if he says: "I did not make arrangements to pay you on the 25th of August," you have your collecting journal to show him. The business man sometimes forgets, seldom making a record of a promise, but you have, and thus you always have the best of him.

Don't waste time calling if you can get him on the 'phone; if you call on him his office may be filled with people waiting to see him on business, but 'phone him and he will stop talking to his caller and you thus have him at once. Try to always leave your man feeling the best towards you, but thoroughly impress him with the importance of your business. Not everyone can be a successful collector of accounts. It is a work by itself; human nature must be studied; fact and judgment must always be exercised; if he swings out on you, dodge him, but don't strike back.

Following items are from Canadian Grocer of December 2, 1892:—

"Hugh Malcolmson & Co., Chatham, Ont., do a flourishing business both in the grocery and crockery trade in that town. Their crockery hall is managed by a son of Mr. Malcolmson; another son manages the company's extensive grocery business."

Editorial Note.—This is another of the retail businesses which has stood up for two decades, the name of Hugh Malcolmson being to-day well known throughout Kent County.

Granulated sugar was quoted at $4.50 per cwt. on the Montreal market in our issue of December 2, 1892. To-day the price is $4.75, only 25 cents a hundred or a quarter of a cent a pound dearer. On same market, syrups were quoted around 1¾ to 1⅞ cents per lb., while to-day, prices are from 3¼ to 3¾ cents, according to amount purchased. Standard rice was quoted twenty years ago at $3.85 to $4.00 per cwt., while to-day it is $3.75, therefore showing a slight decline.

MOLASSES AND SYRUPS.—Particular attention should be paid to molasses market at present time, as some interesting developments as far as prices are concerned, must take place. Sugar is now selling at low figure and molasses should naturally follow, other things being equal. But as the new crop will not be here till February, and stocks of fancy locally are becoming weaker every day, a higher range of prices than would naturally be expected, should come into force.

Toronto, Nov. 28.—The November grocery trade has been good. Activity has marked local market during whole month. All jobbers are unanimous in opinion that November trade when totals have been made up, will compare favorably with last year, and there are some who have no hesitation in declaring that it will show an increase. There has been some difficulty in securing goods, on account of slow movement of freight, but this is by no means a new trouble.

Local jobbers have pretty well cared for goods booked to go out by lake and rail routes. Navigation is due to close this week, but there will, of course, be further shipments by this route as long as weather permits.

The time when last call for perishable goods which retailers wish to get in before cold weather makes it impossible, is now nearing. Good many dealers stock up with certain lines before temperature goes so low as to make it necessary to bring them in by express. Among such lines are catsup, pickles, olives, sauces, vinegar, mineral water, etc.

There is now a heavy call for all those ingredients which enter into the make up of the Christmas cake. Retailers are now devoting good deal of their time to featuring these lines, and prospects are bright for a record season's business. On whole, prices are fairly reasonable and this combined with plentitude of money now in circulation should mean good trade in all Christmas lines.

SUGAR.—There is no change in sugar market since last week. There is easiness ahead but it is question when it will become apparent in refined prices. Some say it may not come until well on in December. One man this week said he wouldn't be surprised to see a break anytime. "Beet sugar in the U.S.," he argued, "is 40 cents below cane, and I think that cane refiners will reduce prices just as soon as sufficient raw supplies come to hand. If there is a break across the line, Canadian market will probably follow."

Nearby raws have been in rather scant supply and when they become more plentiful, there will likely be a change in refined market.

DRIED FRUITS.—Staple as well as more fancy varieties of dried fruits are moving out in good volume. Low price of seeded raisins is working for a big trade. Second shipment of dates is moving out well, at lower price noted last week.

On whole, dried fruits are on reasonable level this year, and consumption should accordingly be large. Prunes are much lower, but real big movement of these will not get under way until after turn of new year. Prohibitive prices of last year on peaches and apricots have given way to more normal values. Quotations on choice peaches locally range all way from 8 to 10½ cents.

There is a generally firmer feeling in fruits at Coast, both prunes and raisins taking on steadier tendency. Evaporated apples are still weak. Packing is about finished and some figures regarding year's output should soon be available. At any rate, pack is large.

SPICES.—Spice trade during November has been good. Buying in anticipation of demand for Christmas baking has added impetus to business, while shipments going out to lake and rail points have added considerably to volume of trade.

Cloves probably show the most firmness of any line at the moment. There is no news from primary points to indicate any change from steadiness. Peppers are in much same position.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.—Trade in rice is on a normal scale. There is nothing in news from the Far East to indicate anything but steadiness. Public opinion in Japan as to actual rice harvest is growing more pessimistic. Stocks of rice are not coming to market to extent generally expected at this time of year. New crop rice in Japan is now quoted at a price breaking the highest record in December in past 11 years.

It is estimated that 650,000 tons will be available for export from Siam and market there is firm. Steadiness also rules in Burmah, Conflicting reports come to hand from India, but it would seem that prospects generally are quite good. It is rumored that Patua crop will be considerably short.

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.—There are few features of interest in canned goods at present time. While considerable attention has been given them in way of shipping and receiving supplies, efforts have not been put behind their sale as will be case later on. At moment, Christmas goods are holding centre of stage, naturally detracting somewhat from canned goods. However, those retailers who have given some attention to featuring new goods have found good results.

Local market is quiet, and easier in fact that dealers who raised their ideas above opening prices on certain lines, are beginning to ease them to original figures. For instance, tomatoes are again being generally quoted at $1.37½, no premium over opening price being asked. Some firms were of opinion a few weeks ago that possibly something above that figure could be secured.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

Winnipeg, Nov. 26.—Wholesale grocers report a most satisfactory volume of business and much in excess of that done at this time last year. Christmas trade is now becoming an important factor but great bulk of holiday business will be done during the first week in December.

In meantime, feature stock of all kinds from the East is pouring into wholesale warehouses.

Collections have much improved and amount of cash business done is more satisfactory both to wholesale and retail dealers.

Movement of grain continues in unprecedented volume, exceptionally fine weather in November having greatly favored rapid delivery and transportation.

There is nothing of importance to note in price changes. Shelled almonds are a little stiffer, and all other lines steady.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, Nov. 26.—Firm and steady was the grocery market in St. John during the week, prices unchanged in most commodities. Opening of winter-port season and arrival of large trans-Atlantic steamers have had effect of causing quite an impetus in trade with many dealers. Cornmeal is slightly easier this week having dropped about ten cents, but aside from that there are no changes of particular interest. Flour market is about the same, slightly easier if anything, while sugar market is also stationary. Molasses is more active than for many weeks. Heavy orders have been filled for country districts and shipped before close of navigation.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, Nov. 26.—Scarcity of new laid eggs is being acutely felt and price has advanced within past few weeks from 60 cents to 75 cents. Wholesalers have men in Fraser Valley making contracts with farmers, but even this canvassing fails to provide adequate supply. These new laid eggs are being sold wholesale at 75 cents a dozen and local grocers have no doubts that price will rise higher than a dollar.

Business in the produce trade has been brisk with supply and demand equal and good. Arrivals are chiefly confined to staples. The Spanish Malagas arriving are in fine condition. The apple market is unchanged.

Wholesale quotations are as follows:

Smoked Meats.—Hams, boiled, 26; bacon, 22 to 23.

Eggs.—New laid eggs, dozen, 75c; fresh Eastern, doz., 38c; selected, doz., 34c.

Butter.—Local creamery, 35c; Eastern Townships, prints, 32½c; Eastern Townships, solids, 32c; New Zealand, prints, 34c; New Zealand, solids, 33½c.

Facts That Should Be Known About Goods Sold

If a salesman understands his goods, it assists him materially in selling them. Therefore, whenever a new article is received in the store, the clerk who aims to be a salesman will learn all the facts possible about it. In the same way when an article advances in price, the enterprising clerk will seek out the reason, if possible, so that it can be explained to the customer, and not merely the information given that it has gone up.''

Pork and beans are on a higher level than they were some time ago. Some firms put prices up then and others just recently. The reason for the higher prices lies chiefly, of course, in the higher price for white beans which are decidedly high when compared with a few years ago. Pork is also higher, while there have also been advances in cans, solder, packing cases and nails and all these things help in making the cost to the manufacturer heavier than it previously was.

More firms have, of late, put up the price of their standard blends of coffee. In some cases it has been as much as three cents per pound. This is not due to any recent advance of that amount on primary market, but to gradual upward trend that has been taking place for some time. Manufacturers held back for a considerable time, but at last found it necessary to get more money for their goods. The advance in lower grades of coffee has been much larger than on the better quality.

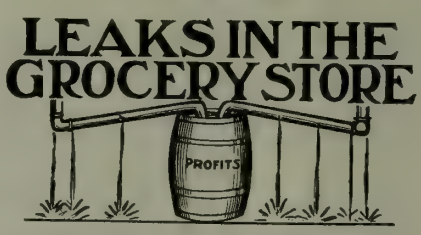
Salmon, that is, sockeye salmon, is especially high in price, as every dealer and clerk well knows. The cause is the short pack compared to demand, the run of sockeye having been small again this year. To the customer who objects to buying it on the score that the price is too high, it can be pointed out that the can contains a solid pound or half pound of food, and that there is no waste. It should be advised that this feature be considered in sizing up its value.

HEAVY CALL FOR SALMON.

Vancouver, B.C., Nov. 26.—(Special)—Local canneries report a deluge of orders from overseas for salmon and same applies to Seattle. The British Columbia pack has been unusually heavy, considering this was expected to be one of the lean years. Seattle reports that with an estimated pack of more than 3,000,000 cases of Alaska salmon for the season, hurry up orders from Eastern buyers and a growing Oriental trade, the salmon market is manifesting a firmness, which it is asserted, spells higher prices on or about January 1.



When the retailer purchases a hundred of sugar, he pays for every pound of it. He doesn't get one or two pounds thrown in for good measure. The same applies to every other line bought in bulk.

But does every dealer get paid for a hundred pound of sugar when he sells it out in 25 cent and dollar quantities? There may be a few who do, but the majority do not. Here there is a leak which means the loss of many dollars every year to the Canadian grocery trade. Not only does it happen in sugar, but in other bulk goods, such as confectionery, tea, cereals, etc.

The giving of overweight is a glaring leak through which many a dollar runs away. It often goes undetected, because of the smallness of its character. An ounce of sugar extra seems such an inconsiderable amount that is allowed to go without a moment's thought. Supposing, however, an ounce is lost on each of 50 sales in a day. There is a loss of more than three pounds or some 18 or 20 cents. In a year of 300 days, there would be lost in sugar alone almost $60. If overweight is given in confectionery, cereals and all other bulk goods this leak would easily run over $150, which in 10 years would represent a handsome dividend had the loss been checked.

Eternal vigilance in weighing will overcome this. Clerks must be shown how easily money can be lost through carelessness in this regard. If there are computing scales in the store the trouble can be overcome by demonstrating to every user of them that the price computed by the scale is always correct and that when this price is quoted a customer, the latter is paying for exactly what he or she receives. With some other scales special care must be given whenever goods are placed on the scale pan to be insured against loss. Overweight must be checked, and when it is, one of the largest leaks in many a business will have been repaired.

SASKATOON MERCHANTS ORGANIZING.

Saskatoon, Sask., Nov. 26.—Some twenty local retail merchants assembled recently to talk over a retail merchants' organization and those behind the movement are optimistic as to the future of the association.

J. S. L. Hutchinson who was chairman, stated that, at the present time, the retail dealers of Saskatoon, should they have any grievances, have no place to ventilate them and as soon as they have their own association their complaints when reported will be taken up by that body in the best interest of the merchant. The system of giving credit will be dealt with so as to give the retailer better protection than he has had in the past. The fact is that many of the merchants of Saskatoon have lost money by giving credit to people who have now moved away from the city and left unpaid accounts behind them. Mr. Hutchinson pointed out that through the association, giving credit could be done away with in many cases.

It is expected that fully one hundred of the merchants will fall in line and help make the association a success. Another meeting will be held in near future when a full slate of officers will be elected and the various committees appointed. It is hoped that all the retail merchants of the city will avail themselves of the opportunity and help boost the movement.

Some of those present on Wednesday night were: J. S. L. Hutchinson, W.H. Cope, T. E. Cormick, J. H. Speers, H. Jones, S. J. Sheridan, Chas. Woodside, A. H. Westhaver, C. J. Fox and Mr. Strickland.

WANT GROCERS LICENSED.

The city health officials in Washington, D.C., are urging the passing of an ordinance requiring grocers to secure a license for opening new stores. The officials say that many of the grocers are of foreign birth and ignorant of the pure food laws. The license will not carry a fee, but will require an inspection of premises, etc.

Lower Prices Anticipated on Cornmeal

Big Yield of Corn Depresses Market—Mill Feed Which In Turn Has Bearing on Flour Also Affected —Differences of Opinion as to Future of Flour—Rolled Oat Situation Clearing.

The big yield and low prices of corn are having considerable bearing on general markets, including cereals, flour and millfeeds. The production of corn in United States this year is large, a good deal in advance of year ago, and as result, prices on raw material have been on decline for some time, and weakness has been quite marked of late. While cornmeal has already been reduced slightly on some markets, it seems that further concessions are ahead in this commodity.

Lower price on corn goes further than cornmeal market, however. It has made situation on mill feeds less firm and here declines have been announced. Lower figures on mill feeds have in turn had an influence on flour, for if lower prices have to be accepted for by-products, this naturally throws greater strain on flour.

The opinion has been expressed by certain dealers that lower prices are warranted on flour some time in the future. They based their opinion on fact that while flour is only 20 cents per barrel lower than year ago, wheat on Winnipeg market is about 15c per bushel below price of year ago. Against this it is argued that by-products are lower than year ago, so that flour has to produce a larger revenue.

Rolled oats situation is in better condition than it has been for some time. Mills still have abundance of orders ahead, however, and this is a factor in maintaining prices, although values on raw material really warrant lower figures. Oatmeal for export is lower and when domestic situation clears, reduced prices are expected.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR.—So far there has been no further change in flour situation, as far as prices are concerned, in fact, it looks as if market will be considerably firmer for next few weeks judging by present strength of wheat. Demand from country and locally has brightened up as result of recent decline, though it might be added that stocks in all hands have been reduced to minimum owing to hand-to-mouth policy followed. There is good demand from biscuit manufacturers for winter wheat flour and as supplies are none too plentiful, dealers are having busy time.

FLOUR.—There is no further change in flour since last week's decline of 20 cents per barrel. As to whether there will be further reduction or not, there is difference of opinion. Some dealers think that wheat prices are low enough to warrant concessions later on. Those who hold contrary opinion say that lower price of mill feed as compared with a year ago is a factor that has to be taken into consideration. Bran, for instance, is now down to $21, as against $24 year ago. This throws a greater strain on flour.

CEREALS.—It is expected that lower prices on cornmeal will be seen in near future. Values are now 10c per cwt. below those ruling earlier in fall, and with raw material bearing down on market, further reductions are expected.

Rolled oats supplies are in better shape than for some time. Mills still have volume of orders ahead, and this tends to maintain prices, but as soon as situation begins to clear, reduction is probable.

New Navel Oranges Selling Fairly Well

In Early Again This Year—Reports as to Quality Vary—Florida Oranges Somewhat Stronger—Yield Said to be Overestimated—Will be Big Crop of Florida Grapefruit, However.

New navel oranges from California are selling fairly well on Canadian markets. The West has been getting shipments during greater part of month, but it is only of late that most of the Eastern points have received their first arrivals. This is fairly early for navels, although no more so than last year. Some years, they just come in time to catch the Christmas trade. While in some instances, arrivals are reported good quality, other receivers say there is room for improvement.

Late Valencias are still offered, while Floridas are receiving considerable attention. Some, at least, of Florida arrivals are juicy and well flavored. The Florida orange crop has been estimated at all kinds of figures, from five to as high as seven million boxes for the year. The Florida Citrus Exchange claim that early picking shows that crop has been overestimated. They say that yield will not be much in excess of last year, and doubt if it will exceed four and a quarter million boxes in the Empire state.

There is nothing to indicate any change in the original estimates of Florida grapefruit crop. It is expected to be as large as was predicted, and of finer quality, more juicy than the State has shipped for some years. Some of first shipments were lacking in quality, but there appears to be an improvement of late.

The first strawberries have made their appearance across the line, coming from Florida. No arrivals are expected in Canada for some time.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS.—Demand for apples is still heavy and representative wholesalers are not inclined to shade prices Cranberries are not altogether scarce, but supply is none too heavy so that with heavy demand started since colder weather set in, makes it look even money for higher prices within a short time.

Consumers are beginning to notice the high charge for different varieties of oranges, no further change though having been recorded up till time of writing.

Considerable quantities have been shipped from Maritime points, but it looks as if there are not the shipping facilities there one would desire, and prices for fast service must be paid.

Demand all round is good, high prices prevailing having little or no effect.

GREEN FRUITS.—Navel oranges, which are selling around $3.50 per case are showing up fairly well for so early in season. There are still some late Valencias on market, while Florida stock also has quite a prominent position. Tangerines are quoted at $3.50 per half strap.

Pineapples are considerably easier selling down to $4.00 per case this week. Apples are receiving considerable attention at present time, supplies being on quite liberal scale. Almeria grapes are moving fairly well, some varieties bringing a higher figure. Cranberries are steady.

VEGETABLES.—There cannot be said to be scarcity of potatoes locally, but shortage of cars is interfering somewhat with shipments, so there is at least no overplus. There is nothing to indicate any change at present from steadiness. Retailers are now arranging for winter requirements in potatoes as well as other lines before cold weather sets in.

Hot house goods are firmer. Cucumbers are up to $1.75 per dozen. Tomatoes are steadier, and will probably be higher week hence.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, Nov. 27.—Business continues excellent in local grocery markets. All wholesalers are busy filling orders for outports, and collections are fully up to standard.

Jobbers report better demand for potatoes, particularly Nova Scotia stock which is selling at $1.60 per three bushel bag. There is a heavy demand for beans. Prime are quoted at $3.00, and handpicked at $3.10. Hungarian beans are selling at $2.85. Market is bare of whole peas, and split are quoted at $7.50.

There was another drop of 25 cents per barrel in flour during the week. Rolled oats are firmer, and are now quoted here at $5.85 per barrel.

WINNIPEG.

FRUITS AND VEGETABLES.—Native grown vegetables are generally a little stiffer in price. Potatoes have advanced 2 cents per bushel on car load lots.

Country Merchants Decide to Close Early

Association Work in Middlesex County Progressing Rapidly—All Public Holidays to be Observed—Work of Organization Aided by London Retail Grocers Who Gave Addresses at Meeting.

London, Ont., Nov. 27.—(Special).—The regular monthly meeting of the Retail Merchants Association of Central Middlesex, Ont., was held at residence of President James A. Kelley, Lambeth, Ont., on Wednesday evening, November 20th. Those present were Jas. A. Kelley, Geo. Carley and R. W. Earle, Lambeth; H. C. Johnston, N. Bodkin and L. Owen, Delaware; D. J. Matheson and C. Foster, Komoka; W. J. Laing, Muncey; W. H. Branton, Littlewood; E. A. Ryckman, Christina; also H. J. Scott of the North Dorchester Association. The visitors from the London Retail Grocers' Association were President John Diprose, Thos. Shaw, G. B. Drake, J. A. McFarlane, Adam Palmer, Thos. Danahan, E. J. Ryan and A. Baker.

The meeting was opened by President Jas. Kelley, who thanked those present for turning out and hoped that the Association would continue to prosper. They had been only organized three months and already their labors were bearing fruit. He also thanked the London Association for their valuable assistance and complimented the North Dorchester Association for valuable advice, particularly from President W. J. Coates, who was unable to be present.

Early Closing Decided on.

After a great deal of discussion the merchants present decided to close their places of business every night (excepting Saturday) at 8 o'clock, after January 1st, 1913. The large majority have been keeping open till ten and eleven o'clock. They also agreed to close their places of business on all public holidays. Many of those present have been in the habit of keeping open a few hours in the morning, besides being open the night previous, the same as Saturday night. They also decided to sell patent medicines at marked prices instead of various prices, and it was agreed that there was no profit worth while in selling tobaccos at less than 10c straight.

Secretary Bodkin was asked to notify the members not present; also various committees were named to wait on those that were not members and get them to join.

It was very hard to find a suitable name for the Association, but after considerable discussion it was thought advisable to call it the Central Middlesex Association.

Addresses by London Grocers.

President John Diprose of the London Association, urged the members to have confidence in each other, and Thos. Shaw told them that they had in their own hands the machinery to elevate their business and that they should not let the public dictate to them how long they should stay open and at what they should sell their goods. Speeches on trade topics also made by Adam Palmer, Geo. Carley, H. C. Johnston, D. J. Mathewson, C. Foster, W. J. Laing, J. A. McFarlane and E. A. Ryckman.

There was a social side to the meeting as well. A. Baker and E. J. Ryan sang several solos while Thos. Ranahan presided at the piano. A vote of thanks was tendered to President Kelley for the use of his residence as a meeting place.

Photograph the Christmas Window

Every dealer aims to surpass himself with the Christmas window. That is why all go to the trouble of arranging Christmas goods in artistic fashion, with probably an occasional piece of decoration here and there, and one or two well-written show cards.

When so much time and attention have been given the Christmas window, why not go a little further and have a photograph taken? A year or two from now you may forget what the display looked like, but with a picture on file this would not occur.

At the same time, dealers or clerks who have pictures taken of their Christmas windows, should have them entered in The Canadian Grocer's contest. Particulars of this have appeared in previous issues of the paper. So that every store may have an opportunity of competing for the prizes, the various centres in Canada have been divided into two classes—those containing more than 10,000 population, and those containing less. The prizes consist of $5, $3 and $2 in each class, the principal conditions being that the windows be dressed by grocers or clerks and that they be mailed to us before December 31st. Already many have signified their intentions of entering the race so that the competition promises to be an interesting one. Instructions on taking photographs will be sent to anyone on request.

Please remember, too, The Grocer's Christmas Newspaper Ad. Writing contest. Two prizes of $3 and $2 respectively will be given. Clip the advertisements from the newspapers and send them along with your remarks on how they sold goods and your opinion on advantages of advertising.

The Acadia Sugar Refining Company, Ltd., have under construction the new sugar refinery at Woodside, Dartmouth, opposite Halifax, N.S. This refinery, which is to replace the old one at Woodside, which was destroyed by fire last spring, is estimated to cost nearly three million dollars. It is stated it will have machinery for an output of 2,500 barrels daily, or double the capacity of the old factory.

Good December Fish Trade is Expected

Advent With its Special Fish Days Likely to Bring Brisker Demand—Weather Will Also be More Favorable—Has Been Better Demand During Past Week—More Frozen Varieties.

Dealers are anticipating a good volume of business in fish during the month of December. The first of the month marks the opening of Advent, with its special fish days each week, and this combined with cooler weather is expected to give a good deal of life to business from now until holidays. Then, with opening of January and the holiday rush over, and more ideal conditions lending themselves to business, trade should gather same speed as is usual during the winter season.

Past week has been marked by brisker demand, retail dealers anticipating their wants for the Advent trade. There are no special features, except continued change from fresh to frozen varieties. Smoked and prepared lines are moving quite well.

QUEBEC.

MONTREAL.—Big business is being done in all lines and wholesalers are expecting this to be record season. Cod and haddock are in good supply, but there will be no more fresh lake fish as season has closed. Fresh halibut are still scarce, but orders are being filled with new frozen stock. Haddies, kippers and fillets are in good demand and stock is reported as good, colder weather helping. Oysters are also selling well, both bulk and shell being strongly sought.

TORONTO.—Week preceding Advent has been marked by orders coming in from various sections of the country from dealers who are planning to make the most of special fish season just opened. It is anticipated that with special fish days each week trade during the month will be appreciable. Then with passing of the holidays, and setting in of real cold weather, trade will continue brisk.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

ST. JOHN.—Supplies with local dealers were rather light during the week, due to fact that there were but few arrivals, and for what were received, there was brisk demand. Prices remain about same. A fairly good shipment of cod, haddock and chicken halibut received late in week tended to relieve situation to a little extent. There is a splendid run of smelt at present time, which are bringing eight cents wholesale.

NOVA SCOTIA.

HALIFAX.—Nova Scotia's fish trade with Montreal, Toronto and Western Provinces is growing enormously. More fish is being sold in Canada than ever before. Up to few years ago very little fish was sent from Nova Scotia beyond Montreal, but now it is going further and by car load. This not only refers to fresh fish, but to cured fish as well.

Produce & Provisions

Egg Problem of Great Importance Now

With Advent of Christmas Baking—Eastern Dealer Says There Will be No Scarcity—Offerings From Across the Line—Receipts of Butter Larger at Many Centres—Hog Movement More Liberal.

With Christmas baking close at hand, the egg problem is one of no little importance. Already prices are at fairly high level, new laids being in scant supply and commanding a fancy figure, while storage article averages about 2 cents per dozen above prices ruling one year ago. There is fair amount of eggs coming to market with a light sprinkling of new laids.

"There will be no scarcity of eggs for the Christmas baking," stated an Eastern produce man this week. "If we haven't enough on this side of the line to fill demand, we can easily get them in the United States, where offerings are quite large. Fine weather in the States has brought about easier prices on eggs, and April and June eggs are offered in Chicago at 20 to 21 cents." There have been practically no eggs exported from Canada to the United Kingdom this year, all supplies being required for home consumption.

Increased supplies of butter of late have checked farming market. At some centres, receipts of both creamery and dairy have shown quite an appreciable increase, causing a slightly easier tendency. The prospects of continued good make, owing to large amount of feed in the country, along with lessened demand from West and weaker market in England, has led dealers in several quarters to believe there has at least been temporary check put on firm feeling.

Movement of hogs is on a more liberal scale than some time ago, and accordingly there is a less firm feeling in provisions, as pointed out last week. On some markets, this is not very marked, certain lines still continuing in rather scant supply.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS.—Demand for general list is good, there being no change in price or any important development since last week. Fresh dressed hogs are continually in limelight, though. Lard is firmer, owing to increase in call. Bacon is asked for heavier than during any previous season, it being generally believed that supplies are sufficient.

BUTTER.—The tone of market is decidedly firm, demand both from local and outside buyers being strong. It is natural to expect that a large hole will be made in stocks at store, the Western buyers having made a heavy call within past ten days. Of course, future of market will be determined now by Old Country situation, as the Canadian will only have to advance one point to allow the New Zealand butter to come along. The latter could be laid down here at 30 cents, but it is doubtful whether quality would be as good as our best creamery.

EGGS.—There are not enough new laids coming along to fill all requirements, but storage stocks are acting as substitutes and filling the role well, as quality this year has been better than ever, due in no small extent to the cool and agreeable spring. Prices are still high and it looks as if they will go higher just as soon as we find the storage egg stock reduced.

POULTRY.—"Turkeys are mounting to a ridiculously high figure," at least this is how a Montreal wholesaler expresses himself, and he expects higher prices still towards Christmas. In fact, all poultry is high, supplies picked up at the Ontario poultry fairs fetching good round figures. No changes in price to report, but tendency is upward.

HONEY.—"Continued scarcity," sums up the situation. As far as we can gather, the inclemency of the weather has not helped the bees any in their work. Local houses have not much in stock, and are inclined to hold what they have for fancy prices. Of course, it can be imported, but supplies will not be forthcoming until late in the season, when a carry over would not be at all unlikely.

PROVISIONS.—General tendency of provision market shows little change from a week ago. Roll bacon is slightly easier. Lard on other hand, which was reduced ¼ cent per pound by some firms last week, has re-acted upward again by same amount. Stocks of lard are said to be rather on small side. The same is true of long clear, which is steady. Prices on this line vary according to the weight of the sides. For instance, one firm quotes 55 to 65's at 15; 70's to 80's at 14, and 80's to 100's at 13.

Hogs are coming forward on slightly better scale of late.

BUTTER.—Butter was reported less firm last week. There has, however, been no concession in local prices. Indeed, one firm is quoting creamery at slightly higher figure.

"I don't see why they are quoting prices higher," said another dealer. "The delivery is enormous in all kinds of butter. The buying price in country is down some, while I am looking for a fairly large production when farmers begin to feed their cows. There is lots of feed in the country."

EGGS.—Supply of strictly new laid eggs is exceedingly limited, and high prices are being secured. There is a certain amount of class called "fresh gathered," coming along from country points, but quality of these in some cases suggests that they were "fresh gathered" some time ago. There is fair amount of storage going out, and here there does not seem any firmness at least. Eggs in U. S. are slightly easier.

Butter Situation From English Viewpoint

Letter Which Tells of Some Weakening Tendencies to the London Market—Open Weather on Continent During October Increases the Make—Part Played by Margarine in Old Country Market—The New Zealand and Australian Situation.

The following report on the London, Eng., butter market as prepared by Samuel Page & Son, provision brokers there, will be of value to all interested in this market from an international standpoint:—

Montague Chambers,
London Bridge, London, Eng.

"The first arrivals of the new season's Australian butter have come to an unexpectedly dull market, and contrary to almost any previous experience, it has been found impossible to clear them on landing. A considerable part of last week's shipment ex "Mooltan" was put into cold storage, as the trade was not ready to take it, unless at slaughter prices. The same conditions affected the sale of New Zealand ex "Athenic."

"The reasons for this unlooked-for state of things will be found in the following remarks on the general situation:—'For some time past the market has been exceedingly dull, and last week this depression became most pronounced. All descriptions were offered on directly lower terms, but the reduction made no difference to the demand, trade continuing exceedingly flat and buyers absolutely indifferent. These were two chief determining causes for this lifeless state. The first dates back some two or three months, when it was generally thought that supplies would be scarce and values high during the last quarter of the year. On this assumption heavy purchases were made as an insurance against the anticipated scarcity, and large quantities of French, Irish, Siberian, etc., were put into cold storage at prices which now turn out to be very unprofitable.

Some Guesses Went Wrong.

"Also considerable stocks of last season's Australian, which could have been cleared during the last summer and early autumn months, were carried over with the idea that an extra profit would be made by holding until the fall of the year. This view of the market was based upon the knowledge that the coming season in Australia would start late owing to unfavorable weather, and also upon the calculation that New Zealand intended to increase its make of cheese at the expense of butter. Of course these ideas were correct with regard to the late arrival of Australian, but other things happened subsequently which altered the position materially. The open weather during October, both here and on the Continent, greatly favored production; the make of English, Irish, French, Dutch, etc., was unexpectedly large; the total imports from France, for instance, were 25,244 cwts. greater last month than in October, 1911, so that the shortage from Australia, Canada, New Zealand and the United States was compensated for almost exactly by the increased exportation to this country from the Continent.

"And this comparison is, of course, very wide of the actual supplies during last month, because it does not take into account the very large production in England and Ireland. In addition, holders of stocks in cold storage—which includes importers, wholesale houses and shop-keepers—are now making the greatest endeavors to work off these accumulations, and current supplies are, in consequence, difficult to move.

Contending With Margarine.

"Again, owing to retail prices being mostly at 1s. 2d. per lb. and over, and only a little at 1s., the demand for pure butter is seriously affected by the sale of Margarine, which each year increases considerably, and this article is now turned out so well, and is of such good quality and palatable flavor, that it proves a most formidable competitor. This week there is, however, a slightly improved request for finest butter, although prices may decline still further before present downward tendency is checked; but there are no indications of recovery with regard to secondary and stored parcels, for which at the moment there is absolutely no enquiry.

"Arrivals of Australian since our last report amount to 41,853 boxes, and to 8,792 boxes of New Zealand, as against 92,195 boxes Australian and 27,704 boxes New Zealand for the corresponding period of last season, a decrease of 50,342 boxes Australian, and 18,912 boxes New Zealand.

J. C. Bell has bought the general store of Stanton Bros. & Tett, at Hazel Bluff, Alta.

The Cowan Co., Ltd., Toronto, cocoa and chocolate manufacturers, have commenced the erection of an addition to their present factory. The new addition will be five storeys high and 60x200 feet in dimensions. Altogether, in building and plant, the expenditure is estimated at over $300,000. It is planned to have the machinery in the new building running within a year.

Rush Orders

At this season of the year it is necessary to watch your stock very closely, there are so many extra lines you will be handling for the holiday trade. Some of these goods will, no doubt, sell faster than anticipated, and will necessitate reordering, and of course you will want them in a hurry. Being rather bashful we hesitate to talk about ourselves, but really here is where we come in. Just try us out. Write, telegraph or better still, telephone your orders at our expense, and we will not only give prompt shipment but you will find our prices consistently low with the markets.

Why Don't You do Like Him?

H. J. Buckley, of Moberly, Mo., who bought a No. 84 Kingery Corn Popper with Peanut cylinder extra for $94.00.

He writes that the machine is doing fine. I pay $40.00 per month rent and have four people employed, and machine pays rent and help.

Now to get at his profits in this little, big business, let's do a little figuring. Rent $480 per year. Four clerks at $5.00 per week each, $1,040, total $1,520, or 15 times the cost of his machine. Did you ever add anything to your business that beats it? In some cases they have earned more net profit than that of the business of the entire store. Furthermore, its attractiveness turns the eyes of passersby upon your store. Often it is the agent of sending them in. It helps the business in the store. The Kingery Peanut Roasters and Corn Poppers are of many kinds and styles—Steam, Electric, Spring and Hand Power. Ranging in price from $8.50 to $350.00. Sold on liberal instalments.

With the proper system of account keeping you can put an end to accounting worries and know the amount of accounts outstanding at a glance.

The ULLMAN

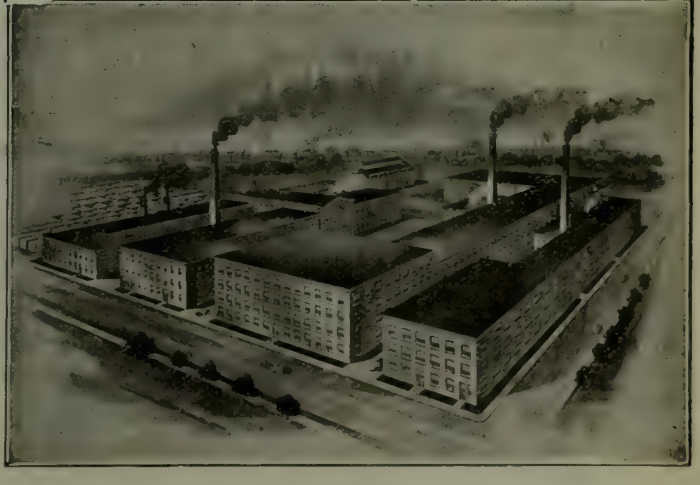
is the safest, simplest, quickest, surest to charge and most satisfactory of any system on the market. It satisfies the customer as well as the merchant. There is a decided advantage to the grocer who uses an Ullman Account Register. The customer knows, every time he makes a purchase, how much he owes, and naturally tries to keep it as low as possible. Put in an Ullman Account Register and stop the incessant night work and worry of retail bookkeeping.

Send for illustrated booklet or ask for demonstration.



We want dealers to handle the Ullman Account Register in some localities.

THE "WANT AD."

The "want ad." has grown from a little used force in business life, into one of the great necessities of the present day.
Business men nowadays turn to the "want ad." as a matter of course for a hundred small services.
The "want ad." gets work for workers and workers for work.
It gets clerks for employers and finds employers for clerks. It brings together buyer and seller, and enables them to do business though they may be thousands of miles apart.
The "want ad." is the great force in the smal affairs and incidents of daily life.

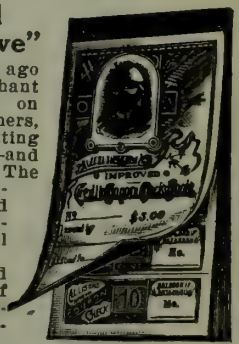
"The World Do Move"



A generation ago many a merchant "went broke" on credit customers, merely by letting things run on—and on — and on. The merchant of today can hold his credit customers and still "play safe." Thousands and thousands of progressive merchants are doing it with

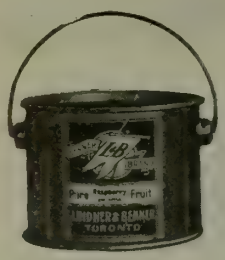
ALLISON COUPON BOOKS

They reduce expenses, eliminate losses, prevent misunderstandings, paying for themselves many times over.

HOW THEY WORK

A man wants credit. You think he is good. Give him a $10.00 Allison Coupon Book. Have him sign the receipt or note form in the front of the book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with $10.00 — no trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten cent coupon, and so on until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10.00 and gets another book. No pass books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes. Allison Coupon Books are recognized everywhere as the best.

For sale by the jobbing trade everywhere.
Manufactured by ALLISON COUPON CO., Indianapolis, Indiana, U.S.A.



People Will Persist

in trading where they can get the best quality goods—particularly is this true in regard to Jams and Jellies, and the dealer who sells good Jams and Jellies at a reasonable price will be found out, and his patrons will persist in getting their goods from him. Many dealers realize this and multiply their sales by displaying and selling

5 DISTINCT Purification Processes 5

Laurentia Milk passes through five different processes before it is put on the market.

First: The milk is taken from carefully selected supplies and immediately filtered.

Second: It is then clarified by the centrifugal process.

Third: Pasteurized, Heated to 142 deg. F. for thirty minutes.

Fourth: Homogenized. A purely mechanical operation which produces a high degree of digestibility and assimulation, or technically speaking the milk is made homogeneous or of a like nature throughout. This is brought about by forcing the milk through a valve under great pressure, smashing up the cream globules and other solids so that it is impossible to separate them, making the Fifth: Process possible. Which is heating the milk to 230 deg. for thirty minutes after it is bottled air-tight; causing perfect sterilization and making it non-perishable. Laurentia keeps in the finest condition until opened.

That is all we ask for. We know that our flour cannot be anything but high class. If it were not, then we would unfortunately have to acknowledge the loss of thousands of dollars. We made sure, however, by numerous experiments, that we had the right goods before we sought the co-operation of the retailer.

Chivers & Sons' Fruit Preserves

have a flavour ,that is unequalled, being composed of the choicest fresh fruit skilfully prepared. This delicious flavour may be attributed to their method of preserving and packing, almost immediately after the fruit is gathered. This is an advantage obtained by Chivers' factory standing in the midst of thousands of acres of orchards in the finest fruit-growing district of Cambridgeshire.

PURITY—CLEANLINESS—FRESHNESS—are the hall-marks of this world-famed make of food products.

A feature that you will find as a selling point is the careful packing in tins or bottles. By a special process all the tins are prepared so as to prevent the possibility of any detrimental effect on the fruit.

You safeguard your reputation, Mr. Grocer by stocking foodstuffs of perfect purity and quality—tried and tested. You will find it the means of bringing many repeat orders—at good profit.

Tinkering With Jam Quality!

The dealer who tinkers with Jam quality by constantly getting in new and uncertain lines is making his business grow timid and uncertain for future conditions.

A progressive development demands staples of uniform, unvarying quality—goods that continue to hold and do not deviate from their original high qualities.

Customers get to know this class of products, they know what they get and can rely on the quality. For this reason they buy repeatedly and continually—THIS BUILDS UP THE GROCER'S BUSINESS.

UPTON'S

Jams, Jellies and Marmalades

are highest quality, uniform in every particular. They are prepared from only the finest selected fresh fruits and pure sugar, ensuring a delightfully delicious table delicacy—the kind that gets popular and brings business wherever introduced.

Extensive consumer advertising helps the dealer in making the first sale — the uniform high quality makes the repeat sales.

For every 1000 gals. of Hard Water used, there is 70c worth of Soap wasted.

This information comes from the Encyclopaedia Americana and will make a good talking point for dealers in recommending and selling Lawrason's Snowflake Bath Powder and Snowflake Ammonia — two powerful hard-water softeners.

Lawrason's Snowflake Bath Powder makes the bath a refreshing delight. It is perfumed and antiseptic, and is unequalled for softening hard water. Lawrason's Snowflake Ammonia is backed by a guarantee of $500 that it equals in cleansing power any similar powder on the market. It softens hard water.

SELL HER BOTH PACKAGES

We're telling your customers in our magazine advertising how much better it is to buy KNOX ACIDULATED GELATINE instead of the cheap, flavored, ready prepared gelatines. The package of KNOX ACIDULATED GELATINE contains an extra envelope of concentrated lemon juice in addition to the two envelopes of gelatine. It makes two full quarts of jelly that is pure, and they get the flavor without the extra cost and bother of using the fruits. You'll find it easy to sell both packages if you'll mention the ACIDULATED, because our advertising has paved the way. It will pay you to "make KNOX your gelatine leader," because of better value to your customers and the good profit to you out of the 15 cents you get for a package.

The Jams and Jellies Our Fathers Knew were the kind our grandmothers "put up" in the early fall. Sometimes they "kept" and sometimes they spoiled.

Science has stepped in, and today the leading brand for Purity and Quality is the E. D. S. Brand. Only the choicest fresh, ripe fruit is scientifically prepared in a sanitary and modernly equipped factory producing a product that is even superior to those that "Mother used to make."

THE BANNER MONTH

December in most lines is the most important season of the year. This is particularly true of products that are seasonable at this time.

During the season of "Good Cheer," the public are in a very appreciative mood and observe little details more than at any other time.

There is no time that the merchant should be as careful of the products he sells nor is there any season that his caution will yield him as great a return.

When people are holidaying, they are not looking for cheap wares, but desire that which will afford the maximum comfort and satisfaction, hence quality should be your "WATCHWORD."

Of all the holiday products, oysters are the most prominent. You accordingly should be most particular in choosing your source of supply. In looking for a quality proposition in any line, you go to a house that makes a specialty of that particular line.

We are Canada's exclusive oyster house, devoting our entire time and attention to the one thing we know best. Oysters are no side line or secondary consideration with us.

Kindly let us have your holiday booking now.

An interior view of Cain Bros. new store in Yarmouth, N.S., showing bin fixtures, silent salesman and metal ceiling.

New Equipment Brings Increased Trade

Yarmouth, N.S., Dealers Make A $12,000 Increase in Turnover in One Year After Moving Into New Store With Modern Fixtures—Display Bin Fixtures and Silent Salesmen Installed—Stock Carefully Watched and Customers Pleased.

If the advantages occasioned by a new store and bright, modern fixtures increase the business, say $12,000 in one year, should the retailer hesitate to avail himself of this extra selling power? Undoubtedly the present tendency is towards scientific retailing where the student of human nature is bound to secure greater benefits than the man who believes in the existence of a certain set demand and that nothing on earth can induce a customer to purchase more freely.

The experience of Cain Bros., retail dealers in Yarmouth, N.S., should offer encouragement to the doubter who sees nothing in going to the "expense" of a few hundred dollars for new equipment. Cain Bros. moved into a new store on November 1, last year. This store was equipped with a view to giving better service than before, and arranged so that the extra facilities for displaying goods would tend to create extra demand. How well the firm have succeeded, is shown by the accompanying statement of Cain Bros. themselves.

Altogether, Cain Bros. have been in business in Yarmouth for twelve years. With the end of the eleventh they entered their new store and during the past year realized a turnover of $12,000 in excess of any of the previous eleven.

THE ADVANTAGE OF MODERN FIXTURES

"The store we now occupy was built for us in 1911. We began here on Nov. 1 of last year and this year has been our banner year, we having done about $12,000 more business than during our heaviest previous year in the twelve which we have been in the grocery business. We attribute this, of course, to our new store and up-to-date fixtures, which we find people appreciate. We have had to keep at it, stick to it, watch our stock and try to please our customers." — Cain Bros., Yarmouth, N. S.

Assuming a net profit of say 6 per cent., the net profit on this increased business would mean $720. Their new equipment includes patented pivoted bin fixtures, silent salesmen, and a large refrigerator. It is not difficult to see that at present rate of advance, the equipment will be soon paid for out of net profits. The emphasis laid on the value of the fixtures is stated in no uncertain way in Cain Bros.' statement. "We attribute this, (increase) of course, to our new store and up-to-date fixtures," they say. The firm has every reason to look forward to further increases in the future. They have realized within a year the propriety of moving into a new store and installing modern equipment. They had faith in the future and in advantages the changes would bring. This is what must be considered when all equipment purchases are under contemplation. Whether it is to be an expense or an investment is the point.

In this case, Cain Bros. have clearly made it the latter.

Selling Off Exclusive Christmas Lines

Best Efforts Should be Put Forth From Now On to Prevent Any Carry-Over Into the New Year—Several Varieties of Goods to Which This Applies—Periodical Inventories on These Particular Lines Suggested—What Remains After Christmas Should be Moved Out Before the New Year.

Before the Christmas and New Year season is past and gone, every dealer should have his stocks of exclusive holiday lines entirely sold. There are of course, many lines which can be disposed of after the turn of the year which are more or less of a Christmas character. But those goods that are unsaleable when the season is over mean a loss which takes considerable cream off the profits. They should be turned into money before it is too late.

Among those lines handled exclusively around Christmas include fancy crackers, plum puddings, special Christmas boxes of confectionery, biscuits with names suggesting the season, candle-sticks, etc. These are goods which are seldom, if ever, called for after the season is over, and if any remain, they usually go into the "dead-stock" graveyard.

Time to Sell is Now.

Every dealer, therefore, who has stocks of these goods on hand should make sure that they are all sold before the year ends. The cold weather is now here and with occasional falls of snow, the Christmas spirit is in the air. By constant displays in the window and on the counter, and constant reminders either personally or by show card, large stocks of any of the above lines can be moved out readily. The point is, that when these goods are taken into stock, extra special efforts should be made to move them out before it is too late. Newspapers may continue to advise and suggest that the public do their Christmas shopping early; but there is one thing that will do more to bring out the early shopper than all this advice—it is energy on the part of the dealer. Let him do the persuading and suggesting through his window, advertising space, inside displays, show cards, etc., and results will be fifty per cent. better. If he hides his light under a bushel—neglects to show and sell these lines—how can he expect anyone to purchase until the last few days before Christmas?

Displays Soon Reduce Stocks.

Many retail grocers have been showing exclusive Christmas lines for some time. They are reducing their stocks gradually so that when the season nears an end, they will be sure of disposing of everything. The policy of all should be "never let up" till New Year's Eve.

The week between Christmas and New Year's should be made the most of. Home-comings are often deferred till the first day of the year so that the season is never over until then. As soon as Christmas day is passed, most large and successful selling firms at once begin to figure out what goods are left. Once this is sized up, they know just whether the remainder can be sold at regular price or not, before the end of December. If the quantity is well within bounds, regular price is charged, but if it appears unwieldly at that price, special sales are organized that will move out all remaining exclusive holiday lines at the best figure possible, always trying to avoid, of course, a sacrifice below cost. It is better to do this, than hold so much "dead stock."

Take Frequent Inventories.

This seems to be a good policy to adopt by all dealers. As December advances, and sales on Christmas lines progress, periodical inventories should be taken. This is the best method of knowing exactly where one stands. If one sizes up the situation frequently, he may even have occasion to send in some sorting-up orders. At any rate he knows just what is going on, whether everything will be sold on time and whether or not any reduction in price will have to be made towards the close of the season.

Goods That Bring Regular Price.

There are many lines known as Christmas goods which will sell fairly well even after the beginning of the New Year. These include such goods as raisins, currants, peels, nuts, dates, figs, mince meat, etc. Few large dealers sell such at any sacrifice as a little extra care and attention, insures them all going out during the winter months.

Christmas trade this year promises to be extra good. The crops on the whole, have been splendid, labor is well taken up and there will be few people with no money to spend. Apart from the purchase of Christmas gifts, the grocery store gets the bulk of this money. It is the big season of family re-unions—when the fatted calf is killed—and the table in every home is given particular attention. The grocer should take every advantage of this. That is why early displays are being made by many, and why they should be made by all. Attractive windows can be shown without much work. The best will, no doubt, be reserved for week prior to Christmas, but good ones should be shown continually from first of December. Early displays should contain those goods which are out of date after New Year's, as well as lines used particularly for Christmas baking.

Aims Towards Adequate Service.

The "early" shopper can be brought forth from his lair and made to spend his money, only when the dealer can show him the advantages of doing so. When the early shopper has been disposed of, there is much greater chance to give adequate service to those who bring up the rear.

MAIL ORDER HOUSE A FRAUD.

A Pittsburg, Pa., mail order house, declared fraudulent by post office officials, has been closed by the arrest of two men operating the "Atlantic-Pacific Grocery Company" in that city. Circulars were sent out which in substance read "this is the opportunity to buy Thanksgiving and Christmas supplies and save 50 cents on the dollar."

"We want 10,000 new customers by November 15," the circular continues, "and if your order is in before November 5 we will enclose a Christmas gift for grandma or baby. We sell 100-lb. bag of finest Eastern granulated sugar, the regular price of which is $6, for $2.95." The circulars were sent out early in October.

The books showed that $730 had been received in one week. The office equipment disclosed by the raid of the postal inspectors, showed a desk, a typewriter and two rubber stamps.

A grocer in Virginia, U.S.A. is suing a telephone company for $1,000 damages, claiming to have been injured in his business to that extent at least by reason of inefficient service on part of the defendant company.

Good Results from the Small Window

Small Display Window May be Made to Produce Splendid Returns—Lindsay, Ont., Grocer Proves This to be True—Size Does Not Necessarily Determine Value—Much Depends on Care and Attention Given the Window.

Size is by no means necessarily a true indication of value. The size of a ring does not determine its worth. The same may be said of the grocery display window. There are many extensive windows to-day that are of little value to the store. On the other hand, there are many comparatively small windows that are bringing in good returns.

Not infrequently a grocer is found who argues that it is of little use to give attention to his window, because it is not large enough to produce results. This is a foolish idea and indeed a lame argument to put forward for inattention to windows. There are many of quite small proportions which range high as mediums for attracting attention and creating sales.

Results Small if Neglected.

There is no denying that there are many small windows which do not attract a great deal of business, but in most cases, it will be found that those same windows have been neglected. The value of a window depends on the attention and care given to it.

That the small window may be made valuable as a sales attractor is demonstrated in the case of W. H. Ayers, a grocer of Lindsay, Ont. He has a comparatively small window, but he aims, by proper attention, to make it bring the greatest amount of business possible. A recent window display, put in by a clerk, F. C. Nugent, is reproduced here.

Christmas Goods Shown Early.

The display was one of seasonable goods that could not help but attract the attention of the passer-by. Along the front was shown raisins, currants and nuts in bulk, the different lines separated by packages. Then came seeded raisins in packages, placed in a slanting position. The centre-piece of the display was grapefruit, backed with bulk dates. At each side was a row of apples, and between were shown such seasonable lines as figs, peels, grapes and cranberries.

W. H. Ayers recognizes that it is the dealer who presents his goods to the customer in such a manner as to appeal that gets the buiness, and even handicapped by small display space, that valuable results may be secured.

An Example to Follow.

Here is a case of a small window that is producing good results. There are a great many others throughout the country just as capable of creating business for the store, if they were only looked after with this idea in view.

Those merchants who have small windows and who have been offering this fact as an excuse for inattention, should awake to the fact, that they are not taking advantage of their opportunities. Let them or one of their clerks give careful and regular attention to their windows for a time and they will soon become aware that good results are possible.

A NEW N.C.R. FACTORY.

The National Cash Register Co. will erect on Christie St., Toronto, a new manufacturing plant comprising three large buildings to cost $300,000. Construction work will begin in the spring.

The new plant will manufacture every piece that goes to make up the intricate cash register, and it will supply the whole Canadian market. Five hundred hands will be employed. The present factory on Lombard Street employs about 200 men. It is proposed to follow the employee's welfare work which was instituted by the company in Dayton, Ohio. The services of a noted American landscape architect have been secured in laying out the grounds picturesquely, and the company will endeavor to promulgate the "neighborhood improvement" work as in Dayton.

The new factory will consist of buildings 400 by 60 feet, 310 by 60 feet and 200 by 60 feet, all two storeys high and of ornate exterior design. Massive ornate gates and large flower-bearing lawns will adorn the Christie Street front, and a large ball ground and tennis court will be provided for the employees. The buildings will be of structural steel and buff brick, with cut stone trimmings.

LOWER CEREAL PRICES.

In these days, when the cry of the high cost of living is heard on every side, it is pleasnig—to consumers at least—to find one or two varieties of food which are downward bent, and enough so to become really noticeable. The consumer may now pay less for his porridge. Cereal prices are on the decline.

Rolled oats during the past week have declined 40 cents per barrel or 20 cents per sack, which brings the price down 30 cents per sack below one year ago. As has been pointed out in previous issues, there is also a big yield of oats in Canada, as well as in the United States this year, and it was merely a matter of time until rolled oat prices would have to bow to the inevitable, although the change came sooner than was generally anticipated.

Wheat is also lower in price than a year ago, the difference in cash grain on Winnipeg market being 15c per bushel. As a result, rolled wheat has also been lowered in price.

The next cereal to follow the downward tendency will be cornmeal. The United States has a record crop of corn this year. Prices have been gradually moving down to a lower level, bearing down on the cornmeal market so strongly that further concessions are shortly expected.

SELLING VALUE OF GOOD EQUIPMENT.

"People generally know what they want, and you can't force much more on them," was the remark made recently by a retail dealer. He was referring to customers coming into the store and to the claim that a considerable amount of goods could be sold beyond what customers actually had in view.

That his contention is wrong has been proven time and again. It is proven by the first article in this issue, where it is shown that a Nova Scotia retail firm increased their turnover by $12,000 in a year, after moving into a new store and installing new equipment. This, then, is one method of getting customers to purchase more than was their original intention. While the new equipment may not be responsible for the entire increase, it must be given credit for a large part of it.

If better facilities for displaying goods inside the store bring increased business, there is no reason to doubt that good window displays as well as personal talks will also aid materially. It is a pretty safe assertion to make that customers—that is the fairly well to do—seldom stick to what they had planned to purchase. If other goods are attractively displayed and placed where they can be readily seen, any dealer can increase his sales.

Up-to-date equipment is unquestionably one splendid method of building up business. The example referred to above is simply further evidence to justify an oft-repeated contention.

PROVIDING THE CHRISTMAS TURKEY.

Providing the Christmas turkey is one of the problems of importance which the grocer has to face this month. It is one that in past years has not proved profitable to all grocers. In most cases, where it has been an unprofitable venture, the weak point has been the failure to make arrangements far enough in advance.

A good deal of the difficulty would be overcome if the dealer would work ahead of time. By this time, his plans should be well under way, both in regard to ascertaining the requirements of his customers and arranging for a sufficient supply.

There seems absolutely no reason why this matter, in majority of cases, cannot be arranged well in advance. Every housewife knows she will want poultry of some kind for Christmas, and she can just as well give her order now, as on the eve of the festive day.

The dealer has a strong argument in approaching the customer. She should make sure of her requirements, and in addition, it will end the worry of this part of the Christmas preparations. The dealer benefits from the fact that he will be able to gauge more accurately the quantity of poultry he will need to supply the Christmas demand.

THE 1912 HONEY CROP.

In Eastern Ontario this year, the honey crop was a poor one. The crop, however, gradually improved as one went west. Around London, for instance, the bee-keeper had one of the best honey crops in years. The entire yield, however, only averages up fairly well and prices are quite high.

A recent circular on honey declares that Ontario is capable of producing a much larger quantity of honey. Not one-quarter of the nectar secreted by Ontario flowers is utilized.

It would seem also that the consumption of honey is not as large as it might be made, as this same circular declares that Ontario consumers do not eat one-tenth as much honey as they would if they were urged.

It is apparent that some advertising is necessary here.

THE CHRISTMAS WINDOW CONTEST.

When those who have decided to enter The Canadian Grocer's Christmas window display contest, are getting photographs of windows, there are one or two points we should like again to emphasize. See that the photographer has a fairly large camera, one that will take a picture in the neighborhood of 7 x 10 inches in dimensions. If the photograph is good this permits of the detail showing up well.

Another point is that the photographer should not stand too far away. Ten or twelve feet is far enough, depending of course on the width of the window. If the camera man is too close to a wide window, only the centre of the display will appear in the photograph. If too far away, the goods in the window will not show to best advantage. For best results the photograph should be taken at night—that is, if the artificial light is strong enough and can be concealed.

Contestants should remember that a good photograph is necessary if the display is to be considered on its merits by the judges. The Christmas window is always worth while photographing. Let every one who has a photograph taken, enter it in the contest. Even if it does not take a prize, if it has merit, it will be used some time during 1913. Let everyone get into the race—the more, the merrier.

FEATURES OF CANADA'S PROSPERITY.

The prosperity of the country is well illustrated in the recently issued annual report of one of Canada's prominent banks. This is an institution, too, that can be confidently relied upon for accuracy in regard to trade conditions and prospects for the future.

The president called attention to the universal and almost unbroken prosperity of the past year, pointing out that the unfavorable weather conditions which retarded harvesting operations in the West for a time, passed without much injury. The wheat yield in the West was placed at 188,000,000 bushels, as opposed to 177,000,000 of a year ago. Yields of oats and flax were also greater, the estimate value of all the grain being $207,000,000.

Much more grain has been moved this year than last and yet there has been little talk of car shortage compared to year ago. Irrigation is developing rapidly in Western Canada and productive farms are springing into existence where once were arid wastes. Owing to prices of meat products, the raising of live stock must increase. Immigration figures show a much greater influx of people than preceding year. Loans to farmers have been well paid, if sometimes slow; wages are high, as is also the cost of living. This latter condition, the report points out, could be mitigated greatly if farmers went in more for mixed farming.

In the Maritime Provinces the hay crop is up to the average and potato, root and fruit crops good. In British Columbia general trade has been large and profitable, due in part to increased interest in lumbering, railway construction, and shipbuilding.

The wholesale distributing trades have everywhere, in the opinion of the bank president, enjoyed a good year. Groceries, dry goods, clothing, and boots and shoes had an unusually large turnover with good results. Accounts so far as these are concerned have been fairly well paid and bad debts have been comparatively small.

Regret was felt for the offering in the London market of industrial loans and investments of a questionable character. These were calculated to reflect injuriously on Canada's credit and speculation in suburban properties in Canada was also claimed to be overdone.

Looking at conditions as a whole, Canada was in a highly prosperous condition. Considering expenditures to be made, and guaranteed by the Government, on railway construction, harbor improvements and other works of a national character; the increasing influx of immigration and the great natural resources of the country, prosperity was bound to continue.

WHAT THE INVENTORY SUPPLIES.

In less than four weeks we will be on the threshold of another year. Try as we may to forget the past, the majority of us become retrospective and wonder what progress has been made during the year gone by.

Among that majority is found every business man who follows his business instinct. There are, of course, some dealers in business to-day who do not attempt to figure out the progress made. They never take an inventory. Just why, it is difficult to ascertain.

With the end of the year in sight, the problem of an inventory should be in every retailer's mind. There are certain facts about the business that should be known. Knowledge of them gives greater assurance to go on in the coming year in the light of past experience. Ignorance of them causes uneasiness and distrust, and at times unhappiness.

Every dealer should know at the beginning of his fiscal year what value of goods he has in stock; value of stock a year previous; total sales during the year and total cost of goods sold plus selling expenses. He is then in position to determine his net profit; and if he has knowledge of his total assets and liabilities he can determine readily what he is worth.

If an inventory has never been taken up to present time, the dealer should resolve now to take one with beginning of the New Year. That will be a comparatively slack time and affords, therefore, a good opportunity to begin to know the standing and progress of the business.

PARCELS POST AGAIN.

The intimation has been received direct from the Postmaster-General that Parcels Post legislation is pending. The Government will wait until the "Bourne Act" has been in effect in the United States long enough to render possible the passing of judgment on its feasibility or otherwise. If it is found not wanting, similar legislation will be enacted in this country. If it proves impracticable, a measure along different lines will be drawn up for Canada. Such at least is our interpretation of the remarks passed by the Postmaster-General.

The retail body as a whole is so familiar with what such a measure would mean that it would be superfluous to point out the danger of the situation. All that can be said is that the time to fight the proposal is NOW. If opposition is brought to bear at once, and is kept up actively and continuously, the Government will come to see the inadvisability of proceeding further. It is easier to check this movement at its inception than when it has been carried further and gained weight from its own momentum.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Cost of living as regards cereal foods, at least, is on the downward path. Rolled oats have declined, rolled wheat is lower, and cornmeal is expected to drop in near future.

Even if it be true that "all's well that ends well," yet most dealers would be quite willing to have accounts owing them paid at the stipulated time rather than a month hence.

Before passing Parcels Post legislation, the Government should take pains to determine whether or not it would have the effect of stimulating the growth of city stores at expense of stores in rural communities, thus impairing the commercial value of country towns.

"Stock is estimated on the gross profit made last year of 20.4 per cent. on sales. We cut down a little, estimating the gross profit at 20.04 per cent.

"We changed from horse to auto delivery at the end of February. Loss on horses and furniture and fixtures in the profit and loss account is the difference between the amount we sold same for and the value as carried on the books, which showed that we had not allowed enough for depreciation in the delivery expense. The wages for the whole six months are included under the wage heading.

"Over and Short Account is account kept in cash book showing the difference, if any, between the actual cash in the cash register and the total amount of cash sales as shown by the total adder on register. This 6 months shows a loss from this source."

Facing Facts Squarely.

It is evident that this man is honest with himself. He looks facts and conditions fairly in the eye without flinching. No matter, therefore, what the results may be, whether perfectly satisfactory or very unsatisfactory, he can sleep 'o nights; and there is no disposition to dodge, nor is there need for dodging.

He does not say what depreciation he had been charging against his horses. I should like to know because for years I have charged off 20 per cent. annually on horses, wagons and autos. He faces the fact frankly, however, that whatever he has charged off, that ratio has been insufficient to cover actual depreciation.

These are excellent characteristics. They tend to promote confidence of the man in himself and of him in others. Such a man is not liable to err in his estimates, and that he is in the habit of coming out about right can be gleaned from the fractional allowance he makes in his profit-computation to cover possible variations. Former margin was 20.4 per cent. Present basis of calculation is 20.04 per cent.; and that is close figuring.

Net Profit Rather Small.

The net profits of practically $1,100 on a business of approximately $29,000 yields a ratio of 3.79 per cent. plus, on sales. From this $1,100, however, there should still be deducted the interest charge on the invested capital at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum. I do not know about the investment, so cannot tell what this deduction should amount to; nor can I tell what percentage has been earned on the investment. At any rate, it is plain to be seen that the net profits on sales are not liberal enough. This will be remedied in large measure during the next period because the items of loss on horses and stable equipment, amounting at this time to $381.20 will not occur. If the auto-delivery is fortunately handled, therefore, a much better showing should result during the second period of the year.

When Profits Fall and Rise.

The net margin on sales should average 5 per cent. to be entirely satisfactory; but in face of the rapid advancement of many values, it has been difficult to maintain that ratio. This is one of the anomalies of our business. Theoretically, an advancing market should result in greater net earnings; but in practice it does not generally work out. This, because competition and sentiment militate against our taking full advantage of market advances. On the other hand, a declining market should tend to lose us money; but that does not work out either, because we generally follow declines somewhat slowly, consumers not being quick to note general market declines. Thus the one condition balances the other, or tends to do that. So here, as in some other instances, theory and practice do not travel the same road.

The total expense-ratio is 16.25 per cent., taking my friend's figure of 20.04 per cent. for gross margin as a guide. My belief is that this is a higher expense-ratio that he generally works under. It will probably be reduced during the next period. It is not exactly abnormal in present circumstances; but it should be reduced by 1¼ per cent. at least.

The Average Wage Expense.

The wages-expense is upward of 10.41 per cent. I do not know just what it should be at this time. Years ago, the limit was supposed to be about 7½ per cent., though I have found only one or two who have accomplished the feat of doing business on a wages-expense of less than 8 per cent. With the wage-scale rapidly and steadily advancing, I do not know what there is for us to do except do more business to offset this particular expense, since the general overhead or fixed expenses do not tend to increase in the same proportion as wages-expense.

More Advertising Suggested.

Which gets me to the one expense which I think might profitably be increased; and that is advertising. Here we seem to have an expenditure of only about 2½ mills. I believe that an appropriation of 1 per cent. could be used

Rapid Method of Finding the Net Profit

Retailer Submits Table With Percentages All Calculated When Cost of Doing Business is Known—Points Out That Set Profit on Some Staple Lines is Not Enough to Cover Total Cost—This He Says Represents Half the Turnover—How Then is Any Money Made?

The question on what should be paid for an article so that it can profitably be sold at 25 cents when cost of doing business is 18 per cent. on sales, has brought in many interesting replies as well as a letter from a retailer who goes more fully into the matter of profits. He asks the question, what profit does the average retailer get on goods other than staples where margins are cut down to 8 and 10 per cent? His letter is as follows:

Editor Canadian Grocer. — "I was much pleased to see the replies to the question, 'If expenses are 18% on turnover, what should a person pay wholesale for a 25c article?'

"I would like to know what the general grocery trade, so far as profits are concerned, does on butter, eggs, flour, feed and sugar , which make half of all they sell and on which they get no more than 8 to 12 per cent.

"If their expenses are 18 per cent. on business turnover do they add more profit on the other goods which they sell? For instance: Half of a general grocer's turnover is in butter, eggs,, flour, feed and sugar, as above stated, on which he can scarcely average 10 per cent. margin. If his expenses are 18 per cent. on turnover then how does he make up this 8 to 10 per cent. loss, and on what goods does he add the extra expense?

"Some biscuit manufacturers want the grocer to pay 21½c for a box of biscuits to retail at 25c, and charge 8c for 10c packages of sodas. Many things selling at $1.00 per dozen are retailing at 10c. Where is the grocer going to make a profit?

"The general public seem to think the middleman the cause of the high cost of living. I would like to know where he is standing.

"Let him find his turnover and find his expenses. Let him use the enclosed table and discover his losses and the very little money he gets for his worry and labors. Can you publish this table for figuring net profits? If you can it will be a great help of the trade."

RETAIL MERCHANT.

Peterboro', Ont.

The table referred to in the last paragraph is reproduced here so that any dealer who knows his average percentage of cost of doing business, and considers at what advance on laid down cost he marks his goods, can tell what his net profits are in percentages.

Suppose, for instance, a dealer's cost of doing business is 15 per cent. of sales and he marks his goods at 25 per cent. advance above laid down cost, his net profit would be 5 per cent. on sales, as is shown in the table.

To illustrate with a concrete example: Supposing he does a business of $20,000 annually; the cost of doing business which includes rent, taxes, insurance, lighting, fuel, wages, advertising, etc.) is $3,000, or 15 per cent. of sales; and he marks his goods at an advance of 25 per cent. on laid down cost—or in other words, goods which cost him laid down $16,000 he adds 25 per cent to and sold for $20,000—he would then receive $4,000 more than he paid for the goods. He paid, however, $3,000 for rent, wages and other expenses so that the net profit would be just $1,000 which is 5 per cent. of total sales.

Value of Absolute Knowledge.

This is a table which every dealer should keep on file. A traveler for a wholesale grocery house remarked to the writer recently, "there are far too many dealers who are not making any money on certain lines, not because they do not want to, but, because they are ignorant of the fact that they are losing money." This, of course, does not apply to all. The best dealers everywhere take particular pains to know just what profits are being made. This should be made a policy with everybody and if it were, greater progress would be felt all along the grocery trade line.

"Retail Merchant" asks the question: What does the average man do to make money when staples which mean half his turnover are sold at a loss when cost of doing business is considered? Further discussion on this question would be interesting and opinions of readers will be greatly appreciated.

St. John Grocers May Form Association

Article in Recent Issue of Canadian Grocer on Operation of Vancouver R. G. A. Credit Extension System Creates Interest in the East—Example of How the "Dead-Beat" Gets in His Work—Price Cutting Could be Lessened.

St. John, N.B. Dec. 3.—(Special).—There is a strong probability of a Retail Grocers' Association being formed in St. John at opening of the New Year or a little later, as soon as the rush of business which is now being felt has subsided. The matter is now receiving serious consideration from more than one or two grocers who are agitating amongst the others to have a start made in this direction.

It is true that there have been other associations in vogue here and that they have not met with success. Various reasons were ascribed to their failure and the chief attribute was that the members did not work together, or that they were not thoroughly versed in the definite aims of the body, that is to say, they had not a proper basis to work on. There has been a feeling amongst some local dealers for some time past that they should be better protected than at present, and they were further stimulated in this idea through the article in a recent issue of the Canadian Grocer relating to the working system of the R. G. A. in Vancouver, B.C.

How the "Dead-Beat" Works.

"That's what we want here," said one dealer enthusiastically this week; "I had a case only to-day which would go to prove the value of such a system in vogue in St. John. Let me explain. Last week a man came into my store and bought a quantity of groceries. He was a stranger to me but he came back for two or three days in succession and I learned his name. Each time he came he bought goods which aggregated about four dollars and he paid me for each purchase. We became friendly and gradually from a discussion upon the weather, to politics, and other matters, he broached the subject of starting an account. Thinking he was straight, as he seemed to me to be, I agreed, he saying he would pay fortnightly. It was only to-day that I learned that this man had been dealing with Mr. ———— down the street and had been shut off in his account after it had run to quite an extent. If we had an association existing here, that would not have happened. And, of course, such things, at present are not an uncommon occurrence, by any means.

"We have other things to be protected upon also For instance, I am selling an article for 10 cents a pound and making just a legitimate profit. Some of my customers inform me that Mr. So-and-so, two doors away is selling the same thing at 8 cents. He is not making a profit. Now, if we were united he would be a member of the association, and so would I, and a score of other dealers, and one of the matters we would discuss would be the maintenance of prices.

"There is also the question of wholesale selling. We retailers believe that we should have the supplying of such places as hotels, large shipping houses, etc., and we probably would have if wholesalers, some of them at least, did not undersell to such an extent that it is impossible for us to get a "look-in."

The dealer in question is anxious to see an association formed, and says that after the present rush of trade, and the Christmas business, have slackened he will use his endeavors to have a protective body formed, and the article in The Grocer explaining the Vancouver R. G. A. system will be of decided value in the work.

Railway Demurrage to Be Increased

Application Made by the Companies and Railway Commission Takes View That Congestion Would be Relieved Considerably—Shippers' Claims for Reciprocal Demurrage to be Gone Into in the Future.

Ottawa, Dec. 4.—(Special).—With a view to lessening railway congestion as much as possible, the Dominion Railway Commission on Monday afternoon issued an order granting the application of the C.P.R., G.T.R., C.N.R. and M.C.R. to increase their demurrage charges on freight cars from $1 per day to $2 and $3 The increased rates will be allowed only from December 15 to March 31 of next year. The railways asked for $2, $3 and $4 for the first, second and third day respectively after the free time allowed, but the four dollar charge was not allowed. As the order stands, therefore, $2 will be assessed by the railways for the first 24 hours after free time and $3 for each succeeding day.

Claim Detentions Unnecessary.

The railway companies contended that the unnecessary detention of cars by shippers and consignees not only handicapped the railway companies by depriving them of cars which would otherwise be available for traffic, but also caused congestion by blocking team tracks and private sidings in terminals. It was contended that at least 50 per cent. of what is called railway detentions, that is, the unnecessary holding of cars in terminals by the railway companies, was due to the blocking of these terminals by the unnecessary detention of cars by shippers and consignees.

The judgment was given out by Assistant Commissioner D'Arcy Scott in absence of Chairman H. L. Drayton. In touching railway delays which handicapped merchants and manufacturers, Mr. Scott said:—

"There is almost unanimity of opinion among the shipping public that they would cheerfully consent to the increase in demurrage charges if a measure of reciprocal demurrage was made effective at the same time—that is, if the railway companies would pay a per diem allowance to the shipper or consignee for unreasonable delays in the delivery of cars on the part of the railway companies. That is a matter with which we cannot deal in this application. It was brought to the attention of the Board at a sitting in Winnipeg in July last, and is, I believe, now being considered by the Chief Commissioner and Commissioner McLean on their present western trip, and it cannot be disposed of without a hearing in the east, where a number of shippers desire to be heard on the subject. In disposing of the question of reciprocal demurrage, the Board will, of course, consider what, if any, effect this temporary increase in the demurrage charges may have upon that question, but I see no reason why the present application should be delayed on that account."

THE VALUE OF TAKING REGULAR INVENTORIES.

with great profit. That would give us $290 for this period, or, rather, we should be justified in appropriating $290 for the next period, using present results as a guide; and $290 properly, judiciously expended with intelligent regard to local conditions, should enable us to do not $29,000 per period, but $35,000, and more continually.

I hope to have more of this man's thoughtful and intelligent letters. And I certainly feel happy to know that anything I have written has been of value to him. I know it has been valuable to me—and I have often said that I get the most out of it. You can see how and why, all right.

Current News of the Week

Quebec and Maritime Provinces.

Thirty egg handlers employed by the produce merchants of Montreal have gone on strike for an increase of wages from $10 to $14.

At a meeting of the Montreal Grocers' Association held recently, it was decided that no objection should be made regarding the proposed increase in railway demurrage providing the principle of reciprocal demurrage is adopted.

Armand Chaput, of L. Chaput Fils et Cie, Ltée, Montreal, has left for an extended trip through Europe and will not be back till March next year. Prior to his departure he was banqueted at the Place Viger Hotel. Lt.Col. Labelle, of St. Lawrence Flour Mills, Montreal, acting as toast-master, complimented Mr. Chaput on the success of his administration of the affairs of the Chambre de Commerce. Amongst others present were Chas. Chaput and Ex-Mayor Laporte.

The capitalization of the Atlantic Sugar Refineries, Limited, to be erected in St. John, N.B., has been announced. It will be $2,500,000, seven per cent. preferred cumulative stock, $3,500,000 common stock, and $1,000,000 bonds. The new refinery will cost in the neighborhood of $2,500,000. It will have a capacity, it is claimed, of over 2,500 barrels of sugar a day. D. Lorne McGibbon is president and F. H. Anson the managing director. The directors include Sir Thos. Tait, S. H. Ewing, W. R. Allan, H. J. Fuller, F. H. Ward, Hon. Wallace Nesbitt K.C. and Hon. Thos. Chase-Casgrain K.C.

David Bell, grocer, Yonge St., Toronto, has cards out announcing his candidature as an alderman for Ward 3 in the January 1 municipal elections.

Cyril Hayes, former secretary of the London, Ont., Retail Grocers' Association, has just returned from a trip to the Canadian West. He met many former London grocers in business in Vancouver and reports they are all doing well.

Business men of Arkona district, near Forest, Ont., recently waited on representatives of the Dominion Canners, requesting a factory in Arkona. On account of lack of railway facilities there will be no factory located there at present, but if railway connection is secured, one is probable.

A unique tribute was paid to Hon. William Patterson, of Wm. Patterson, Son & Co., biscuit manufacturers, Brantford, Ont., on Friday night last, marking his retirement from public life. He was presented with an illuminated address enclosed in a silver mounted casket. Mr. Patterson, who is about to leave for a winter's sojourn in California was much moved by the token of esteem.

The officers of the Retail Merchants' Association, of Saskatoon, Sask., which was recently organized are as follows: President, J. L. S. Hutchinson; 1st Vice-Pres., W. H. Cope; 2nd Vice-Pres., P. D. Hines; Hon. Sec., W. A. Rathbone; Hon. Treas., A. H. Westhaver.

A. H. Rands, formerly with the Dominion Molasses Co., Halifax, N.S., and Van Camp Packing Co., of Indianapolis as detail salesman for the Western Canadian Provinces with headquarters at Winnipeg, left on December 4, for Europe on S.S. "Celtic" to visit friends.

A movement has been started at Montmartre, Sask., to erect a beet sugar refinery. In this district are many French and Belgian farmers who have had considerable experience in sugar beet culture in Europe and it is felt that if a market were supplied they would readily adopt sugar beet growing as part of their regular crops.

STANDARD WEIGHT WANTED.

The vegetable growers of Ontario and Quebec want a Canadian standard weight for a bag of potatoes. At present Quebec has a legal standard of 80 pounds, but in Ontario there is none. During the last session of parliament a bill passed the senate making a general legal standard of 80 pounds, but it had not passed the Commons when parliament dissolved. It will likely be brought up again next session.

PETITIONS BEING LARGELY SIGNED.

The petitions prepared by the Ontario Retail Grocers' Association to be presented to the Ontario and Federal Governments are being extensively signed. D. A. Hewgill, Milton, Ont. has sent in both petitions to the secretary, W. C. Miller the one re Scale Inspection having 21 names attached, and the other re amendment to Garnishee Law with 35 names, the latter including merchants in all lines of business.

R. S. Godfrey, Meaford, Ont., has also forwarded signed petitions the one referring to Inspection of Scales having 26 signatures and the other 50.

Secretary Miller, whose address is 632 Yonge St., Toronto, has both petitions printed and anyone desiring copies for getting signatures should write him for same.

Personal Chat With You About Ourselves

In future issues of The Canadian Grocer, our readers may look forward to several practical articles which our editorial department have arranged. Henry Johnson, Jr., who has been cleaning up difficulties among readers for a couple of years, has, at the request of the editor, a series of articles in course of preparation on Store Organization. This series, it can be confidently stated, will be a most valuable one for those who are perfecting an organization in the store—building up a more efficient sales force, looking after credits more systematically, cutting out leaks, etc., etc. Henry Johnson, Jr., has been in business for some 30 years. He has made a close study of Business Building from all angles, and it can be relied upon that the series will be most helpful from a practical standpoint.

Remember the Window.

Several good window displays are ready for coming issues. One of these is a coffee display in which the dealer who trimmed it, had in view an educative lesson on the sources of coffee growth. Another display shows a most attractive arrangement of high class goods, including such lines as olives, fruits in glass, malaga raisins, preserved ginger, etc. Still another shows a new and neat display of fruit. All or any of these can easily be duplicated in the smallest or largest of windows.

An Exchange for Ideas.

The national character of The Grocer is well exemplified in the attention given to articles from one part of the Dominion, by dealers in other parts. A few weeks ago, for instance, an explanation of how the members of the Vancouver Retail Grocer's Association prevented promiscuous credit extensions was given in this paper. The methods were discussed the following week by members of the Toronto R. G. A., and now some retailers in St. John, N. B., have under contemplation the formation of an association there to carry on similar work. In both cases The Grocer was responsible for the raising of the question on what to do with credit applicants. The paper, therefore, acquaints dealers in the East with what the West is doing, and vice versa, thus emphasizing its truly national scope.

Lively Race Anticipated.

Last year six cash prizes were given by The Grocer to winners in a Christmas window dressing competition. This offer has again been renewed, and from all appearances even more will enter the contest than was the case a fear ago. This competition was established several years ago with a view to creating a broader interest in window display among dealers and clerks all over Canada. We believe in the power of a good window as a sales producer, and it is with a desire to encourage good displays that the contest was established. That our efforts have been appreciated is demonstrated by the large number of entries received from year to year. More than ever are expected this year.

A Worth-While Investment.

That readers of this paper make money out of its contents, is evidenced from letters received every week and statements made to our representatives. Unless a trade newspaper can be made a good investment by the subscribers, it is of little use to them. A short time ago, when a circulation representative was in Calgary, he met with a good example of how valuable The Grocer was to readers. The dealer in question during the past summer had noticed a market report on condensed and evaporated milk which intimated that the strength of the market tended toward an advance. In view of this information, he immediately bought condensed milk and soon after the price advanced. This was but one instance where he had saved money, and he freely stated he would not be without The Grocer. It was a good investment for him.

An Old Country Admirer.

The Grocer has several admirers across the sea. One of them, John J. Smales, in the retail trade in York, England, in a letter to the editor, has this to say: "I think The Canadian Grocer is one of the best trade newspapers I have ever seen. I look forward to its coming every week, and I am eagerly sought after for the loan of it after I have read its columns through."

The Markets---Raisins Are Firmer

Valencias in Short Supply at Several Centres—Prices on Primary Market Have Been Advancing—Seeded Raisins Firmer at Coast—Christmas Goods Moving Out Well—Good Season Expected.

QUEBEC MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Molasses—Up 2c.
Sugar—Steady.
White Beans—Down 5c.
Canned Strawberries—Down 25c.

Montreal, Dec. 5.—Business for last month of year is already beginning to show up well. All those lines generally in demand for Christmas are moving out in large volume. Retailers are apparently looking forward to good month's trade.

One price change of week is an advance in molasses, which does not come as a surprise, as market has been firm for some time.

SUGAR.—Sugar market is steady in spite of easiness prevailing last week, and while reports are floating round about an enormous Cuban crop, yet small West Indian returns and European beet situation have offset effect of former, and steadiness will prevail for some time. As far as we can gather, the bankers financing European beet crops on noticing point to which sugar had dropped held back the crops and refused to put them on market until consumption improved demand. Knowing that prices could then be advanced. As a result of this step, refined sugar could not secure an advance although the West Indian crops were short. In respect to latter output it seems that Barbadoes crop for spring will be more than one-third short, while the Demerara harvest will also be well below average with result that considerable of the sugar will be converted into molasses. The market in general should be watched.

MOLASSES.—Last week we promised price changes as result of general firmness and the nail was hit on the head, as fancy molasses has advanced two cents per gallon; nor would it be surprising to see further rise take place as supplies have reached a decidedly low mark for this time of year. Prices should be well maintained, no matter what they may be, till well into January, as new crop will not be due till some time after this date. But dealers are inclined to play a waiting game about then, expecting lower prices with new goods. Still, with sugar conditions as they are, namely with new Barbadoes and Demerara crops short, it looks as if molasses interests will be able to keep price up as the new molasses will hardly come along in ordinary way, but sugar will be converted in order to supply demand as it comes along. Bearing these facts in mind it would be well for dealers to be careful in the policy they pursue and not allow stocks to drop to too low a figure.

DRIED FRUITS.—General activity was to be expected in this market with approach of holidays, but so far it is not greatly noticeable, though, of course, a satisfactory amount of business is passing. There was a shortage of large size prunes this year and what stocks there are, are held with confidence. On other hand, smaller sizes of second grade are easier as demand is slack, and it is reported that same are being moved out by packers in conjunction with larger fruit.

So far, there is no change in raisin situation, market remaining firm. Stocks locally, are said to be light and an advance may take place as it is uncertain whether new supplies will come forward in time for Christmas trade.

Currants are also short and supplies may be fairly well cleaned up before Christmas. It would seem that dried fruits generally are in small compass, as Persian dates are inclining upwards, jobbers stating that stocks held are getting low.

COFFEE.—Market is fairly lively and dealers seem to be getting away from hand-to-mouth policy and buying a little more freely. If we are to believe reports from growing centres, we may look forward to increased prices for some years to come as we are now at stage where the crops turn out short of the consumptive demand.

SPICES.—Market is active under a good demand, both from local and outside sources and grinders are having difficulty in filling all orders, owing to lack of cartage, and poor service on part of manufacturers of containers. Visible supply of spice is said to have come down to a low figure and we look for increases during the month and January, basing arguments on fact that there are no heavy cargoes en route to this country. Cloves have advanced 3 cents per lb. on London market and have now reached highest figure scored for a number of years.

RICE.—Considerable speculation is going on as to size of new Japan crop. Mail news, dated October 24 from seat of production is of pessimistic nature and stocks are not coming into market to same extent as expected at this time As it is, a sharp advance is likely to take place.

Business locally is not encouraging.

NUTS.—Stocks of Tarragona almonds are low and market is firm though immediate advance is not expected as supplies are on the way. Yet it looks as if California's will be used considerably as substitute. Walnuts are not in any too great supply either and market is becoming stronger. Brazils are booked for an advance as far as present indications are concerned.

Toronto, Dec. 5.—General optimism prevails in regard to this year's Christmas trade. Retailers express great confidence in the prospects. So far there has been every indication of a good year, and with prosperous conditions prevailing, from now until end of month trade is expected to be active. Jobbers have some complaints to make in regard to arrival of certain lines of goods, but otherwise things are bright.

Greater volume of such Christmas goods as baking material has now gone out to the trade. There has been a brisk demand for raisins, currants, peels, molasses and kindred lines. From now on, there will be a certain sorting trade in these lines, and as the festive season approaches, other lines will become the most prominent in demand. Even now nuts and candies are going out well, while trimmings for Christmas cake, table raisins, dates, figs, etc., will now be taking on life.

Shipping by lake and rail routes has been completed. Weather still continues favorable for getting in perishable goods by freight. Many jobbers are urging customers to do this, declaring that when cold weather sets in, perishable goods will only be shipped at customers' risk.

SUGAR.—Sugar situation is much same as week ago. When supplies of raws become sufficiently large, cane refiners across the line are expected to reduce prices, and it is probable that Canadian refiners will follow. Nearby raws have been in small supply, and thus steadiness has been ruling, although there has been easiness ahead.

As to how low prices will go during coming campaign, it is, as yet, pretty much a matter of speculation. Much depends on progress made from now on.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES.—Prices corn syrups have declined in West, but there has been no change here. There is record crop of corn in the United States this year, and it is having depressing influence on corn products.

Consumption, so far this season, has been up to a good level, and prospects are bright for coming month.

Molasses is selling freely in view of Christmas baking. There is a steady feeling in the market.

DRIED FRUITS.—There is general firmer feeling in raisins. Valencias are on upward trend, and are now quoted at 9 to 9½ cents. Prices on primary market advanced considerably after first shipment, and if purchased now, they would probably have to sell even above present quotations. On account of high prices this year, wholesalers bought sparingly of Valencias and quantity in stock locally is small.

Seeded raisins are also firmer, following tendency on coast. One jobber quotes his best fancy seeded at 8½c and choice at 7½ to 8 cents. It is likely that quotations will have to be increased in near future. There appears to be a general steadier feeling in all coast fruits.

There is big movement of different varieties of fruit for Christmas trade. Lateness of shipments has interfered to some extent, but in spite of this fact, jobbers expect year's business to be well up to standard.

SPICES.—Celery seed is now down to 35c, as was pointed out some time ago would probably be the case. It is still high, as up to year ago, normal price was around 17 cents, but it is now probably as low as it will be for some time. Cloves continue firm. "If we had to purchase to-day," said one grinder this week, "we would certainly have to get a higher price." Peppers are steady, while nutmegs are slightly easier on primary market, but not enough to affect local market.

A good trade is passing in spices, Christmas baking stimulating demand.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.—High prices on rice have not been conducive to increased consumption, and probably have had some effect on trade. However, jobbers point out there is growing demand for better grades.

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.—Although a report from Montreal says that strawberries are easier in price there, no change has been made in Toronto. "I see no reason for it," said one jobber. "The pack of strawberries was small this year and in face of that you could hardly expect a decline in price."

"Yes, the pack of strawberries was small," commented another dealer, "but prices are so high that consumption will probably be interfered with to some extent. I expect steadiness but no advance."

With Christmas goods now in limelight, canned goods are rather shifted to the background. Reports from retailers throughout the country however, would indicate that demand is satisfactory for season.

POINTERS—

Winnipeg, Dec. 4.—Wholesalers report all staple lines as moving freely and are expecting big rush of Christmas goods immediately. There is already considerable on the move.

Collections have much improved and it is anticipated, there will be little cause of complaint on this score at end of year.

The remarkably fine weather of past month has, on whole, been favorable to retail grocery business as it has kept fuel bills down and given customers wider margin for other household expenses. There are some complaints though of slow trade in some lines preparatory to Christmas. Mild weather though, has kept large numbers of men at work who might otherwise have been discharged and their wages have held up volume of cash trade.

SUGAR.—There is a first rate demand for sugar and prices are steady. No change is anticipated now and wholesale situation seems more settled than for some time.

"Confectionery should be an element in the effect every grocer and country merchant aims at in his Christmas display."

Editorial Note.—This suggestion holds good to-day as well as 20 years ago. Confectionery will sell well when it is brought to the attention of the public around Christmas time.

"There is no change in honey. Extracted sells at 7 to 8½c and choice comb stock 12 to 13½c, lower grade 8 to 11½c."

Editorial note.—Above note is from Montreal market report in December 9, 1892, issue. These show considerable contrast with to-day's prices on same market. Extracted sells around 12c and honey in combs from 23 to 25c.

"The point which is now receiving attention in the West is control of the credit system in the retail trade and especially the protection of the merchants from the practices of dishonest customers, especially those who, when their credit is run out at one store, look out for another victim."

Editorial Note.—This is a point that is being studied diligently in the West to-day as well as the East and unless business is run entirely on a cash basis, will continue to receive attention throughout all ages to come.

LONDON HAS CO-OPERATIVE STORE.

After Dividends, Not Price Cutting—Former Farmer as Manager.

London, Ont., Dec. 5.—(Special).—A co-operative store, dealing in groceries and meats opened for business here on Wednesday of last week. The opening took the form of an oyster supper followed by addresses by an Alderman, a Water Commissioner and a Lawyer. A clergyman is also an active worker in the organization. The store, which is located at the east end of Dundas St., is not large so the stock carried will not likely be heavy.

Mr. Morden, the manager, told your correspondent he was a farmer and had had no experience in the grocery or meat business. He was decided upon as manager and would have to learn. He also stated that the society had no intention to cut prices. On the contrary, they were out for profits so they could give their stock subscribers dividends every quarter, "if there were any," he added. A prominent Hamilton road grocer was approached to sell out to the Co-operative Society but his price was too high. He was also offered the management of the store, which he declined.

Rolled Oats Reduced 40 Cents Per Barrel

In Sympathy With Lower Price of Raw Material—Situation Beginning to Clear—Rolled Wheat Slightly Easier—Decline in Cornmeal Expected—Big Crop of Corn in United States.

Rolled oats have declined 40 cents per barrel or 20c per sack during past week. This was as expected and as predicted in former issues of The Grocer, although probably the reduction came sooner than was generally anticipated. This is indicated by fact that some mills still maintain that drop at this time was not really warranted, on account of big volume of orders which all mills have on file. However, shading on part of some of the smaller mills brought a general reduction. As pointed out in former issues, price of raw material really warranted decline in finished products as soon as situation cleared, so that it was merely a matter of time.

There have also been some concessions in rolled wheat at different centres of Dominion during past month, and next line to bow to the inevitable is cornmeal. There is a big crop of corn in the United States this year, raw material has been on downward path, and concessions on cornmeal can now be expected.

Manitoba flour is unchanged, and opinions as to future vary considerably. Prices are now 20c per barrel below a year ago, and some millers maintain that considering price of mill feed, that this is as low as wheat values warrant. However, a report from Winnipeg this week says that flour is not yet down to a level with wheat.

There is big crop of wheat in United States this year, and flour is being exported at such a low figure, that Canadian exporters are finding difficulty in competing in foreign markets. United States millers are even said to be invading the Canadian market, Minneapolis flour being offered in Maritime provinces in competition with Ontario patents.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR.—Demand both from outside and local sources is good, and general steadiness prevails in the spring wheat flour market. The supplies of winter wheat flour on spot are limited and the demand is brisk, the shortage being due to some extent to unwillingness of Ontario farmers to ship their wheat at present prices. Prices are maintained all around and no immediate change is looked for.

ROLLED OATS.—In spite of steady feeling prevailing last week rolled oats have declined 40c per barrel. This is another indication of the uncertainty of this market, for in spite of general firmness, due to scarcity of oats, there have been occasions when a decrease has been registered and vice versa. Demand is still good and millers are said to be experiencing some difficulty in filling orders.

TORONTO.

FLOUR.—Manitoba flour has shown no further change, first patents ruling at $5.30 per barrel. There are differences of opinion expressed regarding future. While there are still those who think flour is not yet down to a level with wheat, other millers claim that if lower prices on mill feed are considered, that flour is as low as wheat market warrants. Purchasing has been fairly brisk, as stocks generally are low.

CEREALS.—Following predictions in past issues, rolled oats have declined 40c per barrel, or 20c per sack, during past week, bringing local price for single sacks down to $2.30. There are some mills which claim that with large number of orders on file, lower prices just now were not warranted, but that shading by small mills brought the decline. Price of raw material, however, meant reduction as soon as situation cleared, which it is beginning to do now.

In sympathy with lower price of wheat, rolled wheat is quoted lower also. A reduction in cornmeal, as pointed out last week can be expected. It will probably decline about 15 cents per cwt.

MILL FEED.—Tendency in mill feed is still one of easiness, and further concessions are anticipated during month. Coarse feed is plentiful throughout Ontario, and this, with low price of corn, is weakening market.

Should be Good Sale For Lemons Now

Good Season of Demand—Prices Are Reasonable—Color and Quality Excellent—Florida Orange Crop Overestimated but Yield Will Be Fairly Large—Good Crop of Navels in Southern California.

Lemons are now down to a more reasonable basis than they have held for some time. During early fall under short supplies prices mounted upward, but coming of new crop fruit again turned market downward. Increased supplies gradually weakened prices, and during past week there has been a further readjustment.

Now is time for retailers to put some selling effort behind lemons. In addition to low price, fruit is of excellent color and quality. "I have never seen better at this time of year," stated a lemon importer this week. He states that values in Italy are slightly firmer.

New crop navel oranges from Northern California are being sold in nearly all parts of Canada. Opinions seem to vary widely as to quality, although it is perhaps fair for season. The fruit is running to large sizes. It seems certain that yield in Florida was considerably overestimated, the good showing on outside of trees giving false impression until picking commenced. However, crop will be fairly large, and as heavy crop of oranges is expected in Southern California, prices are not likely to advance, although they will probably hold firm until holiday demand is over. Southern California will have some stock for Christmas trade, but it will have to be artificially ripened, as is case with Northern California fruit now.

Grapefruit is coming along from Florida in splendid condition, and demand should be large as prices are reasonable. There is a slightly firmer feeling in Florida.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUIT.—Market is dull just now, though an improvement is looked for next week as holiday trade should then liven things up. Lemons following on a poor demand have declined considerably, while fall apples have also been marked down a few points. Limes are no longer quoted. Prices for certain other lines on list have been altered somewhat.

VEGETABLES.—This market has lost some of its former activity and dealers are awaiting the awakening. Green beans are on the shelf for another season while wax beans are coming along pretty freely at a good round figure. Radishes practically amount to nothing now. Tomatoes of the hothouse variety are fetching 25c. a pound and are expected to advance.

GREEN FRUITS.—There is considerable variation in prices and quality of oranges now on market. Dealers do not all agree as to quality of some lines of oranges.

Grapefruit locally is 25 cents per case lower, but primary market is firmer. Lemons, as was predicted couple of weeks ago, are still lower again, selling at $3.50 per case. They are about down to rock bottom. There is a slightly steadier feeling in Italy.

Kumquots are being shown by a local firm this week. They are a kind of orange, but small and oval shaped. They are a very delicious and refreshing fruit, with sweet rind and acid juice. They are quoted at 25 cents per quart.

What System Means to the Country Store

The Business Dissipates Into Thin Air Without It—Non-paying Departments Should be Eliminated or Made to Pay as is Done in Every Large Department House—Size of the Man Limits Size of the Business—The Wise Grocer Selects His Goods With Much Care.

By Elbert Hubbard.

Country stores that are successful always fail. I used to clerk in a grocery where a twelve-year-old boy stole eggs from us at the back door and brought them around in front and sold us our own property. He kept this up for a year, and he might have kept it up indefinitely had he not taken in a partner and tried to do a wholesale business.

Dead stock, bad accounts, pilfering clerks, pinching setters, and lime in the bones of the boss work the certain ruin of every country store.

If the business is so small that the proprietor and his wife can remember everything they have in stock, and then sell for cash, and cannot get or will not accept credit, then the business is safe until their sons grow up and take the management.

Expansion without system spells failure. Organization means that a man shall grow with his business.

A million mice nibble at every business concern.

In order to avoid leaks there must be a system that will locate them.

Pays or is Eliminated.

The department store, where there is a system which tells every day, every week or every month just what each department pays, is the safest business that exists. If any one department does not pay it is reformed and made to pay, or else eliminated.

No big business can possibly succeed unless it is divided up into departments.

A non-paying department is never allowed to continue and drag the whole concern to bankruptcy, as in the good old general store where jumble and guesswork audit the acounts.

The successful country store is an easy mark for every petty thief and little poker player in town. The village Smart Aleck hires out as clerk and supplies his friends the things they need, just as a sneakerino reads the postal cards and hands out the news if he or she clerks in the post office.

No business long remains greater than the man who runs it. And the size of the business is limited only by the size of the man. Our limitations say to our business, "Thus far and no farther." We ourselves fix the limit. Without system the most solid commercial structure will dissipate into thin air.

The Gould System, the Vanderbilt System, the Hill System, the Harriman System, the Pennsylvania System—they are all rightly named. It is a system that makes a great business possible. When Jay Gould gathered up a dozen warring, struggling streaks of rust and rights of way and organized them into a railroad system he revealed the master mind.

Average Life of General Store.

The measure of your success is your ability to organize, and if you cannot bring your system to bear your very success will work your ruin. "The average life of a successful general store is twenty years—then it fails." And it fails through its lack of system—the man does not grow with his business. An army unorganized is a mob.

Napoleon's power lay in his genius for system, and he whipped the Austrians, one against three, not only because he knew the value of time, but because he had the ability to systematize.

"But the finances?" asked his secretary.

"I will arrange them," was the reply.

The character of the man at the head mirrors itself in every department or every enterprise, but perhaps in the hotel business most clearly and quickly of all.

A certain kind of landlord can care for a certain number of "guests"—and the quality of the guest attracted is according to the quality of the landlord.

Increase the number of people to be fed and housed, and usually your hotelkeeper gets into very hot water.

Fifty extra people upset his system, and either his guests leave or also his "help" steal him to a standstill. A new and better management must then come in, or the referee in bankruptcy awaits around the corner with a stuffed club.

Ability to Organize.

The measure of a man's success in business is his ability to organize.

The measure of a man's success in literature is his ability to organize his ideas and reduce the use of the twenty-six letters of the alphabet to a system, so as to express the most in the least space. The writer does not necessarily know more than the reader, but he must organize his facts and march truth in a phalanx.

In painting your success hinges on your ability to organize colors and place them in the right relation to give a picture on the scene that is in your mind.

Oratory demands an orderly procession of words, phrases and sentences to present an argument that can be understood by an average person.

Music is the selection and systematization of the sounds of nature.

Science is the organization of the common knowledge of the common people.

In life, everything lies in the mass—materials are a mob—a man's measure is his ability to select, reject and organize.

The No Profit Articles.

The wise grocer knows what he has in stock, and he is also intent on keeping nothing on his shelves too long.

He is able to say "No," and refuse to handle the things that give no profit to himself or pleasure to his customers.

He selects, rejects, classifies, organizes and seeks always not only to make friends, but to be one.

HELPING EARLY CHRISTMAS SHOPPING.

Chatham, Ont., Dec. 4.—(Special)—"While we are all making every effort to induce the public to do its Christmas buying early, there is one ally whose possible help should not be overlooked," remarked a grocer the other day.

"Newspaper co-operation is a great help. I don't mean Christmas advertising—I take it that every aggressive merchant has his Christmas advertising campaign all mapped out, if not already under way, and that the merchant who wants to bring out the Christmas trade early is prepared to talk through the newspapers a week or two before he wants the season to begin.

"But the newspapers can help in addition by advocating early buying, and in my experience I have found they are glad to do so. Often the newspapers take up the matter on their own initiative and publish editorial comments and general items dealing with the subject. But at the same time, editors are busy men, particularly at this season of the year, and anything that is not part of the current news is apt to be overlooked. So I, would recommend business men to make it a point to interview their local newspapers and get them to take the subject up. Then it merely remains for you to follow up and take advantage of his general campaign by giving through his advertising space specific reasons why the public should shop early at your store."

Advent Fish Trade Off to a Good Start

In Spite of Unfavorable Weather During Opening Days—Orders in Anticipation of Increased Demand Coming in Freely—Now Is Time for Retailer to Feature Fish.

The Advent fish trade is off to good start in spite of somewhat unfavorable weather during the opening days. Towards end of last week, orders began to roll in at most centres in greater volume, and this became more marked at the beginning of this week.

Prospects are extremely bright for a large trade in fish during the month. Advent brings with it two fish days each week and with the cooler weather which should set in now, trade should amount to an appreciable figure.

Now is the time when the retailer should put his strongest efforts behind his fish department. If he succeeds in getting business coming his way now, it will help this department materially during coming months.

QUEBEC.

MONTREAL.—Demand for fish of all kinds is exceptionally heavy and while supplies of certain lines are short yet there are ample substitutes to take care of all orders. Oysters, needless to say, are selling briskly and halibut is a little more plentiful. Haddies are moving out in good shape at reasonable prices.

ONTARIO.

TORONTO.—The weather man was rather unkind during first few days of Advent season, failing to give the assistance he might have to fish trade. However, volume of orders that came in during week was encouraging, while last week business was quite brisk in anticipation of increased demand.

Frozen fish are moving steadily, while smoked, prepared and pickled lines are also doing well.

NOVA SCOTIA.

HALIFAX.—Local fish trade continues quite brisk. Past week has been mild and quite favorable for fishermen operating on the inshore grounds. Good haddock are plentiful. Halibut is scarce, and only a few fresh fish are being landed. Smelts are more plentiful.

Demand for pickled herring is excellent. Sales of oysters and clams are about the average for season.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

ST. JOHN.—With Advent beginning this week, local dealers are looking more sharply to their fish departments and are expecting a good season. Advices to St. John report a shortage both along the Nova Scotian ports and in Newfoundland, from the latter alone there being reported difference of more than 100,000 quintals compared with last year. This shortage, coupled with fact that market in general is showing good demand, and that next few months will see a keen activity in consumption, will have material effect upon quotations which are already well advanced.

WINNIPEG.

WINNIPEG.—Fish prices are unchanged and continued mild weather has kept domestic supplies of frozen pike and other coarse fish off market. There is good demand for both fresh and salt fish and oysters move freely.

Produce & Provisions

Butter Less Firm Under Larger Receipts

Easier Undertone at Several Centres—Make Should Continue Large as Feed is Plentiful—New Zealand Butter a Factor—New Laid Eggs Continue Scarce—Canadian Houses Have Eggs in Storage Across Line.

Butter is easier and again it is not. If quotations are taken as a gauge, there has been no change. However, larger receipts have caused less firm feeling than has been ruling for some time. In several sections of the country, slightly easier figures are being quoted at producing points, thus giving an indication of tendency of market.

There is good quality of feed available this year, and large make of butter, which is especially noticeable in dairy, should continue. Then, again, the West and Coast have slackened in their demands. A Toronto wholesaler who tried to make sales in Vancouver, received a reply that prices in East were too high to induce business as New Zealand stock was being laid down in Vancouver at a lower rate. Thus, the prediction that New Zealand would prove a factor of no little importance in Canadian butter market this year is apparently coming true.

The new laid egg is scarce in all sections of the country and high prices are being demanded for guaranteed stock. Storage stocks are being rapidly cut into, but they are said to be quite large, while many Canadian houses have further stocks in storage across the line. "These dealers" said one man this week, "have been wishing for colder weather, in hopes that it would cut down production of eggs across the line, and give them a chance to sell their stocks there. Some Canadian houses have plenty without their U.S. stocks. I am afraid that if cold weather doesn't soon set in, that market across the line will also have some effect on prices here."

It will probably be after the turn of year before any increase will be seen in supplies of new laid eggs, but weather being anyways favorable, the increase should be noticeable fairly early in the winter.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS.—Western market for dressed hogs is reported as firmer and prices are expected to advance here in sympathy. In fact, limited supply on hand at present coupled with former fact has produced pronounced upward tendency. Market for lard is also firm. Smoked meats are in good demand.

BUTTER.—Market presents pretty much same features as last week, the possibility of New Zealand stock coming along being freely discussed. Still, there is an easier feeling for lower grade variety as supplies of this have been heavier with only a moderate demand.

PROVISIONS. — Good volume of trade is passing in provisions for season. Lumbering camp supplies are being arranged for, and heavy lines are moving out well.

BUTTER.—If quotations are taken as a gauge, there has been no change in butter. There is, however, an easier feeling as was noted last week. Make continues large and prices are easier in the country. Production is expected to be maintained at good level during whole of this month, and as demand from coast is flat, there should at least, be no strengthening in prices.

Has Worked Up Extensive Trade in Cheese

Peterboro, Ont., Grocer Specializes on Canadian Cheese With Excellent Results—Does Not Sell Any Cheese Less Than a Year Old—Good Quality of Article Advertises It.

Good goods advertise themselves. It is wonderful what an effective advertisement the good quality of an article proves for itself and for the dealer who sells it. This has been one of the big factors in assisting W. H. Hamilton, grocer, of Peterboro, Ont., in working up an enormous cheese business. He has established a reputation that brings him a good deal of business.

Advertises Itself.

A woman was in his store a few weeks ago when The Canadian Grocer called. She was paying for some cheese which she had previously purchased. She spoke highly of the excellency of the cheese, remarking, "I had a friend in for supper the other night and she wanted to know where I got the excellent cheese. She wants to get some like it."

This is one example of the advertising for itself that a good article does. This same method of publicity has had much to do with raising the store's cheese sales to their present volume. Of course, underlying this, is the good quality of the article itself, for a grocer does not secure a reputation for cheese that appeals to the palate unless it really does so.

No Cheese Less Than Year Old Sold.

Success in this case lies in the study of the kind of cheese that cheese eaters prefer. Although there are those who like the new product, this store has found that they are greatly in the minority. Most people who eat cheese like it well seasoned, and it is for this reason that none is cut in the Hamilton store until it is at least one year old. Of course, this requires some planning ahead, but the store realizes that this is an essential in many lines, if real success is expected. Cheese of every month of production is purchased and stored. It is seasoned for one year and then cut. Of course, on account of not having a continual producing season, some cheese is over a year old when cut, but the rule is "nothing less than a year."

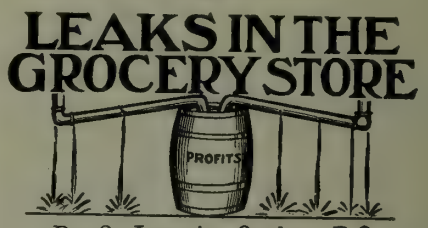
Care in Ripening.

The work does not end with the storing of the cheese. Methods are used so that when it is matured, it will have that mellow flavor that appeals to the cheese eater. Every week, each cheese is turned and occasionally buttered. This is done to prevent any swelling of the interior of the cheese and to have each cheese ripen evenly.

It is aimed to have all cheese as uniform in flavor as possible. The customer gets used to a certain kind and wants it all the time. The methods used by this firm produce a tasty product that brings customers back again. It is a means of bringing a good many people to the store, who probably would not otherwise be attracted.

That the Hamilton store cheese has the taste that appeals, is shown by a recent instance. An American hunting party going north of Peterboro, purchased ten pounds at this store. Before proceeding very far, the cheese was sampled and an order was immediately sent back to the store for 15 pounds more. Another tourist from Buffalo who had a taste of the cheese, liked it so well that he purchased a half cheese to take home with him.

Mr. Hamilton also handles some varieties of fancy cheese.



By O. Lacroix, Quebec, P.Q.

I have read your articles on "Leaks in the Grocery Store" and beg to point out a leak which demonstrates what careful attention we should always give to the purchase of goods. This loss refers to shortages in goods bought. For example: I purchased, some time ago, 56 pound boxes of butter which weighed 54 pounds, thereby being 2 pounds short. Another purchase consisted of "pound" prints of butter which weighed 14 ounces; 20 lb. pails lard containing only 19 lbs.; 21 lb. pails chocolates (no charge for pails) containing 17 lbs.; 100 pound bags of onions which weighed 95 pounds; 80 lb. bags potatoes which tipped the scales at only 76 lbs. Similar cases must occur in molasses, wines, etc., when we sometimes do not take the trouble or precaution to gauge or measure.

All these things represent distinct losses to us retailers, and with many of us would mount up high if we did not take the pains to weigh our goods as they come in. There should, I think, be prosecutions against such firms giving incorrect weights.

Editorial Note.—Actual experience in connection with this or any other leak in the store would be appreciated. Your experiences will help others to stop the leaks that carry away the profits.

HAMS

Have you considered the fact that choice sugar cured Hams are selling 3 and 4 cents a pound less in price than either Breakfast Bacon or Backs? Hams to-day are the cheapest pork products on the market, and should show the dealer a good profit, either smoked, pickled or cooked.

There are no finer hams cured than the "Star Brand," put up by

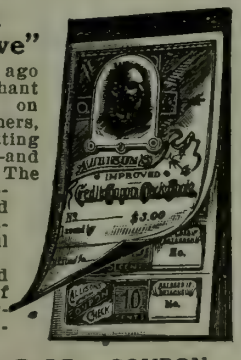
"The World Do Move"

A generation ago many a merchant "went broke" on credit customers, merely by letting things run on—and on — and on. The merchant of today can hold his credit customers and still "play safe." Thousands and thousands of progressive merchants are doing it with



ALLISON COUPON BOOKS

They reduce expenses, eliminate losses, prevent misunderstandings, paying for themselves many times over.

HOW THEY WORK

A man wants credit. You think he is good. Give him a $10.00 Allison Coupon Book. Have him sign the receipt or note form in the front of the book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with $10.00 — no trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten cent coupon, and so on until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10.00 and gets another book. No pass books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes. Allison Coupon Books are recognized everywhere as the best.

For sale by the jobbing trade everywhere.
Manufactured by ALLISON COUPON CO., Indianapolis, Indiana, U.S.A.

Laurentia Milk is Economical

Dealers should tell their customers the economical qualities of this household necessity.

It has the flavor of thin cream.

It is free from waste of souring, etc.

It does away with the necessity and risk of using frozen milk.

But most important of all, because of the greater assimilation it has a much higher percentage of food value.

Laurentia Milk is preferred by particular people, those who believe in having the best, especially in so important a thing as milk. Its purity and wholesomeness can always be relied on.

Are you, as a wideawake merchant, going to let the trade of this "boon to mankind" slip past your door?

COWAN'S CAKE ICING

Prepared ready for use. Save the housewife a lot of work, and give better results than any but an expert cook can produce. They are popular wherever known. Make them known among your customers and develop a new and profitable line of trade.

THE COWAN CO., Limited - Toronto, Ont.

You always lose when you "Money-back" a customer

FIRST—you lose your profit; second—you lose your time; third, you may lose your customer.

Further, your recommendation is weakened in effect, and then there is the annoyance of claiming on the miller.

And when finally you get your money back—why, you are still out of pocket.

Anybody with a new product can "guarantee" to money-back.

But guaranteed flour is not enough, Brother Grocer.

Isn't it enough to sell flour without having to buy it back?

Don't sell on suspicion when you can sell on certainty.

It is immaterial what brand you are selling now, FIVE ROSES flour will bring you easier, larger sales.

It will bring you a greater volume of net profit.

Because it is more than merely "guaranteed"—it has established a belief.

A guarantee is based on promise, but a belief is based on performance. Since 1888, housewives have tried FIVE ROSES, tested it every way. And now they KNOW.

Sell a flour that needs no "guarantee," Brother Grocer. Packed in sizes to suit YOUR trade, ask your jobber for FIVE ROSES or write our nearest office.

GIVE YOUR CLERKS THIS PRACTICAL CHRISTMAS GIFT

¶ Every grocer realizes that the success of his business depends largely upon the ability and enthusiasm of his store salesmen.

¶ Every step he takes in the direction of increasing the efficiency and loyalty of his staff, is a step towards larger sales and increased profits.

¶ The habit of remembering the sales staff at Christmas time, is a good one, and tends to develop a feeling of loyalty to the store. If the remembrance comes in the shape of a year's subscription to the Canadian Grocer, the dealer stands to benefit in cold cash, from the increased efficiency which will result from its weekly visits.

¶ Give each of your chief salesmen a year's subscription to Canada's Only Weekly Grocery Paper. They will be reminded of your thoughtfulness 52 times during the year—and they will give you better service because of what they learn from its pages.

¶ Write us now, giving the names of clerks whom you wish to remember in this way. We will advise them that the Canadian Grocer is being sent them, on your instructions, as a Christmas gift from you.

WE ARE CONSTANTLY EMPHASIZING

the importance of the retail merchant to sell only goods of the highest quality. Goods that are never "found wanting." In edibles especially quality is essential. When the patrons can rely on "Brands backed with quality" that brand becomes a staple in the household, just as the article itself is a staple. The customers will always come back for future supplies, and inferior brands will have no call, they will be dead stock on the dealer's hands.

BORDEN'S
Milk Products

have held their pinnacle position for quality for over 54 years. The most perfectly sterilized, richest, full cream milk only is used—prepared and packed by the most improved process. The most rigid sanitary regulations are observed from the moment the milk leaves the cow until it is sealed in air-tight tins. The result being the purest and highest quality in milk products which have received the highest awards wherever exhibited.

You are the loser if satisfied with a substitute.

Educative coffee window which connects up different varieties of coffee with country of growth on the map of The World. Same idea could be used on other classes of goods.

Geography Lesson in a Coffee Window

Countries of Growth Indicated on Map by Ribbon Attached to Various Kinds of Coffee—Educative Display That Brought Direct Results Besides Advertising the Store—Same Idea Can be Carried Out With Many Other Lines.

The contention that more goods can be sold, the more the customer knows about them, has once again been proven by the results secured from an educative coffee window display shown recently by Frederick L. Giles, grocer, at 382 College street, Toronto.

A glance at the display as reproduced above, immediately suggests its character and demonstrates why it was a window that attracted a good deal of attention.

Effects of Display Lasting.

"The window sold about 30 extra pounds of coffee, while it was in," states Mr. Giles; "but I do not at all consider that, the extent of its worth. Not only were 30 pounds of coffee sold that would not have been disposed of without the window, but some of the purchasers are now buying other goods from me. It has got more people buying so has been a sort of permanent investment."

This evidence presents to retailers that good window displays not only produce temporary but permanent results. If by one extra good window one new customer spending twenty or twenty-five dollars a month is secured, that display was well worth any overtime spent on it.

How Window Was Arranged.

In the dressing of this coffee window, Mr. Giles used six bags of coffee filled with the various beans. These were placed in the background in such a way that their openings faced the spectator, and their overflowing contents extended to the front of the window, forming a level flooring in sections of different colors, according to the shade of the beans, one section being a rich dark brown, another, a greenish gray, another a yellow, and so on.

Upon this level flooring of coffee beans, stood about nine woven straw receptacles, in the shape of deep bowls, placed in two rows at even distances from each other. These were also filled with the different colored beans, and labeled with the name, Santos, Java, Mocha, etc., and price of the coffee. Hung at the back of the window facing the spectator, was a large map of the World. Fastened to each of the straw baskets or bowls was a red silk ribbon, the other end of which was attached to the map at the portion of the world whence was procured the particular sample of coffee contained in the bowl to which the ribbon was attached. The places indicated on the map by the ribbons, were: The islands of Ceylon and Java in the East Indies; Mocha in Arabia; Maracaibo in South America; Brazil, whence comes a large percentage of the world's supply of coffee, and Mexico.

Education to Dealer and Customer.

The idea of such a display was to educate the customer and passerby on the sources of coffee. It, however, had the result of making the dealer himself more familiar with appearances of different coffees and the varieties that come from the different sources of supply. The same idea can well be emulated with many other lines. It could be carried out effectively with olives and olive oil; dried fruits; nuts, spices; rices, tapioca and sago; oranges, lemons, grape fruit, cranberries, etc.

Any window of this character will be a splendid drawing card because of its unique character and the knowledge it imparts to others.

Parcel Post and the Country as a Whole

Would It Lighten the Cost of Living Without Undermining the Stability of the Retail Trade?—What Happens a Town or Village When the Retailer is Driven Out?—Would It Help the Poor Man Who Must Have Credit?—These are Questions That Advocates of the Proposed System Should Consider.

"Resolved that the Conference Committee of One Hundred of the Board of Trade of the City of Toronto request that the Council of the Board urge that the Dominion Government consider establishing a good Parcel Post, limited no doubt at first to the more populous localities but extended as experience may warrant."

Above is a resolution which is before the Toronto Board of Trade and which will be considered at next meeting. This board is a strong body and whatever it backs up, gives it a strong impetus. There are many other agitations going on with the ultimate object of getting the Postmaster General to take up this parcel post question. The Postmaster-General, too, has signified his intention to consider it as soon as the United States system has got underway with the first of the New Year.

Mail Order House Would Benefit.

The Toronto Board of Trade and those who favor parcel post are evidently inclined to look at the problem on the surface. They decline to hold the opinion that the greatest benefit from it would fall to the large mail order houses at the expense of the town and country merchant. That it will mean cheaper food and cheaper living to the consumer is their only argument, forgetting altogether that what injures the standing of the town and country merchant is undermining the general stability of the country.

If the city mail order houses become richer, naturally they are drawing money from outside districts which tends to impoverish them. One question arises, "Will parcel post help the mail order houses get more money from country districts or not?" Few debaters would care to stand for the negative. Suppose it be granted that the express companies make excessive charges. Is parcel post the best remedy? Would it help the country as a whole, or would it tend to draw money from the towns, villages and country districts to enrich mail order houses in the big cities?

What Decline in Trade Does.

The town or village, as The Grocer has often claimed before, where business is stagnant and where the citizens send away for the cream of their requirements, is dead. Dead socially, financially, intellectually. The citizens lack confidence and interest in each other. They do not co-operate. They do not reciprocate. They cease to be enterprising; overlook the rights of their neighbors, and neglect to look properly after their own; in short become slovenly and careless and degenerate into conditions in which no person of taste, refinement, culture, enterprise or ambition would care to live. Who pays their taxes: keeps up their churches; manages their Sunday schools; arranges their social entertainments; visits the sick, helps the needy, or looks after the poor Certainly not the big concern at a distance, to whom they send their money.

No individual or institution can be healthy or prosper if starved. Starve the retail trade by a parcel post or any other such suggestion and you weaken and destroy the most vital essential in the life of a community. Starvation does not necessarily mean the absolute stoppage of all sustenance. The process can be carried out by degrees, and by sending away for their most profitable goods, the citizens of a town or village can gradually starve to death the retail business and destroy the life and prosperity of any community.

Home Buying Best for Community.

The principle of the mail order house destroys the meaning of the very term "community." If the foundation of a community is really commutual or reciprocal, as the name implies, then the members should carry out the principles and conditions which bind them together as a community. The doctors, lawyers, dentists, clergymen and other professional men, as well as mechanics and officials and those who may have retired into private life, get their incomes as a rule, entirely from the locality in which they live. Should they not reciprocate by spending that income among the people of the community from which they receive it? If parcel post increases the tendency to send away for goods, as it certainly will, will it be a good thing for the country?

Even the farmer, under advanced modern conditions, gets his revenue, if not all, certainly the most profitable part of it, from the community in or near to where he lives. These are the parties that send away from home for their most expensive things, and in this way so impoverish their local merchant that he cannot afford to keep the best class of goods, and consequently the character and usefulness of his business is greatly impaired, and he is forced to charge more for the goods his customers are obliged to buy from him.

Retail Store a Necessity.

There is certainly nothing commutual about this. When these same parties want a pound of nails or a spool of thread or a pound of sugar, or perhaps a rake or hoe, what a panic there would be if there were no retail stores to go to! Parcel post unquestionably tends to eliminate them. The retail merchant is, undeniably, a necessity, and it is equally true that when he is put out of business the place goes to ruin. The heaviest taxpayer ceases, and the municipal corporation will look in vain to the large stores where her wealthy citizens send their money for supplies. Every community should take a pride in itself, and the members should loyally support those institutions that give character and stability to the place.

Could Poor Man Get Credit?

There is still another point that advocates of parcel post should look into. The measure is designed to help the poor man—which is the man who has not always the money at his command to pay cash for what he buys. Would parcel post help him? Could he get credit from someone who doesn't know him or who has never seen him? He could not, and would have to fall back on the retail merchant around the corner for his wants. The retail merchant would still be a necessity with probably half his trade gone.

If boards of trade or the post office department take up this question, it must be looked at from all sides. It must not be supposed that the express companies only are objecting to it, for the retail trade of the country is, with few exceptions, against it. If the express companies are charging excessive rates why can they not be got at through the Railway Commission?

Parcel post would no doubt reduce their business considerably; but if it undermined the retail trade of Canada, reduction in express charges would have been dearly bought.

When you make a mis-statement about goods that the character of the goods will not bear out, you put yourself in a position where you are sure to be found out.

View of W. E. Baker's store, Lindsay, Ont., showing prominence given to chinaware and crockery. Mr. Baker also features provisions and brooms and brushes.

Features Chinaware Prior to Christmas

December Sales of Lindsay, Ont., Dealer Equal Any Other Three Months of Year—Finds that Chinaware is Acceptable for Christmas Gifts—W. E. Baker Also Makes Specialty of Provisions—How He Increased His Syrup Sales.

One of the seasons of greatest activity in chinaware is that previous to Christmas. There are many varieties of chinaware that make a very acceptable Christmas gift and thus the retailer who handles this line finds a good demand at this time.

A good many grocers handle chinaware. One such is W. E. Baker of Lindsay, Ont. He gives particular attention to it prior to Christmas and with good results. He states that he sells more during December than any three months of the rest of the year. This is because he puts the necessary efforts behind this department to induce business. As the season of purchasing approaches, this line is pushed into the limelight. Special advertising space is always devoted to it during the Christmas campaign.

To Be Sold Must Be Seen.

It is recognized that one of the essential things to sell chinaware, crockery, etc., is to let the people know you have them, and if possible display them so that they will have a chance to admire them. One window is given over to this purpose, as well as a large section of the interior. Down the centre of the store, tables and silent salesmen, which at most times of the year are used, at least partly, for display of groceries, are given over to fancy lines of chinaware.

One of the important factors in selling chinaware is to show it up to advantage. This is aimed at by Mr. Baker. The neat and effective arrangement of the stock can be seen by the accompanying photograph. At the rear is a long table subdivided into sections, with each section containing lines of a certain price, while a showcard above heralds forth the price to prospective customers. This method is found to be a good one.

How Provision Sales Are Increased.

Another feature of Mr. Baker's business is the provision department, which is specialized on to good advantage. The counter is situated at the front, and reminds customers of this line when they are entering and leaving the store. The counter has a marble top and a cheese case is situated at one end. A particularly heavy business is done in cooked and smoked meats during the summer, but trade is also maintained at an appreciable level during the winter months.

Mr. Baker has a particular reason for displaying meats near the front and also for showing them in pieces. In this regard he says: "By showing in a piece, you sell more. A customer will in most cases say, 'I will take that piece,' while otherwise they would ask for one or two pounds as the case might be. This also tends to prevent the leaving of ends—another very important thing. People take the whole piece in most cases and in this way no ends are left."

Selling More Corn Syrup.

Quite a unique method has recently been used to promote the sale of a certain kind of corn syrup, which is particularly clear in color. A high glass jar was filled with this syrup and placed on the counter. It can be seen in the photograph alongside the wrapping paper. It's clear color caused many customers to speak of it, and thus an opportunity was presented to the clerks to talk about it. This method sold a good deal of syrup and the original shipment had to be duplicated in a short time. This fact shows that proper display begets purchasers.

Brooms and Brushes Given Attention.

Such lines as brooms, brushes, whisks and clothes lines are given attention in this store. A display of them will be seen at the rear, the brooms being arranged on the wall in fan design. These are lines which are not given much attention in some stores, but in this way Mr. Baker keeps them prominently before customers.

Working With the Tools We Have at Hand

First of Series of Articles on "Store Organization"—The Workman Who Seeks to do the Work with Tools at Hand Contrasted with Him Who Fusses About the Tools—Look for the Material on Which to Work—If Proper Qualities Are Not Found, Discard.

* By Henry Johnson, Jr.

Years ago I watched a pair of carpenters at work. Need arose for a strip narrower than was at hand. One worried longer over the absence of a rip-saw than it finally took him to rip the board with the saw he had. Let this carpenter represent the grocer who "cannot get intelligent help."

Latterly one has said that "The Smart Men of the World are Those Who Get Other Men to do Their Work." That last is so pregnant with wisdom that I long ago adopted it as my favorite axiom. I have tried for many years to become one of those Smart Men. Sometimes I think I do it; again I feel that I am falling wofully short. There is no doubt about the fact that only through getting others to do our work can we be even fairly successful.

Since, then, the Tool is essential and the Man is the Tool, we must work on and through the Man, or we fall.

The Work Must Be Watched.

The carpenter failed to make the most of his time because he allowed the work to become secondary to the Tool. We must copy nature in her disregard of the individual and keep our eye steadfastly on the central fact, the work to be done. So we must disregard and hold secondary any one individual man, while we must try hard to select and keep good cross-cut saws and also rip saws, and use each for its proper purpose.

Concrete examples are most instructive, so I shall tell of a few experiences that come to mind at random:

Charlie was a negro of prepossessing appearance and manner. I thought I had a gem of a stock and general utility man. On that basis I hired him for certain hours daily at $30 per month. We had a lot of stock arranging to do; it was work which required some experience in groceries; I stayed right with him for two days. I was pleased with his way of working under my direction, and he seemed to be bright about understanding the whats and the whys of things. Immediately he was left to himself, however, I found his work terribly slow. He was always getting somebody to "help" him; and then, as is usually the case, the two men did less than one good man, or even one poor man, working alone. I made a protest once or twice and finally got quite hot when I found two men working so slowly on some baking powder that, high-grade stock though it was, I told them it would cost more than I could get for it at that rate—and I "let Charlie go." This was not Working with any Tools at all; but, you see, here was neither a rip nor a cross-cut saw.

Had to be Discharged.

Dan was old—an old grocer—one of those men who are so deceiving because they ought to know certain things about groceries, and we are apt to think they do know these things; but we find they don't. Then we realize why they are still working, though old. He tried, tried hard, and worked hard; also he was honest, absolutely honest. That last is the reason why I kept him at all. I tried hard to find not only whether he was a cross-cut or a rip, but whether he had any cutting edge whatever. There was nothing doing, so I had to let him out, too.

Bringing Out the Usefulness.

Herbert is a young man of really fine character; young, thoughtless, often "slap-dash"; but true, transparent and of fine disposition. Much trouble and anxiety has he given me by reason of making mistakes, failing to deliver properly, leaving goods exposed to the weather, etc. Many a serious lecture have I given him and many a time I have all but given up. But whenever I have felt like firing him and getting another in his place, I have reflected that such act would show that I did not know a cross-cut from a rip saw and could not use either to advantage.

In other words, I have realized that it is up to me to Work with the Tools at hand, and that when a tool has some positive usefulness in it, I must find that usefulness and get it out. So we have "got along" and are still working together—he growing older and more staid and developing finely. This is an example of successful Working with Tools at Hand, which is mostly up to ourselves; but more of that lower down.

Work Done but Once.

John is one of those rough diamonds which we find occasionally. He was a surprise in more ways than one. He came up one night last summer looking for a job and he was so quiet about it that I hardly took him seriously; but something attracted me to him and he was hired. In the beginning we thought he was not going to make good, he seemed so slow in his motions; but we discovered that he made no mistakes, was so methodical in his deliveries that customers were pleased with his accuracy and the staid methodical ways resulted in the work being actually done more speedily because it did not need to be done more than once.

Developing Latent Salesmanship.

Lynn was a very pleasant man to meet and a nice salesman. In that particular he filled the bill. But there was no use trying to get any work out of him. By that I mean the work, actual, steady, grinding work without which no grocery store can be run, so far as he was concerned, was N.G. He could go about and touch up here and there with a duster, giving very ladylike, but not womanlike, touches to the dust and carefully avoiding the work of moving anything to dust under it; but he had no faculty of putting things through. Man as he was, of years of business experience, he did not hesitate to stand in deep reflection and wait to be told what to do—like the greenest boy about the place.

After a while, therefore, I gave him notice. In the meantime, however, I got thinking whether I was not losing an opportunity to get out of that man what he really had in him—salesmanship. So I proposed a commission deal with him. Never having done that, I hit on 5 per cent. as about the right commission to try out. We talked it over and he accepted the proposal, going to work immediately. Almost immediately, however, he showed that such a deal was impossible, because he began to get to the store at eight or later, whereas the rest of us got there at seven and actually had to simply wait on him. Here I may have fallen short, but I was so disgusted that I did not say a word, but gave him notice that in another week we should not need him. The funny thing was that, though he was making $2 to $6 per week more money, he did not ask my reason for tiring of the arrangement.

All these things are familiar to all of you or I might go on indefinitely; but

*The writer of this article is one of the most successful dealers on the continent. He has spent almost 30 years in the retail grocery business and is well equipped to answer questions and smooth out difficulties with which others may have met. If a special request is made names of inquirers will be omitted when their letters are printed for discussion.

the point I want to make is this: Out of five men whom I have sketched, two have made good. That is 40 per cent. The next man whom I should have told about has also made good, so here would be 50 per cent. good material, taken as it has run in my store. This may have happened to me because I have been fortunate in selecting my help, but it has always run that way, or about that way, with me. Hence I cannot but conclude that there is plenty of good help to be had.

Management of Help Lacking.

I further believe that this condition obtains everywhere and that it is not help that is lacking but management of help. On the one hand we expect too much and on the other hand we do not supervise enough. Much is said about how little "interest" men take in their work; but is that to be wondered at? What interest have they? How can they possibly feel the intensely concentrated interest in the outcome of a business venture that the owner of that business will always feel? Is it not that we expect too much and hope for things to move along automatically when we should be ahead, leading, or behind, pushing, all the time? What is to become of that "eternal vigilance" which is "the price of THIS THING" if men are to fall into the way of working with their might where their ultimate interest may only chance to lie?

Details Must Be Looked After.

It is up to us to know cross-cut from rip saws. Further, it is up to us to use cross-cut in the place of rip when the rip saw is not at hand. We must get the work done; we must put the daily task over no matter what tools may be at hand; that is our appointed task. Then, as we go onward with cool judgment, we shall be given rip saws and cross-cut saws, each for its proper use and purpose.

What we must learn is to look within for faults and keep steadily on the job of seeing that we get value out of the Tools we Have at Hand by means of intelligent leadership. Then we shall find that our force is so well trained and so perfectly organized that we shall soon be relieved of a lot of detail work. But this comes about through first putting through the details by our own personal supervision.

Upon What Do Business Profits Depend?

The Size of the Turnover Does Not Determine the Profits of a Business—Success Comes With Rapid Turnover of Stock—Two Concrete Examples to Illustrate the Case—Clean Out Unsold Goods Before the Season is Over.

By Howard R. Wellington.

BEFORE taking up the essentials to a successful business, we would like to call the attention of the merchant to some of the causes of failure in business. These are many and varied—lack of capital, extravagance, speculation, incompetence, inexperience. There are a few causes entirely beyond the control of the merchant who is unsuccessful in a business, such as the failure of others, specific local conditions in a community from which he derives his entire trade. Still at least seventy-five per cent. of the merchants who fail in business are to blame themselves through incompetency or some of the above mentioned causes.

It is not the large turnover nor the large stock carried that makes the profit for the merchant but the number of times the stock is turned over in a period, providing expenses are kept down to a reasonable percentage.

For a number of practical illustrations we will endeavor to show how a merchant doing a very small business can make more net profit than a large concern turning over goods away up in the thousands each year.

The merchant must look after his business. He should know how much gross and net profit each line of goods or each department is making for him each year; how the expenses of each department compare with the net profit, or what percentage of his gross profit is eaten up by expenses or salaries. Then when taking stock great care should be given to the pricing of lines which are not everyday sellers. If goods are carried from one season to another, each year depreciating considerably in value, there will come a time when the merchant will wonder where all his profits (?) which he has been making for several years back have gone and he will be forced to face a situation which will surprise him more than anything that could happen. His so-called profits are taken on what he has sold, but his stock has accumulated to such an extent that he cannot get forty cents on the dollar for it; and, when the truth is known, instead of a profit for several years back, there has actually been a loss creeping in on him from carrying dead stock.

The only remedy for this situation is careful buying by studying the needs and demands of the community in which you are located and then clearing out before the season is over, all goods which may depreciate, even if a loss is made. Far better take a small loss and know the true situation, than make a dismal failure by clinging to an old system of selling everything at a profit.

TURNING THE STOCK.

The accompanying article raises a point of practical interest. How often should a retail merchant turn his stock in the course of a year in order to insure the largest possible profit on the amount invested? Opinions on this subject are solicited. How often do you turn your stock?

A good profit on a small turnover:—

Stock	$ 4,000
Purchases	12,000
Sales		$17,000
Expenses	3,200
Stock		4,500
Net Profit	2,300
	$21,500	$21,500

Here is a small merchant worth a $4,000—$5,000 stock turning it over four times a year, with a small investment making a big margin. The key to the situation is stock turned over often at a fair profit and very light expense.

A loss or a large turnover.

Stock	$ 60,000
Purchases	160,000
Sales		$195,000
Expenses	50,000
Stock		70,000
Net Loss		5,000
	$270,000	$270,000

Here is a large business, a heavy stock, no management, and profits absorbed, yes—more than absorbed by expenses.

Think of doing such a turnover and actually losing money. These instances, however, are not rare.

Key.

The sale of goods at a profit sufficient to cover running expenses and leave a good net margin.

SERIES ON STORE ORGANIZATION.

In Henry Johnson, Jr.'s, article in this week's issue is a thought which can be applied to every business. That every dealer should get the most out of the tools at hand is emphasized. Mr. Johnson illustrates by a simple occurrence in the life of a carpenter, how we are oftentimes disposed to fuss and lose time over the accomplishment of some work that could be completed rapidly if "the tools at hand" were only used.

To apply the point to the grocery business, he gives concrete examples that have arisen in his own store. Like every other large dealer, many employes have passed under his observation. It has been his endeavor to make the most out of them by a close study of their character, their aptitude for selling and their accuracy. He tells of how certain of them recently in his employ, were given every opportunity to make good, but eventually had to be discarded; of others who at times appeared to be in the wrong field of work, but who, because the best was secured from them, have made good.

This article is the first of a series by Henry Johnson on "Store Organization." The next of the series will appear in two weeks, and will be devoted to "Store Equipment." These articles should be carefully followed; they will mean dollars and cents to those who study them diligently.

WHAT THE SALESMAN CAN DO.

Supposing you were to have a few hundred dollars in your pocket and you go to a housefurnishing store to purchase a rug; there is a salesman there who shows you a handsome Persian rug. He tells you a story about it—possibly a little history explaining the district from which it came, the character of the Persian folk who wove it, that an exactly similar one is reposing in the palace of the Persian king or that of some other Eastern notable. Wouldn't you have a longing to possess it? Whether you had the price or not the longing would be there.

This is human nature—with few exceptions—and that same "desire of possession" rises in the mind of a customer before the grocery counter when she is told a little history of the olive, olive oil, grapefruit, cocoanut, coffee, etc. The story may be told through a newspaper advertisement or in the window, if the dealer hasn't time himself, and if properly told it is going to bring results.

The article in this week's issue showing a coffee display, different kinds and sources of supply, bears evidence of this. The window brought results, and at same time was a splendid advertisement for the store. It illustrates what can be done by the salesman behind the counter selling specialties and semi-luxuries. But first, of course, the salesman must know his goods. If he does, he can talk intelligently about them, and is then in a position to interest one or more customers to the point of buying. This is what all are aiming for—not simply filling demand, but increasing sales about the ordinary demand.

THE BOY AND THE MUSHROOMS.

A boy, not long ago, was picking mushrooms on the outskirts of a town. A gentleman who came along while he was at the work, thought that he was none too careful in his selection of the fungi.

"Are you sure those are all mushrooms—that there are not toadstools among them?" he asked.

"Oh! It doesn't make any difference to me," answered the boy. "I don't eat them. I sell them."

This unconscientious youth might be likened to many of the so-called business men of to-day who do not appear to be particular about the quality of the goods they offer to customers. As long as the appearance of the goods offered is such as to make them salable, they, like the boy selling the mushrooms, are apparently ever willing to make a sale.

Such a policy may be all right for the fly-by-night man, whose aim is to reap immediate profits only and not to establish the confidence of his customers, but the man who expects to continue in business and build up a sound trade is certainly unwise to operate along these lines.

In the grocery business to-day, as in many others, it is possible for the dealer to pawn off upon his customers many lines of inferior quality. If it is done, however, there is bound to be reaction, for the customer is bound sooner or later, to discover the fact. Truly, the dealer has probably gained a few cents more on the transaction than he otherwise would, but what benefits him, if he gains a few cents and loses the trade of the customer, as well as weakening his reputation. He who follows the policy of the mushroom seller is penny wise and pound foolish.

FEWER FAILURES IN CANADA.

The prosperity of Canada is demonstrated in no way more conclusively than by the decrease in the number of failures. The records show that during the month of October there were 106 failures in Canada, the total liabilities running up to $1,480,949. During October, 1911, there were 119 failures with a liability record of $1,762,457. During October, 1910, there were 130 failures and in the corresponding month of 1909 the number was 150.

The same ratio is borne out in regard to retail failures. In October of the present year, there were 79 failures with a liability total of $759,354. October last year saw 90 failures with a liability record of $845,644. In 1910 the number of failures was 90 and in 1909, 117.

It will thus be seen that the number of failures has been shrinking very appreciably each year. That this is due to the good times prevailing cannot for a moment be doubted. One cannot help feeling, however, that some share of the credit is due to the gradual improvement being brought about in methods of business management. Credits are being more closely supervised and a more general knowledge of the fundamental principles of sound financing is being spread. So long as it is possible for rash and inexperienced men to venture into the realms of business, failures will occur with more or less regularity but, with the increase of efficiency, the number of failures, due to other causes than inexperience or hard times, will continue to dwindle.

ANOTHER DROP IN CEREALS.

Again this week is a decline in rolled oats announced. This time it is 20 cents per barrel, bringing prices down 60 cents in two weeks, or 40 cents per sack below prices existing at corresponding period one year ago.

It is a fact that millers are now well supplied with oats, but the demand both domestic and export is large, leading one to conclude that competition had something to do with the decline. Wholesalers and retailers are replenishing stocks in anticipation of a good winter's trade and naturally there would be strong endeavors on part of millers to secure as much of the business as possible.

From all appearances there will soon be some concessions made in corn meal, as crop of corn on North American continent this year was particularly large.

Readers who followed our market advices during the past month or more, will not be surprised at cereal declines. Although for a long time mills could not obtain raw material—and even some were securing United States oats and milling in bond—our reports indicated that as soon as oat movement became general lower prices could be expected.

CHIEF CAUSE OF SHIPPING DELAYS.

The cartage and freight conditions in Canada have certainly not reached the Utopian stage. There are few wholesalers and manufacturers who have not heard complaints from their retail customers, and in justice to the former it must be said it is not always their fault.

No doubt there are many times when wholesalers and manufacturers fall short of the mark in shipping goods. But just now cartage and freight conditions are not at all adequate. Delays are occurring, very annoying to the retailer, and yet the shipper has no control over them.

It is quite evident that the railways are not keeping pace with the growth of the country, as they do not seem to be able to handle the freight offering properly, with the result that considerable delay in shipments from wholesalers is absolutely unavoidable. Again, many wholesalers are sometimes in a worse position because they cannot get the goods shipped to them in proper time, and consequently cannot fill retail orders as promptly as promised, in all good faith, by travelers.

Wholesalers and manufacturers anxious to give good service, and who have done so under more favorable conditions with the railways, should not be censured before it has been proven they are the cause of delays.

ATTEND TO COLLECTIONS.

Money is becoming scarce and builders are offering the loan companies as high as 7 per cent. in Ontario and Quebec centres. This is the highest rate for mortgages that has been reached in Eastern Canada for many years. In the West, 8 per cent., and in some cases, as high as 10 per cent., is paid for real estate loans.

This condition is due to the rapid growth of this country, necessitating more building of stores, warehouses, factories and offices, the erection of dwelling houses to take care of the increased population and for people who, having made money, are housing themselves more luxuriously.

Scarcity of money is due, at the moment, to the troubles in Europe. The moment these are over money should become plentiful again, but as we have said, it is very hard to-day to get it at 7 per cent., on the best loans. It may reach a more acute position. This, however, should not affect wholesale and retail merchants. Business is excellent, money is plentiful among the consumers, therefore the wise merchant should devote much attention to the collection of all moneys due him; all overdue debts anywhere in Canada should be pressed hard for collection. Our readers who act on this advice will find themselves in a much better position than those who do not.

A Page of Value to the Grocery Clerk

The Clerk of To-day is the Merchant of To-morrow

Rural telephone systems are helping many a general merchant in country districts to increase business. Are all getting the benefit of their installation? If not there is room for the aggressive salesman to use his selling power to further the business of the store. There are times when the customer in the country will appreciate a call from the retailer or his clerk announcing the anticipated arrival of fresh fruit, meat, sausage, etc. She may have made some remark on her last visit that would lead the salesman to believe that she would be open for such goods; or knowledge of her husband's and family's likes may also be a sufficient justification to ring her up on the phone.

Where the Phone Assists.

Sales are largely extended by this method in the store of A. F. Choate, for many years a general merchant in Warsaw, Ont. His son, Harold Choate, endeavors at every opportunity to sell customers, outside the village, goods he thinks they will appreciate knowing about. In the summer, for instance, when new fruits are in, general merchants in villages and towns off the railway lines do not get fruit every day. Shipments may come twice a week, say on Tuesdays and Fridays. When one is anticipated Mr. Choate, Jr., makes good use of the rural phone lines.

"We are getting in some nice berries or cherries this evening and thought possibly you would want us to save you some," is one line of argument frequently used. Country customers appreciate this. They know that if all the fruit were exposed for sale it would probably have disappeared long before they had a chance to get into the village. The salesman in the store who knows his customers—as every country merchant usually does—by the exercise of a little judgment is in a position to tell when to approach a customer in a case of this kind.

Enlists the Neighbors' Help.

No one could be offended at a statement like this over the phone: "We have just got in several fine baskets of peaches; I see Bill Jones in the store and if you happen to want any I think I could send them up with him." People in the country are, as a rule, a friendly lot and do one another favors at the request of which many city folks would rebel.

During the winter the Choate store finds many a way to increase business by the use of the phone. Considerable new dried fruits coming in prior to Christmas, breakfast bacon, and sausage which arrive on Saturdays, are sometimes sold ahead of time. Salesmen in other country stores can easily do the same.

Ill Wind Blows Someone Good.

Mr. Choate also seizes every opportunity to turn a rainy day into increased business. In the fall of the year during plowing season rainy weather always drives the farmers into the village. They come to the mill or the blacksmith shop and call for their mail at the store. This affords a chance to sell them goods. The salesmen have plenty of time during week days to talk to farmers and by showing a personal interest in their work or their home life or by doing them a courtesy, can frequently interest them in goods which will likely be required.

The methods of the country merchant and his salesmen in knowing the characters, likes and dislikes of his customers might well be emulated by the salesmen in towns and cities. To this end every salesman should work to develop his memory. Know customers by their names and not simply faces. Know the street addresses of as many of them as possible. Show them that a personal interest is taken in their welfare. If all clerks followed this policy customers would appreciate the service and the fact that an interest was taken in them besides that of getting their money.

Know the Goods Wanted.

The practice of remembering names and addresses could be carried further to remembering varieties of articles customers always wanted. For instance, the clerk should not have to ask what kind of tea, coffee, etc., a permanent customer desires. To make sure he is correct, or that the customer hasn't changed her mind since last visit, he might say, "You always like Jones' tea or Brown's coffee, don't you?" Think of the effect a similar statement would make on yourself if a wholesale traveler were selling you goods. You would appreciate the fact that he had a knowledge of your business and would be inclined to accept suggestions from him. Same applies to selling behind the counter. Service begets confidence, so every clerk has here a means of selling more goods by gaining the confidence of store patrons through giving them a service equal to or better than they could secure elsewhere.

The thoughts to be emphasized in the above are, first, take advantage of the telephone and of the "rainy day," and second, build up confidence in the store by adequate service.

The defendant was found guilty and was fined $5 and costs of analysis, which amounted to over $30 in all."

Results From Attempting Extra Sales

Actual Instances Demonstrating How Easy it Frequently is to Sell Goods Which Customers Had Not Thought of Buying—Dealer Tells of Case Where Clerk Suddenly Made Himself More Valuable—Latent Salesmanship Ability Awakened.

There is no denying that the sale of goods can be materially increased in the grocery store by the use of proper methods. The fact is frequently demonstrated in every progressive store. The writer recently spent an afternoon in a country store and several examples which came to his notice brought home forcibly the truth of the contention that it is possible to create sales for goods over and above actual demand.

Early in the afternoon a man came in for 50 cents worth of wheat for hen feed. The clerk evidently knew something about the feeding of hens and as he weighed up the wheat, he pointed out that the store also kept corn and gave an instance of a man who had mixed wheat and corn with good results. The customer considered the idea as a good one, and before he left he also purchased 50 cents worth of the corn.

An Extra Sale of 25 Cents.

The same clerk waited on a customer who came in to purchase some "pickled back." She purchased half a one and was about to leave when the clerk mentioned to her that they had some excellent head cheese.

"Just wait till I show it to you," he remarked, and in a moment was back with a piece daintly placed on a piece of butter paper.

"Doesn't that look nice," he commented. "There is just two pounds in the piece. That will be 25c." The customer bought the piece.

The Other Half Sold.

"I will not put that half a back in the refrigerator just now," remarked the clerk when the customer had gone. "I'll leave it out on the counter and perhaps some other customer will buy it."

About the third customer after that incident was at the provision counter buying some cheese.

"How would you like some nice pickled back?" asked the clerk, holding it up so she could see it. "We are selling a lot of it. It is worth 20 cents a pound."

"How much is in that piece?" enquired the customer, and being weighed it was found satisfactory and purchased.

Not Turkey Without Cranberry Sauce.

The day in question was just previous to Thanksgiving. "Have you got your Thanksgiving turkey yet?" one customer was asked. She had.

"And I suppose the cranberry sauce is ready too?" he continued.

"Well, no it isn't. I really hadn't thought of it."

"That is one of the essentials you know," tactfully remarked the clerk. "Here are some excellent cranberries which we got in yesterday."

Further conversation developed into a sale of two pounds of the cranberries.

Appreciates Extra Sales Articles.

"Those articles which the Canadian Grocer has been running giving actual examples of how grocers have succeeded in increasing the demand for goods by using real salesmanship are certainly good," remarked a country merchant to the writer the other day.

"Not only do they encourage the merchant himself into putting forth greater efforts in this direction," he continued, "but if the clerks can be got to read them, they are so much more valuable. There is no denying that more goods can be sold if the attempt is only made but the problem is to get the clerks thinking so and attempting to demonstrate the fact. Actual examples of how salesmanship has been put into practice acts as an incentive to other clerks to try the same thing.

Values the Trade Paper.

"Unless there are other clerks in the store to set the example, or a chance is afforded to visit other stores, the only way in which the clerk can learn of the methods which are being used by others to increase sales is by reading the trade paper.

"I realized a short time ago that one of my clerks was giving little or no attention to increasing sales. He merely supplied customers with those goods for which they asked, which were for the most part staples and gave the smallest percentage of profit. I decided to try to work up his interest in salesmanship.

"I gave him a little talk on the subject as well as some actual demonstrations of how it could be done. I then gave him an article to read which outlined some methods that other clerks had used to increase sales. Apparently all that was needed was the match to start the flame. He became quite enthusiastic over the idea, began to make frequent attempts to sell extra goods, and has indeed been a much more valuable clerk since then."

This case demonstrates that there is often real salesmanship lying dormant in many a clerk which merely requires coaching to give it life. There are probably scores of clerks in grocery stores to-day who do not know what salesmanship means. They have never really attempted to sell more goods than customers ask for, have never been taught nor encouraged to do so. In many cases if there could only be something done to acquaint them with the possibilities in this direction, they would be much more valuable clerks.

It is without doubt much to the advantage of the merchant to kindle within the clerk the ambition to sell extra goods, to teach him by setting a good example, and to encourage him in every possible way to increase his salesmanship ability.

General Review of the Grocery Markets

Splendid Business Passing at All Centres in View of Christmas Season—Sugar Market Remains Steady—Few Changes of Importance—Dried Fruit Situation Firming—Primary Coffee a Little Easier.

QUEBEC MARKETS.

SUGAR.—The market rules a trifle steadier and little change is expected in price immediately. Some are inclined to think that a small decline might be possible if there were any imported sugars coming to hand, namely, English and Scotch refined, but as market is entirely bare of such stock, the refiners are in a position to maintain present quotations.

MOLASSES.—Following on recent advance market is still firm and must remain so till the middle of January at any rate. Demand then for new crop will set in and a lower range of prices should go into effect. Some are inclined to believe that in spite of the low price of sugar now ruling, prices of new molasses will be well maintained, but this view can hardly be endorsed for this reason. Sugar is low now and there is a tremendous new crop, so that a low range should exist for some time. Then molasses, being made from sugar, should be cheap, and taking the consensus of opinion on the matter it will, though a lower price than we expect might possibly be registered, should there be a very heavy demand and the molasses people be carried away with it and turn too much sugar into molasses and overflow the market. And they are likely to do so were they able to get a shade better price for molasses than for their sugar.

At any rate, fancy molasses must rule high, as above stated, and it is believed there is very little in local hands, what there is being held for fancy prices. The Maritime and Quebec Provinces are short, so it is easy to grasp the entire situation.

DRIED FRUITS.—Demand locally might be heavier but still there are some substantial orders being placed. Should the coast packers be more inclined to offer, there would be more activity.

Raisins of all kinds are firm, but demand is somewhat limited in spite of strength. Currants in bulk are moving but the demand for the cartons is heavier no doubt due to holiday call. Stocks are reported small for this time of the year.

The supplies of Persian dates are being reduced, there being a good demand owing to high quality of the goods which have come to hand. But it is likely that a lower market will set in shortly as new shipments en route will not arrive in time for Christmas trade, and some concessions will be made.

COFFEE.—There was more pressure on the coffee market during last week than heretofore noticed. Reports as to new crop are still conflicting, the latest putting estimate over a million dollars ahead of Government estimate. The growing use of substitutes has naturally something to do with keeping down the consumption of coffee, but roasters state that the amount of substitutes consumed is not very large as yet.

RICE.—Market is firmer following on disappointing reports from Japan and other producing countries. Trade locally is good, but country orders are becoming short, and it would seem that a slight reduction would bring about a strong replenishing movement. However, we do not look for this to come about yet.

NUTS.—Market for Tarragona almonds is easier this week in spite of the fact that supplies on spot are just about enough to meet the demand during holidays. Slightly higher market was expected, but shipments have just turned up which will fill up the hole in stocks.

Walnuts are considered somewhat high by buyers just now and it is likely that some concessions may be made later. Bullish advices have been received with regard to Sicily filberts and market here in sympathy is a shade firmer than last week, and a small advance may take place any time as holidays are on the small side.

BEANS.—More plentiful supplies of Canadian beans coming along have eased the situation somewhat and prices are not so stiff.

Some local firms are importing Austrian hand picked beans and there will be an even better sale for this grade if the Canadian market advances again, as the quality of the imported is good and the beans are splendid boilers.

There has been some prejudice against the Rangoon Indian bean, ever since it was imported about five years ago, when the Canadian market started soaring. They did not prove good boilers, at least the public said so, although it is believed that if they had been soaked properly before use there would have been little cause for complaint. The new importation is, however, selling well and as price to retail trade is from $2.00—$2.25 per bushel, there will be a nice business done in this particular line.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Toronto, Dec. 12.—The general feeling amongst brokers and jobbers alike seems to be one of strong optimism. "Best season we've had for some time," said one man, "and prospects for the whole year's business are just as good."

Up to the present time everything has pointed towards a big year and if the Christmas rush continues as briskly as it has for the past couple of weeks the climax should be well reached. Those firms which have practically completed their business for the year feel well satisfied with the progress made and feel inclined to rest until the beginning of the New Year.

Some lines such as fruits and nuts have not been delivered as soon as expected and coming late have caused considerable rush in jobbing houses. Several complaints have been made about this, but conditions are now being bettered.

Goods specially adapted to Christmas baking have been in great demand and profits on such lines have been large for all concerned. Retail merchants are featuring these lines strongly and stocks are being rapidly depleted. In many cases sorting orders are being sent in and brisk business is being done.

SUGAR. — The sugar situation is without any special feature this week. Locally the market is steady and there is exceedingly good demand and consumption for this season of the year. The estimate of the Cuban crop has been very greatly increased and now it is reported as 400,000 tons heavier than last year. Latest reports regarding the European beet crop give no change. The Russian crop estimate has been greatly decreased on account of frost. This is not likely to affect the world's prices, however, as they still have more than they can export. Latest estimates on the crop in Louisiana are still smaller; 150,000 tons or about 40 per cent. is said to be the decrease from last year's crop. Prices here are likely to run along at about the same basis. No advance is looked for.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES. — No change in price of corn syrups has as yet taken place here although a decline is expected. The very large crop of corn in the States has brought down the prices very greatly, and in sympathy with that decline a drop in price of corn products is looked forward to.

The Barbados sugar crop is much smaller than last season and this is having its effect on higher grade syrups and molasses. In these the movement is brisk and large shipments are being made. Fancy grades are scarce and stocks have been much depleted. It is not expected that any change will be made in price quotations till the New Year.

DRIED FRUITS.—Dried fruits of all kinds are being cleaned up. Demand owing greatly to the Christmas trade has been exceedingly heavy and an enormous amount of business has been done.

Prices on Californias are ruling higher. Whether this will affect situation here or not is rather doubtful as the rush of business is over for the year. Prunes, seeded raisins, apricots and peaches are firm and with more seasonable weather it is expected that demand will be much greater. On the coast apricots are closely cleaned up and the same may be said of peaches. A general feeling of firmness is felt in all coast fruits and in some lines an advance would not come unexpectedly.

The situation in Valencias continues unchanged. Stocks in Spain have been exhausted. In the future buyers will have to look to London for all Valencia raisins.

The evaporated apple market is slightly firmer this week. Really fine quality are scarce and prices are being maintained. Damp and dark quality are weak and hard to sell.

SPICES.—Peppers have been keeping high lately and ought to recede soon. No immediate drop is expected, nor is any great decline anticipated. A gradual recession will likely commence before long. Nothing new is reported in celery seed. Prices remain as quoted last week and probability is that the present price will be maintained for some little time. Lower prices will probably be struck early in the New Year.

Christmas has stimulated trade to a great extent and a good volume of business is being done. Wholesale houses comment favorably on the amount of business passing.

There seems to be tendency towards a decline in sago and rangoon, both of which are quoted at slightly lower figures. NUTS.—There is an excellent movement in nuts at present. Primary markets have strengthened somewhat of late and locally prices in some lines have been advanced. Formigetta almonds are now going as high as 16c., while shelled have been raised to 35 and 36 cents. Slight advance has been made in shelled walnuts. Filberts have been advanced to 12 and 12½ and Brazils to 14 and 15. The general tendency of the market seems upward, and owing to Christmas demand nuts have been moving out in good volume. Many supplies were late in arriving and there has been a great rush to get them out.

BEANS.—Canadian beans have been offering a little more freely this week. Good quality are not at all plentiful. For this reason the majority of the wholesale houses are still using Austrians as they are all hand-picked. Very little change is reported in the market situation.

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.—Many complaints have been made by jobbing houses with regard to lateness of deliveries. All lines of canned goods have been much delayed and coming along late has caused great rush in getting them distributed.

Christmas goods have to great extent taken place of canned goods for a time. The bulk of business has been along Christmas lines with the result that canned goods have been pushed to the background. Latest reports, however, report a good amount of business. A firm tone is noted in market prices.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

Winnipeg, Dec. 11.—Since Dec. 1 the weather has been decidedly more wintry and though by no means severe is still more like what is usually looked for at this time of year.

This seasonable change has greatly benefited many lines of business and has probably had less effect on grocery trade than on any others. Christmas and holiday trade has been satisfactory to wholesalers and retailers now expect their turn. Business of 1912 has been gratifying to all interested and prospects generally for 1913 are excellent. An ease up and clean up for balance of year may now be expected. In groceries proper there are no changes of account this week, but in supplementary lines such as flour, fruits and provisions there are advances and reduction of some importance as will be found in consulting price lists.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS

Halifax, N.S., Dec. 11.—Local grocers are now dresing stores and windows for Christmas trade. Business is fully up to average for season, and collections are fairly good.

Wholesale dealers are complaining of small receipts of beans and rolled oats, and the delay in delivery of shipments. There is a heavy demand for sugars, lard, and dried fruits.

There has been considerable increase in receipts of dairy butter this week, but the price remains unchanged. Eggs are still holding firm, and are not likely to go any lower. Demand for potatoes is unusually light for season.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, B.C., Dec. 11.—Principal change in wholesale prices is shown in the bacon department where there has been decided advance. Continuance of favorable weather conditions in producing districts keeps the egg market steady. Wholesale prices for eggs have not advanced. Potatoes are plentiful and same remark applies to other staples.

Local wholesale prices are appended:

EGGS.—Fresh, Eastern, dozen, .38; selected eggs, .34. Local new laid are practically absent and few obtainable are going at 65 to 75 cents a dozen.

BUTTER.—Local creamery, .35; Eastern townships,. prints, .32½; Eastern townships, solids, .32; New Zealand, prints, .33; New Zealand, solids, 32½.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, N.B., Dec. 11. — Business during past week with local dealers picked up in most encouraging manner and indications are that next fortnight will see good volume transacted. Orders are large and numerous but collections only fair, and will be until after the new year.

Ontario flour showed slight weakening this week, declining ten cents a barrel, and this seemed somewhat surprising in view of fact that there is such a limited supply of flour on hand either in this city or in other centres through the province. It it generally expected here, however, that with the Balkan situation relieved, flour in both Manitoba and Ontario patents will go still lower, as reports from the West indicate a great abundance.

General rulings on hennery eggs are from 40 to 50 cents but there have been sales at 60. Case supplies are fairly plentiful and much lower, than the "strictly fresh.' ' There does not seem to be much butter on hand throughout the country districts, or at least, if there is it is not being brought to market.

"That is a splendid column you have on 'Leaks in the Grocery Store,' " remarked a retail grocer the other day. "Let me tell you of a leak which I discovered some time ago and which must have lost me a lot of money before the discovery.

"We bought and sold considerable quantities of butter. The butter was bought usually twice a week from provision houses and placed in the refrigerator by the driver. When he came I always asked him how much he had for me, and of course it was always the correct amount. I took it for granted he left it all in the refrigerator, never suspecting any dishonesty until one week I ran short earlier than usual. Putting two and two together I calculated I was three of four pounds short.

"This set me thinking as to what was wrong. Next week when I phoned for butter I asked the clerk to count the rolls in the refrigerator anl let me know how many he sold before the driver arrived with the new shipment.

"After it came I figured how much we should have on hand and discovered on counting it that there were three pounds short. In the pile the driver left there was the correct amount so that evidently he had taken three pounds from what I had before and placed it with what he brought. This made the new lot correct but the former short."

Here was a leak say of five pounds of butter, or about $1.40 a week which in a year would make $72.80—a substantial Christmas present for one's self.

To H. C. BECKETT, Hamilton, Ont. Mr. Beckett was born in Hamilton on December 12, 1860. He began his business career as entry clerk with W. H. Gillard & Co., wholesale grocers, at the age of eighteen and has been continuously with the firm ever since. When twenty-one years of age he went on the road as traveler, covering the Northwest, for ten years. In 1897 he was admitted as partner and since that time has had charge of the selling staff and buying department.

MONTHLY LETTER INCREASES BUSINESS.

Stevens & Allan, Kamloops, B.C., as part of their advertising campaign, use a typewritten letter once a month to increase sales. This they send to every house in the city and mail it to people out of town in the surrounding district. The letter that was sent out in November dealt particularly with Christmas goods, introduction reading as follows:

"Dear Madam,—The Christmas season will soon be here. Let our store supply your Christmas needs. You will find us all ready to serve you with new fresh goods at remarkably low prices. Here is a generous supply of all the good things needed to prepare for the Christmas feast."

This is followed up by a list of prices on new dried fruits, figs, dates, nuts, almond paste, extracts and spices. Store news is also introduced. The November letter asks customers and probables to "please note that now we have two delivery wagons in use all the time and your orders will receive special prompt attention."

"We have got good results from it," said Mr. Stevens," and it always keeps us right before the people all the time. It lets them know we are always after their business."

Another Decline of 20 Cents in Rolled Oats

Scarcity of Raw Material No Longer Visible, Mills Being Well Supplied—Competition is Keen but There is Good Export Demand—Cornmeal Expected to Follow Rolled Oats—Drop in Flour in Winnipeg May Affect Eastern Prices.

Rolled oats have again declined 20 cents per barrel or 10 cents per sack during the past week. For some time the market was pretty bare of stock but now all the mills are filled up and competition is bringing down the prices. Business still keeps brisk. There has been good demand for export and this coupled with local demand has kept mills very busy. Many claim that for this reason the further drop in the prices of rolled oats was not warranted.

Great shortage is felt in package goods, and demand coupled with a further difficulty in obtaining premium crockery and boxes has done much to keep down stocks.

A decline of 15 or 20 cents per sack is expected in cornmeal before the end of the week. The corn crop in the United States has been very large this year and large shipments from the South expected any time now are likely to reduce prices here. Owing to declines in raw material and abundant supplies lower prices are likely to prevail throughout the season.

Great difference of opinion is expressed with regard to the future of flour. A reduction of 20 cents has recently been made in Winnipeg. While some claim that this will directly affect Eastern prices, others state that this reduction is simply in sympathy with recent reductions in the Eastern markets, also that decline is not general in the West but only confined to certain mills. At present business is brisk, and for immediate requirements slightly brisker than mills can handle easily. "The way the wheat market looks," said one man this week, "flour here is liable to decline 20 cents a barrel." At any rate the market is easier and a drop may be expected. Prices as quoted to-day are said by some mills to be merely nominal. What flour is actually selling at is pretty hard to state but with the large crop of wheat in the United States added to the Canadian crop the tendency at present at least is towards decline. Lower prices are likely to rule throughout the season.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR.—The market for spring wheat grades is still steady, the amount of business passing locally being fairly satisfactory. Country trade is not so good though, millers putting down the falling in demand to bad condition of roads. Now, however, that frost has set in there should be an improvement as stocks must now be fairly low. Winter wheat remains firm as Ontario millers are still holding back shipments.

FLOUR.—Wheat market here is weak and matters look as if wheat might still go down. "It's certainly low enough now for all the farmers are getting out of it," said one man this week. More Ontario flour has been offering of late and prices have been reduced about 10 cents by some houses.

Prices on flour are at present to a great extent only nominal. "Thirty cents off prices quoted would give what flour is actually selling at," was the remark made by one man in discussing the situation. Bakers are, of course, getting concessions in view of quantity purchases.

CEREALS.—Another week brings rolled oats down 20 cents a barrel or 10 cents per sack. Some mills claim that there was really no reason for this decline. There has been such good demand for export that it has kept all mills busy. Competition is given as the cause. For some time the market was bare of stock. Now all mills are filled up and chances are that lower prices may rule.

Prices on cornmeal are likely to be easier by 15 or 20 cents per sack towards the end of the week. New corn goods should arrive by that time and cause prices to fall. Lower prices are likely to prevail throughout season.

Lemons are Firmer; Grapefruit Cheaper

Former Firms up on Primary Market But Retailer Will Not be Affected—Grape Fruit of Fine Quality — Navel Oranges Down on Toronto Market—Potatoes a Shade Firmer—Good Crop of Canadian Onions.

The market in lemons holds firm. Across the line it is reported as slightly firmer than last week. "This is the first time I have ever seen prices raised on the primary market in December," said one man this week. But although prices have been advanced on the primary market it is not expected that the change will affect the retailer greatly if at all.

Shipments from the south have been delayed on account of bad weather. Supplies coming forward are of excellent color and quality and every opportunity is given the retail merchant to put some effort behind lemons and push sales.

Navel oranges are moving fairly freely in all parts of the country now. The crops in the south seem to have been considerably overestimated. Reports with regard to Southern California crops are now being confirmed. The crop there is large and many shipments are being made. But in Northern and Western California crop is light and much below early estimates. Quality seems to be not all that is desired. Desirable sizes are different to obtain although probably quality is average for season. But the whole crop seems to have run to large sizes and as result the quality is said to have suffered. Prospects look bright for the Christmas trade. In Florida oranges the market is a shade easier. The quality is good and former quotations are likely to be maintained on the better grades.

Quotations on the primary cranberry market have been advanced one dollar per barrel. This is likely to create a better demand for evaporated cranberries. The growing season is now over but supplies are in such quantities that dealers will get what they are asking without any difficulty.

Excellent quality in grape fruit is coming in from Florida. "Don't think I ever saw such fine quality," said one man this week. No change however is expected in the near future—perhaps not for two or three weeks anyway.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS. — Almeria grapes have advanced locally and are now quoted at from $6.50 to $7.50. All cheaper grades are now out of the market only the better qualities remaining; prices have somewhat stiffened.

Navel oranges have also dropped 25c. this week, and are now quoted at from $2.75 to $3.50. Larger supplies from the South, also slightly poorer quality have both had their effect on local prices.

It is not expected that these will decline much further however, and prospects for big holiday trade are said to be bright.

Cranberries have advanced considerably during past week. Quotations on the primary market have advanced $1, and here have been raised to $11 and $11.50

As predicted a few weeks ago grapefruit is again lower, having dropped still another 25c this week.

The Canadian onion crop has been fairly heavy this year. If cool weather keeps up demand for Canadian onions should increase as quality is such as to hold it up.

There has also been a large crop of valencias and in them the quality has been good. Higher prices are not looked forward to at present.

Advent Fish Trade on the Increase

Wholesale Dealers Finding Business Better Than in Former Years — More Retailers Going in for Fish—Storms on Eastern Coast Delay Fishing Operations—Cooler Weather Helping Business.

With the cooler weather setting in and with the help of the Advent trade, the fish trade has this week been increased considerably. Orders have been coming in briskly and for large quantities. Prospects for a busy month are looking better than ever.

Catches of some fish have been none too good. Bad weather on the eastern coast has interfered with fishermen and caused catches to be much smaller than was expected at this time of the year.

Quality in oysters seems rather harder to get than usual. There are always a great number of small growers who wish to get their stocks off their hands as early in the season as possible and pay little attention to the chances open to them if they would only hold on a little longer. Thus the better qualities tend to become scarcer as the season advances, and business goes more into the hands of the larger dealers.

QUEBEC.

MONTREAL.—The fish market is becoming more lively every day and a good volume of business is passing. In addition to the holiday rush, the general high cost of living is increasing consumption of fish. There is not much fresh halibut on the market but the frozen is in good condition and makes a ready substitute. Haddies and fillets are in strong demand.

ONTARIO.

TORONTO. — Colder weather during the past few days has stiffened trade in fish greatly. Advent trade has increased considerably and now orders are coming in at rapid rate. Conditions here are very good and prospects are bright for holiday business—brighter perhaps than for several years.

Local houses claim that this year the trade are ordering more intelligently and are booking orders further in advance, thus making it possible to fill orders much more intelligently and to greater satisfaction.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

ST. JOHN.— First week of Advent saw increased sales in fish. But supply for the most part was none too encouraging. Bad weather had interfered with work of fishermen, and the catches naturally had been lower than expected. Smelt are being received in good quantity and fine quality. There are no halibut in local market but it is expected that western stock will soon be arriving. Lobsters are not coming in the desired quantities and prices are ruling high. The same may be said of oysters which are well below the average in comparison with other years.

NOVA SCOTIA.

HALIFAX.—Last week was banner week for fresh fish trade of Halifax. Two hundred thousand pounds of fresh cod and haddock were landed here, the receipts being largest of year. These fish came at a most opportune time, just at the opening of the Advent season. Speaking on the situation of dry fish exports from Halifax, a local shipper says that the bad weather and unusually heavy shipments from Lunenburg and other outports has caused a decline of four or five dollars per cask for dry cod in Porto Rico and Cuba during the past fortnight and import quotations in the other West India Islands are falling off in sympathy.

Produce & Provisions

World's Butter Situation Generally Weak

Pastures Good in Old Country and New Zealand is Sending Out Stocks—Eggs Remain Firm With Cold Storage Stock Moving Rapidly — Situation in Provisions—Poultry Trade Not Over Brisk—Good Cheese Firm.

Butter markets are reported as slightly easier this week. Receipts have been heavy on all sides. Late mail advices from England speak of very favorable weather there and good pastures. The liberal supply of home butter resulting has caused a decline of several shillings per cwt. Large supplies are still coming in from New Zealand and are materially affecting the western Canadian market.

Several complaints have been made recently of receipts of creamery butter especially from the Eastern townships possessing a stably flavor. In some shipments this was so pronounced as to seriously affect prices reducing them to 28½

Strictly new laid eggs are scarce throughout all parts of the country and thus high prices are being demanded. Storage eggs bulk largest on the market. Many Canadian houses are said to have large stocks in storage in Chicago and other American points. "Unless cold weather sets in hard pretty soon," said one man this week, "our season is going to be very seriously affected." With colder weather cominug, receipts coming from the country would be very greatly affected and accumulations much reduced, thus adding greater strength to prices.

In Montreal and eastern provinces supplies are said to be none too plentiful. Even storage eggs are getting low. Thus unless colder weather sets in soon there is every chance that the large stocks in storage across the line will have some effect on Canadian prices.

Greater amount of business has been done in cheese during past week. The demand has run chiefly in low priced goods, that is November cheese. Octobers and Septembers are bringing in much better prices. Some holders of these refuse to offer them at all as they believe in higher prices later on after the lower priced goods have been worked off the market. That that time is not very far off seems to be uppermost in minds of many cheese dealers.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS.— A stronger feeling has developed in market for hams and bacon and prices have advanced ½ cent per lb. for general list. The increase can easily be accounted for—increased demand during season and limited supplies—just the old, old story. The market is still strong.

Dressed hogs are also in good demand and things are so far steady.

TORONTO.

PROVISIONS.—The local provision market has been fairly active for the beginning of week. Good volume of business is being done, especially for this season.

No change in price of smoked hams is noted this week. A considerable range of prices is given but the tendency seems to be in a downward direction.

Live hogs are coming in in larger quantities now and prices have dropped slightly. Latest quotations give $8 and $7.65 at local and country points respectively.

BUTTER.—The butter market is reported this week as a shade easier. Make and deliveries both continue heavy, almost too heavy for this time of the year. Locally milk supply has been short and some of the creameries have been selling their fresh cream. With this spell of colder weather conditions are likely to be changed materially, the make being greatly decreased. Prices have been maintained, however, and in many cases dealers have been quoting slightly higher since the beginning of the week. Dairy solids are scarce locally.

EGGS.—The egg market this week has been very dull. There are very few new laids on the market and these are bringing in as much as 45c per doz. Few of the wholesalers have pickled eggs at all. Those who have them are asking as much as for storage. But the whole market is full of storage eggs, and there are plenty more in Chicago and other American cities when the supply here runs out.

Value of an Exclusive Provision Window

A Port Arthur Display Containing Provisions and Associated Lines Which Proved Good Seller—Trim of This Character Should be Frequently Used—Appetising Display Easily Made.

The dealer who trims an occasional attractive, selling provision window these days, is getting good results. Few windows attract the housewife's eye more readily because of close alliance such a display has with the every-day dinner table.

An example of a good provision window—although the photograph does not do justice to the trim—is shown herewith. It was made by John S. Gibson, a salesman with the Mark Clavet, Dobie Co., Port Arthur, Ont. The window is in the shape of the letter "L" and faces on two streets.

The Lines Shown.

In the trimming of this window white cheese cloth was used on the floor to impress upon prospective purchasers that cleanliness was a feature there. Among the goods on display may be seen eggs; creamery and dairy butter; smoked and cooked hams; lard in 1 pound blocks, 3's, 5's, and 20-lb. pails; cream and Canadian cheese. Several pieces of breakfast bacon were hung up at the back of the window and tins of preserved table and peanut butter, and Camembert cheese, etc., were shown on the shelf at the top. The whole display was decorated with fresh green parsley and a price ticket attached to the various lines. A few show cards were placed here and there, such as "M. C. D. Co. for high-class Provisions;" "If it's Here, it's Good;" "If it's Good it's Here;" and "M. C. D. Co. for Pick of the Market."

An Appealing Trim.

Provisions, as intimated above, should be more frequently shown in the window. The appetising character of these goods, if the display is neat and clean, appeals to the housewife. They are all associated lines and often when a sale is made of one, the clerk can usually introduce and sell another without being offensive. A sale of bacon suggests eggs, and vice versa. If lard is sold for pie making, it is not too presumptuous to suggest cheese. Cheese with pie is a dessert meeting with more and more favor. There are a great many such combinations which the resourceful salesman will bring to mind at the proper moment.

Display of meats, butter, eggs, cheese, etc., shown recently by the Mark, Clavets, Dobie Co., Port Arthur, Ont. It was trimmed by J. S. Gibson.

Bank of Montreal, (Signed) R. B. ANGUS,
2nd December, 1912. President.

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

The President, Mr. R. B. Angus, then addressed the meeting as follows:—

At the shareholders' meeting in June last, you sanctioned a by-law permitting the extension of the Bank's capital in case it should appear to be required; this has since been approved by the Treasury Board. The recent issue of stock was also readily taken up, and your capital now stands at $25,000,000, authorized and $16,000,000 fully paid, with a Rest of like amount. This increase of capital did not come before it was wanted, as at certain seasons the circulation has exceeded the legal limit and we are liable to the Government for interest on the excess.

The well established business and good earning power of the Bank, together with comparative immunity from bad debts, enable the management to present a statement of results for the year's aperations which I presume will be considered satisfactory. The Directors were gratified to be able to add a Bonus of one per cent. on each half year, in addition to the usual dividend. The Directors have audited the books of Head Office, the cash and securities have been verified, ample provision has been made for bad and doubtful debts, and the amount expended on Bank premises has been transferred to Profit and Loss account.

We have again to report a year of universal and almost unbroken prosperity throughout the length and breadth of the land. The unfavorable conditions which retarded the harvesting operations and which it was feared would prove calamitous, passed without much injury in the western prairies, where the yield of wheat and other grains has proved satisfactory both as to quality and quantity. In the East, where the damage was perhaps greater, some compensation has been derived from good results in other directions. While the prices of wheat are much lower this year, the proportion of the higher, or contract, grades in the prairie provinces is very much larger. The better condition of the grain renders it easier to handle and to market, and the returns to the producer are quicker and safer. The estimated yield in the North-west may be set down as:

Wheat, 188,000,000 bushels, against 177,-000,-000last year.

Oats, 220,000,000 bushels, against 190,000,000 last year.

Barley, 31,000,000 million bushels, against 33,000,000 last year.

Flax, 130,000,000 bushels, against 8,000,000 last year. A conservative estimate of the value of the crop of the three provinces is given at $207,000,000 for the grain alone.

Partly owing to the good condition of the grain, already mentioned, but chiefly because of the excellent arrangements of the railways, the crop has been moved with unparalleled celerity; there has been no car famine and little talk of congestion, although there has been more grain handled. At the close of this season's navigation, there appears to have been a serious blockade of grain on its way to market, caused by insufficient facilities for taking delivery from the railway cars, and it may be that a greater number of vessels for grain carrying across the lakes and larger elevator capacity for temporary storage must be provided for future wants. Storage for grain has been much neglected in the prairie provinces; it would be advisable that granaries of moderate capacity to store at least a portion of the crop should be a feature on every well equipped farming establishment, so that there would be no occasion to rush produce to a market at inconvenient seasons.

Irrigation by which vast areas of arid land are being converted into most productive farms, is being prosecuted with vigor, and the model farms established by the Government and the Canadian Pacific Railway are more and more resorted to and much valued by the settlers.

The raising of live stock, which had been allowed to decline, will receive a great impetus from the high prices obtainable for cattle, and by the greater safety with which the business is conducted.

Immigration for the twelve months ended September 30th, has reached the total of 385,955 souls, or 37,322 over the previous year. Many are farmers possessing both experience and capital. These form a welcome addition to the population, where labor is so scarce and land so productive.

Loans to farmers, if sometimes slow, are well paid. Wages are high, as is the cost of living, but that condition may be greatly mitigated by the farmer, if only he will give his attention in some measure to mixed farming instead of relying upon importations of vegetables, meat and butter, and such like from the East or from the other settlements in the United States. In the most important province of Ontario, the harvest of wheat and corn has not been bountiful but rather under the average, in consequence of the wet and cold season, and yet we are assured that the farmers have done well, as few depend solely on the raising of grain for a livelihood, their resource being scientific and mixed farming, while dairying, produce and fruit have been more remunerative. As an indication of the diversity of farming in this progressive province, Ontario is said to own 6,000,000 head of live stock, horses, cattle, sheep, and pigs.

The mining industry of Ontario is important; the province ranks high with other countries in the production of silver and nickel, and her total output for last year, on the Bureau of Mines estimate, was $41,000,000.

The same general remarks as regards agriculture and the season's results will apply to Quebec.

Lumber and pulpwood have had a good year, last winter's cut being large and prices high. The increase in British prices, however, has been fully set off by material advance in ocean freights, with the result that the United States has been our best market.

The Maritime Provinces have had a fair year. Hay, which is an important crop, has been at least up to the average, and in many cases considerably above. Potato and other root crops, with a few exceptions, are reported good. The apple crop, although not equal to the abnormal yield of last year is a good average; the fruit is much appreciated and brings good prices in England and many young orchards are being planted.

British Columbia has in recent times been a highly favored province. General trade has been large and profitable; its lumbering operations, after languishing for some years have suddenly revived owing to the improved demand from the prairies, and to the better condition of commercial affairs among our neighbors, who, instead of being keen competitors, have become good customers for our products. There is a shipbuilding industry, although still in its infancy. The great fleet of vessels employed in the coastwise traffic and the larger steamships trading to the Orient give great importance to the port of Vancouver. Speculation is rife as to the advantages likely to accrue to that port and the western country generally on the opening of the Panama Canal.

Commercial activity has doubtless been stimulated by the impulse of active railway construction, which cannot be expected to continue on the same gigantic scale for many more years, but there will remain a more solid and enduring source of wealth in the vast forests of virgin timber which now cover the hillsides of mainland and islands.

Speaking of the Dominion as a whole, the trade and commerce of the country have been and promise to continue both sound and good.

The lumber business, on the Atlantic as on the Pacific side, shows much improvement, apart from the pulp and paper industry, which is specially adapted to this country, and has been very prosperous for some time past, but owing to the number of new concerns in operation, there is a tendency to overproduction with slackening demand and lower prices.

The coal and iron production has been on a scale never before equalled in Canada, although the latter, owing to delays in installing or completing the necessary plants, has fallen far short of supplying demands, especially in the matter of steel rails. The car builders have also been notably behind in their orders.

Agricultural machinery of the best and most modern type has been in great request, and the factories which supply every kind of electrical equipment have been unusually busy.

The revival of trade in the United States has had a marked effect on several of our manufacturing industries, relieving them from the competing shipments of surplus goods from that market.

The woollen mills are doing better, while an unusually good year has been experienced in cottons.

Old establishments have been fully occupied and a great variety of manufacturers are finding a home in Canada even in the middle and far West.

The wholesale distributing trades have everywhere enjoyed a good year. Groceries, Dry Goods, Clothing, Boots, and Shoes had an unusually large turn over, with good results. Accounts have been fairly well paid and bad debts have been comparatively small.

Transportation by sea and land, with its accompanying mechanical works, is instrumental in making large accessions of population to the cities.

Railway earnings have been phenomenal, but are far surpassed by the extraordinary outlays in building of new lines, in improving the old, in double tracking, terminals and equipment to provide for the ever increasing traffic.

By the judicious expenditure of the Dominion Government, the facilities for shipping are being much improved by dredging, and the supply of elevators and docks at the several important harbors on the Pacific and Atlantic coasts as well as on the Great Lakes.

The principal cities of the North-west and British Columbia exhibit a marvellous increase in size, in population and business activities. A phenomenal advance in these respects has also been made by some of the eastern cities, notably Montreal and Toronto. Some of the smaller towns in the West have perhaps bee ntoo ambitious in providing public utilities, and in rushing work that might better have extended over a greater length of time, but, after all, they are only anticipating future necessities. The municipal expenditures have consequently been large and hence the unusual amount of borrowing both at home and abroad. The comparative cheapness of money and the ease with which municipal securities could be placed in England, has misled some borrowers, who refused to accept the prices offered earlier in the season, but it is feared they may have to submit to higher rates of interest on future transactions.

Industrial loans and investment are quite out of our sphere, but I take this opportunity of saying that it is much to be regretted that some of these offered on the London market were of a distinctly questionable character, unsound or highly speculative, and calculated to reflect injuriously on Canadian credit, while others, and doubtless the great bulk of them, are both safe and promising, and offer to the investor an opportunity of participating in the prosperity of the country. I fear it is useless to ask certain promoters to be more careful as to the class of security they offer, but intending investors may be more discriminating.

With the rapidly developing country and the Government pledged by guarantees or otherwise to liberal expenditures, the building of railways, the improvement of harbors, and other works of a national character, Canada must necessarily be a large borrower for some time. But with nearly 8,000.000 of people, vigorous, intelligent and resourceful, with immense treasures in virgin forests, mines, fisheries, and above all, with a large area of unoccupied fertile land, Canada can better afford than most countries to mortgage her future to a moderate extent, and her credit in the money markets of the world must always stand high.

Canada is well prepared to absorb and utilize the immigrants that every season seek her shores or cross her boundaries. The laborer and the artisan are most welcome, and the farmer, with or without capital, will find opportunities at his hand. We have excellent and prosperous Banks, well adapted to the requirements of the country, which offer facilities to farmer and tradesman in every town and village, and I may remark, in passing, as convincing proof of the country's progress, that their deposits in ten years have mounted up from 350 millions to over 1,000 million dollars.

We possess a system of transportation that is almost complete, although being daily added to—a large mercantile fleet of steamers on river, lake and sea, and railways that not only link the various provinces together, but also give a service to the newly opened country better than is to be found in any other country similarly circumstanced.

In New York and other points in the United States, where the Bank is represented, business may be described as in a normal and sound condition.

The ample revenues of both Provincial and Dominion Government indicate a season of great prosperity for the country at large.

The exports for the twelve months ended 30th September, 1912, amount to $351,952,292, an increase of $49,601,798 over the corresponding period of last year.

Imports for the same period amounted to $616,842,090, an increase of $120,004,619, giving a revenue from custom duties of $102,695,974, or an increase of $23,903,849.

I have in a cursory manner touched on these various topics, reviewing the condition of the country and indicating the great range of interests the Bank has to consider in the course of its business, and on whose fortunes the prosperity or otherwise of the Institution in a great measure depends.

THE GENERAL MANAGER.

The General Manager, Mr. H. V. Meredith, spoke as follows:—

The President has covered the ground so fully in the address he has presented to you to-day that little is left for me but to explain the changes which have taken place in the balance sheet during the year, and to add a few remarks in connection with financial matters affecting the Bank which have not been touched upon.

Since our last Annual Meeting, the Treasury Board of the Dominion Government has sanctioned an increase in the authorized capital of the Bank from $16,000,000 to $25,000,000 thus permitting of a further issue of stock from time to time as circumstances may, in the opinion of your Directors, render desirable.

Turning to the general statement of which you have a copy, you will notice the Paid-up Capital has increased during the year from $14,887,570 to $16,000,000, and the Rest from $15,000,000 to $16,000,000. From the net earnings, transfers have been made of $1,000,000 to Rest Account and Contingent Account respectively, and a balance of $802,000 is carried forward at credit of Profit and Loss Account as compared with $1,855,000 a year ago. A bonus of 1 per cent. was paid shareholders on June 1st and December 1st over and above the quarterly dividends of 2½ per cent.

Deposits not bearing interest show a small decrease, occasioned by the withdrawal of a large deposit of a temporary nature which appeared in the statement of a year ago. Were it not for this fact, we would show a gain in these deposits of $2,000,000. Interest-bearing deposits show an increase of $6,400,000. Part of this increase is of a temporary character, but it is gratifying to find that the ordinary savings deposits have grown in a highly satisfactory manner, notwithstanding the withdrawals that have taken place for investment and otherwise.

Turning to our assets, you will notice that "Current Loans and Discounts in Canada and alsewhere and Other Assets" are $2,200,000 less. This decrease does not represent a curtailment of our current loans in Canada, which are in reality $1,600.000 larger than a year ago, but a reduction in our current loans elsewhere. Investments in railway and other bonds are $1,600,000 less, affected by realizations, and balances due by agencies of this Bank and other Banks show a net reduction of $3,800,000. The increase in our call loans in Great Britain and the United States is accounted for by the various changes mentioned above.

I think you will agree with me that the statement is a strong one, but it is well that the Bank of Montreal should always be able not only to meet all the legitimate demands of its clients, but at the same time to provide for any exceptional calls that may be made upon it to promote the general welfare of the country.

Business generally has been exceedingly active in Canada during the past year. Good crops, notwithstanding a wet season, have been reaped, and all manufacturing industries have been kept fully employed. Wage earners are in receipt of good wages, and labor, in many sections, is difficult, if not impossible to obtain. With an increasing immigration, a soil producing a large surplus of food products without serious failure over a comparatively long term of years, the assurance of a vastly increased production as the area of unoccupied arable land is brought under cultivation, and other great natural resources awaiting development, one cannot but be an optimist in regard to the future of our country.

Owing to this ever increasing and rapid development, we must for many years be borrowers from the British Islands as well as foreign countries. Just now, there is undoubtedly a feeling in some quarters abroad that Canadians are spending too lavishly and over-borrowing to an extent which may later on prove burdensome to us. In this connection, our adverse balance of trade, our socalled real estate boom, etc., are cited. While I do not share these pessimistic views, there can be no doubt that if we are to maintain the preference which Canadian securities have so long enjoyed, a caution at the present time is more essential than it has been for a long time past, and it is clear any ill-advised move on our part, any undue speculation, or the flotation of doubtful schemes which may have the effect of causing distrust abroad and so prevent the free flow of capital into Canada, cannot but have a serious effect on business generally, and bring about a check to our prosperity. It must not be forgotten that there are countries other than our own seeking capital, and offering possibly quite as attractive terms, and that once a stream is turned in another direction, a long time may elapse before it returns to its former channels.

Money has been in strong demand in Canada during the year, while in London and New York, in which outside markets we are chiefly interested, the rates continued low until September, since when more stringent condition and higher rates have prevailed. With buoyant trade practically the world over, and with, as far as we can judge, a probable continuance for some time of such conditions, money is not so readily obtained. Those seeking capital should have regard to existing conditions and also to the fact that borrowers cannot hope to name their own terms.

The increased cost of living, and the reasons therefor, form a subject much discussed the world over, and commissions of enquiry are now engaged in seeking the cause. I mention the subject because of its effect on the Bank's net earnings, owing to the necessity of our having to increase our fixed charges from time to time as a result of bringing up the salaries of the staff to a point which may be considered a fair and reasonable one for the services rendered. The cause for the enhanced value of all commodities is difficult to determine. There are no doubt a number of reasons for it; among them, the largely increased output of gold, resulting, to a great extent, from the more scientific treatment of ore bodies. The higher standard of living by all classes is also a factor; but I am of the opinion that the root of the matter may be found in the fact that the percentage of population engaged in production of foodstuffs is not increasing in the same ratio as is that of our manufacturing wage earners and salaried officials. This view is supported by figures showing conditions in the United States, where the number of farm families indicates an increase of only 11 per cent. between 1900 and 1910, while the artisan and clerical classes have increased practically 30 per cent. in the same period. A similar condition of affairs obtains in Canada as regards the five eastern provinces, and while, in our North-west, the rural population is relatively large and grows apace, mixed farming has not yet been generally resorted to. In this connection, it may be interesting to note that the exports of dairy products from older Canada to the newer Western Canada were this year not less than $3,000,000, while New Zealand and the United States supplied these commodities to the extent of an additional $1,000,000.

I have noticed at different times, in certain newspapers, paragraphs calculated to give the impression that the Banks in this country are not affording the farmers the financial assistance to which they are entitled. Such statements are erroneous. There are in Canada some 2,500 bank branches, the great majority of which are located in towns and villages supported by the surrounding agricultural population, and no unimportant part of the business of the Banks is derived from this class. As for this Bank, I may say that our loans to farmers and small traders amount to many millions.

I have alluded to the adverse balance of trade. In the fiscal year ending March 31st, 1912, the imports for consumption in Canada were of the value of $521,000,000, and the exports of domestic products were $290,000,000, showing a balance against the country of $231,000,000, undoubtedly a very large sum. In the five months ending August 31st last the excess of imports over domestic exports was $130,700,000, showing an even greater ratio than in the preceding year. The gap between imports and exports is not likely to be soon closed; not, indeed, until our manufacturing industries have expanded to a point when the home market can be supplied fairly well within the country, nor until the large demand for foreign goods, arising out of the construction of permanent works, railways, etc., is satisfied from domestic mills. Meanwhile the gap is bridged by foreign loans, by investments of capital in Canada from Great Britain and by money brought in by immigrants. It is, therefore, all the more important to guard against unpropitious circumstances tending to lessen the confidence of British and foreign lenders in Canadian securities.

The delayed revision of the Banking Act will shortly be submitted to Parliament. The present Act has been developed with the growth of the country. It has served its purpose well, and I feel confident that under the direction of the able and experienced financier who now occupies the position of Finance Minister no radical changes will be entered upon lightly.

Why Don't You do Like Him?

H. J. Buckley, of Moberly, Mo., who bought a No. 84 Kingery Corn Popper with Peanut cylinder extra for $94.00.

He writes that the machine is doing fine. I pay $40.00 per month rent and have four people employed, and machine pays rent and help.

Now to get at his profits in this little, big business, let's do a little figuring. Rent $480 per year. Four clerks at $5.00 per week each, $1,040, total $1,520, or 15 times the cost of his machine. Did you ever add anything to your business that beats it? In some cases they have earned more net profit than that of the business of the entire store. Furthermore, its attractiveness turns the eyes of passersby upon your store. Often it is the agent of sending them in. It helps the business in the store. The Kingery Peanut Roasters and Corn Poppers are of many kinds and styles—Steam, Electric, Spring and Hand Power. Ranging in price from $8.50 to $350.00. Sold on liberal instalments.

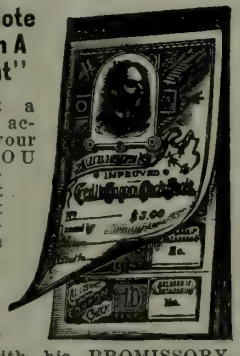
A Promissory Note Is Better Than A "Book Account"



When you let a man "run an account" he has your goods and YOU HAVE NOTHING, except YOUR account of his indebtedness. When you use

ALLISON Coupon Books

you START with his PROMISSORY NOTE, and HE starts with the understanding that you mean business. Allison Coupon Books save thousands of dollars a year for merchants like you.

HOW THEY WORK

A man wants credit. You think he is good. Give him a $10.00 Allison Coupon Book. Have him sign the receipt or note form in the front of the book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with $10.00 — no trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten cent coupon, and so on until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10.00 and gets another book. No pass books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes. Allison Coupon Books are recognized everywhere as the best.

THE BANNER MONTH

December in most lines is the most important season of the year. This is particularly true of products that are seasonable at this time.

During the season of "Good Cheer," the public are in a very appreciative mood and observe little details more than at any other time.

There is no time that the merchant should be as careful of the products he sells nor is there any season that his caution will yield him as great a return.

When people are holidaying, they are not looking for cheap wares, but desire that which will afford the maximum comfort and satisfaction, hence quality should be your "WATCHWORD."

Of all the holiday products, oysters are the most prominent. You accordingly should be most particular in choosing your source of supply. In looking for a quality proposition in any line, you go to a house that makes a specialty of that particular line.

We are Canada's exclusive oyster house, devoting our entire time and attention to the one thing we know best. Oysters are no side line or secondary consideration with us.

Kindly let us have your holiday booking now.

TWO TELFER DAINTIES

If you have a demand for a class of wafer that is different from the rest you will find either of these two lines just what you want.

Introduce them to your most particular trade and you will never need to push them. Your customers will do that and do it well.

Don't forget that a pleased customer is your best advertisement. Send for price list.

For You

But you don't have to confine your sales to the 10c size.

There's the tin of ten—retails for 25c—a splendid seller all over Canada.

And remember, that it takes no more time and effort to sell a tin of 50 or 100 OXO CUBES than it does to sell the 10c size. There's more money in the big sizes for you.

Besides, customers buying the larger sizes, show that they are using OXO CUBES right along—show that they like OXO CUBES—show that they are coming back to your store for more of the big sizes.

So stock all four sizes of OXO CUBES. Every time you sell at 10c or 25c tin remind the customer than you have OXO CUBES 50 and 100 to the tin, and that these sizes are packed specially for family use.

By the way, have you plenty of the 50 and 100 cube tins? We will ship by return express, if you are out of these sizes.

Window display in the McKenzie Co.'s store at Kelowna, B.C., during the Irrigation Convention there some time ago. Cut at the top is that of Geo. S. McKenzie, the managing director of the company.

Business Maxims of a Western Grocer

Methods Followed by the McKenzie Co., Kelowna, B.C., as Laid Down in Platform of the Manager—Buy Well, Sell at a Profit and Watch the Leaks, He Says —Has Had Wide Experience as Delivery Boy, Clerk, Manager and Proprietor—System in Managing Different Departments.

There is a great amount of food for thought in some of the business methods of the McKenzie Company, retail grocers, Kelowna, B.C. A few minutes' conversation with Geo. S. McKenzie, the managing director and moving spirit of the business will reveal these:—

"All goods about which we get a complaint are cheerfully replaced, although sometimes it is not fair to us."

"We endeavor to always wait on customers promptly and with a smile."

"The only way to make the grocery business pay is to buy closely as possible, sell everything at some profit at least, and watch the leaks."

"The delivery counter is separate from counters where customers are served."

"One man is responsible for the delivery of goods; another is responsible for the warehouse; another for the interior arrangement and the windows, and still another for the shelving conditions.

"Everything that goes out of the store is charged to something. Brooms are charged to expense for instance; broken eggs, returned canned goods that have become spoiled, lost articles and all replaced goods are charged to expense; donations are charged to advertising, etc., etc."

"No accounts are opened without referring them to the manager, when our terms (30 days) are clearly made known. If a customer overlaps, he or she, is given a further reminder and we find that often a personal word will bring results. But we would sooner lose a customer than have one who won't pay his bill."

"The chief motto is Quality and Service."

"Maxims for Mr. McKenzie and the clerks include 'Courtesy costs nothing;' 'Every article sold must bear some profit;' 'Every customer is entitled to full weight and nothing more;' 'The McKenzie Co., first, the customer second, myself last.'"

Enthusiasm and Experience.

One could not run across any more enthusiastic grocer than Geo. S. McKenzie and few could have wider experience. The conclusions he has come to and the methods he has adopted, have been applied to his business only after having seen them used by others or observed where others might have used them to good advantage.

The story of his travels from the time he left his home at Watford, Ont., until he purchased his present business a short time ago is most interesting. His father was the late Hugh McKenzie,

M.P.P., and he was brought up at Watford, where he attended the country school.

Began Business Life at 19.

Mr. McKenzie's first work was in Howden's general store, Watford, which he began at the age of 19 in April, 1891. This store is now being operated by the Howden Estate and managed by a son of the late proprietor, Noble B. Howden. His first duties were as delivery boy. Later he took a position behind the counter, leaving there in 1897, as he thought at the time "a full-fledged groceryman."

Mr. McKenzie's first jump was a long one. He landed in Rossland, B.C., where he worked for two years in the employ of Hunter Bros. In the spring of 1899 he went to Greenwood to assume charge of the grocery department of the Hunter-Kendrick Co. A year later he was in the employ of Thos. Hardy in Phoenix, B.C. For a time during the two years he remained in Phoenix he ran a stationery and cigar tobacco business. But his heart was in the grocery business so he "pulled freight" to Vancouver, where he clerked for a time but later went back inland to Vernon, B.C., where he had charge of Megan's grocery for a year or so.

Into Business for Himself.

In the fall of 1904, Mr. McKenzie, with a partner, went into the grocery business himself, as McKenzie & Martin "The Grocers." After four and a half years he sold his interest on account of ill health and "after taking things easy," a few months, he went to Kelowna, B.C., as manager of the grocery department of the Thos. Lawson store. Here he remained until Thos. Lawson, Ltd., decided to dispose of their grocery department. Mr. McKenzie then formed The McKenzie Co., Ltd., and took over the business on August 1 last, which brings the story practically up to the present time.

Moved in the Night.

"The method of moving," he says, "was swift and strenuous, as we moved the entire stock (except that in the warehouse) between 7 o'clock p.m. and midnight—a matter of five hours. We opened for business in the new store next morning at 7 o'clock."

Mr. McKenzie does all the buying and price marking and handles the finances. Every morning he checks over the previous day's sales. No poor quality stock is carried and the best trade is catered to, as is well evidenced by the attractive appearance of the window display shown on the opposite page. This was arranged for the "Irrigation Convention," held some time ago in Kelowna. The windows and newspaper advertisements are run in conjunction with one another. "This idea," stated Mr. McKenzie, "we got from the Canadian Grocer, and we try to follow out a a good many other suggestions which appear in The Grocer." A couple of years ago he won a prize in The Grocer's Christmas window competition, as well as a prize for one of the best articles on "Best methods of Handling Confectionery in the Grocery Store." A number of his newspaper advertisements have also appeared in The Grocer.

In Association Work.

He also takes part in public affairs, being a member of the Board of School trustees in Kelowna. He was made a member of the executive of the B. C. Retail Merchants' Asociation a year ago and also acted as secretary-treasurer of Merchnts' Association of Kelowna until he went into business as manager of the present company.

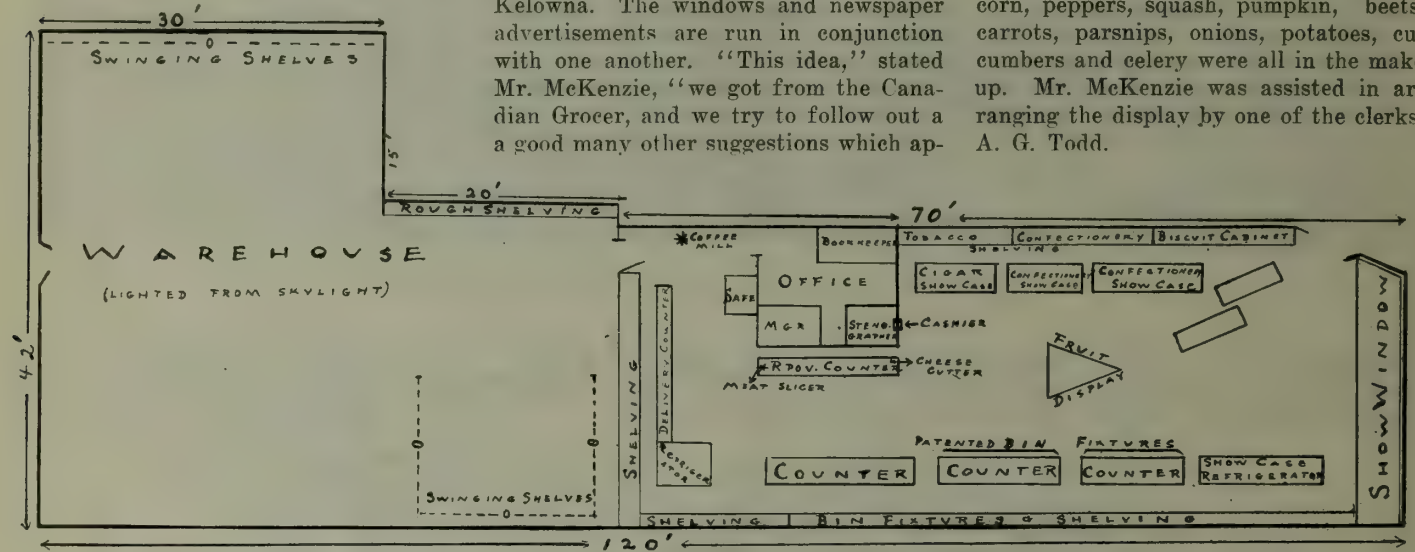
Mr. McKenzie sees a bright future ahead for the business. He is optimistic and enthusiastic. Railway construction is progressing and fruit farming is taking on new life. During the first year in business he anticipates a turnover of $125,000.

How Window Was Dressed.

The window shown herewith contains fruits and vegetables. Because the camera was focused on the sign to the right, the left hand side does not show up detail very distinctly.

The three boxes of apples shown in the centre were from trees fifty years old—the oldest in the district. The boxes on the slant contained apricots and plums, while the bottom was made up of peaches, nectarines, fancy apples, all ticketed and priced. Sprigs of juniper with berries on were used also across the back of the window. House plants were also arranged to the rear with price tickets on them. The store does quite a business in house plants.

The left hand side was all vegetables, with tickets and prices. An enormous cabbage was placed in the middle. Green corn, peppers, squash, pumpkin, beets, carrots, parsnips, onions, potatoes, cucumbers and celery were all in the make up. Mr. McKenzie was assisted in arranging the display by one of the clerks, A. G. Todd.



Ground plan of the McKenzie Co.'s store, showing counter and department arrangement. Office and doors are so arranged that manager can sit in the office and see whole store, as well as rear warehouse door. All city delivery is made from rear door.

BEWARE OF WOMAN'S TONGUE.

"What are eggs to-day, Mr. B.?" asked the prospective buyer.

"Eggs are eggs to-day, madam," responded the grocer.

"Oh, is that so; glad to hear it, for the last I got from you were chickens," was the retort.

RECEIVES MUCH BENEFIT FROM IT.

Dear Sirs:—Please find enclosed cheque for $2.00 for year's subscription for THE CANADIAN GROCER. I think the improvement in the appearance of the paper, as well as the contents, have added greatly to its value. Trusting that your paper may continue to prosper, Yours truly,

Work For the Week Prior to New Year's

New Year Family Reunions Mean That Holiday Season is by No Means Past With Christmas Day—Window's Value Should be Taken Advantage of—Goods That Will Sell Well—Effort Should be Made to Sell off All Exclusive Holiday Lines—In Spare Moments Prepare for Annual Inventory.

There is little time left for planning so far as Christmas trade this year is concerned. The season is well on to an end with only three more business days left, but in these three there will be a large amount of business transacted.

The retail grocer should not, however, overlok the fact that there will also be a large amount of business passing between Christmas and New Year's Day. While by no means equal to the present week, there will be considerable. To get as much of this as possible and wind up 1912 with a good turnover should now receive attention.

Cater to New Year Celebrations.

Every retailer knows that a great many families celebrate New Year's. There are belated home-comings and reunions which must be fully recognized, and the aggressive dealer will take full advantage of this.

Window displays should not be allowed to deteriorate in selling power between the two holidays. A good New Year's window will attract attention. There are many goods which can be shown with profit. These include much the same varieties as the Christmas window—raisins, both baking and Malaga; currants, peels, nuts, shelled and in shell; mincemeat; plum puddings, confectionery, fruit wines, flavorings, icing sugar, oranges, Malaga grapes, fancy biscuits, etc.

There is no reason either why the grocer should not get a good share of the New Year gift business. He has every opportunity because he has first chance with the public. The grocery store is visited by everyone and besides he has the goods which will appeal as a gift.

Baskets of Fruit as Gifts.

One attractive New Year gift is a basket of fruit. Many dealers make a big feature of this. Samples of the various kinds of fruit in stock are used, such as oranges, bananas, table raisins, Malaga grapes, apples, grapefruit, and the more fancy varieties that may be sold. These baskets can be arranged in different sizes with different prices. The more fancy the basket, the better seller it will, of course, be.

At the same time these baskets of fruit can be used effectively in window trims. These could be shown and price cards used on the various signs. For instance, "What Better New Year's Gift—only 50 cents," or "A Gift for a Sick Friend," would undoubtedly bring results.

Many Give Boxes of Apples.

Another splendid seller as a New Year gift is a box of apples. The majority of wealthy persons have less fortunate relatives and friends, and such a suggestion appeals readily to the man who wants to remember a few of those who cannot buy such luxuries themselves.

Get Share of Confectionery Trade.

Confectionery should also be placed to the front the final week of the year. Attractive boxes of candy form a big share of the year-end gifts and the retail grocer might just as well have his share of the passing trade. A showcase showing samples can be used to good advantage. Confectionery must be shown to be sold. The majority of manufacturers turn out particularly handsome boxes, but if these are left in the case in the unpacking room few will be transferred into money. By displaying the boxes so that the covers may be readily seen, good results are bound to accrue.

Move Out Exclusive Lines.

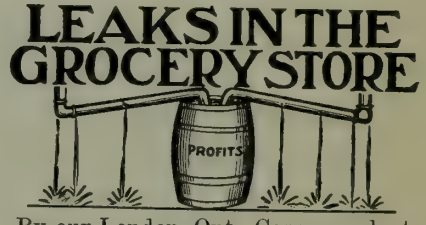
As pointed out in a previous issue great care should be taken to see that all exclusive holiday lines should be sold. No crackers, stockings, fancy biscuits or confectioner in yuletide containers should be on the shelves after the first of the year. As soon as Christmas day is over, an inventory of all these lines is taken by many grocers to see just where they are at. If supply is low probably the full retail price can be secured but if large there should be a sacrifice.

Dead stock on the shelves is a leak that should be avoided, and if care is not exercised in exclusive holiday lines, this condition of affairs is almost sure to exist. Best time to get rid of them is when the holiday spirit is still in the air, as there will be quite a falling of the mercury in more senses than one when New Year's day passes. This stock should not be carried into the annual inventory.

A good plan to dispose of these goods is to give them over to one clerk and make him responsible for getting them out of the store.

Get Ready for Taking Inventory.

If, too, business is found to be a little slack between Christmas and New Year's, the staff could improve the time by arranging the stock so that taking the inventory would be made easier. After the Christmas rush it is necessarily scattered. By rearranging the shelving and placing goods in their proper place, weighing contents of containers, etc., etc., the work of stock-taking after the New Year breaks in upon each, will be much simplified.



By our London, Ont., Correspondent.

In regard to leaks in the grocery business which your valuable paper has taken up lately, your correspondent was asked by a prominent officer of the Retail Grocers' Association to bring up the matter of shortage of weight in 20-lb. pails of certain kinds of lard. He claimed he weighed several pails and found them from one-half pound to one pound short weight.

He has written to two firms who put up the goods and in one case got an answer, that the lard, being hot when put into new pails, was absorbed in the wood. Nevertheless, that does not help the grocer out any.

The merchant referred to above thinks that all grocers should weigh everything possible and charge back all shortages. It is time well spent, he asserted.

Editorial Note.—More leaks are wanted. Jot them down as you find them and send them to The Grocer.

The Christmas Number of the Farmer's Advocate, London, Ont., which has just come to hand is a particularly large and attractive one. The cover design is a handsome one in colors, the artist cleverly symbolizing the spirit of the Canadian northland. Many of the articles breathe the spirit of Christmas and winter and are particularly adaptable for reading in the farmer's home.

GREETINGS TO THE TRADE.

AS the candles of the old year flicker and we are about to turn over another leaf in life's book, there comes the time when we all want to remember our friends and forget our enemies. It is the happy Christmas season.

The Christmas holiday spirit is now in the air; it is seen in the expressions of those we meet and in the busy stores laden with the good things sought at this, the most festive of all the festive seasons of the year. On Tuesday next, before the midnight hour is tolled, the busy grocer will have laid down his work to accept a well earned rest with his family on the greatest of all days—Christmas Day.

The Canadian Grocer at this time, therefore, tenders with all sincerity a hearty handshake to all its readers and hopes they will have a right "Merry Christmas." And as each is about to turn over the 1912 page of his business, the one best wish is made that his measure of success during the coming year will be overflowing; and may the tinkle of the New Year bells announce to each his entry into a new era of progress and happiness.

UNFAIR COMPETITION.

Newspaper despatches tell us that the Housekeepers League of Philadelphia, Pa., are doing wonders in the matter of lowering the price of selected storage eggs. It is reported to be selling them at from 6 to 20 cents a dozen cheaper than has heretofore prevailed.

Undoubtedly much success has attended the League's efforts, 18,000 crates or 540,000 dozen having been sold at 24 cents. Sixty selling stations have been organized and 240 more are contemplated.

It would be interesting to follow up the course of the Housekeepers' League to see what their ultimate success will be. Were it selling bricks or even soap, where deterioration would cause no trouble, one might venture the opinion that it would stay in business as long as it cared to. But the handling of eggs is a different problem. Out of the 540,000 dozen, how many contained bad eggs and therefore dissatisfaction? Where complaints were made, what would the League do? Would it replace the loss or money-back to the complainants?

In a short time we may expect the League to dissolve. Yet in the meantime look at the harm it will have done to the legitimate trade. With scarcely any overhead expense, any such body could sell cheaper than the trade. Anyone who knows anything at all about business will realize that. But the rank and file of the citizens of any city will not understand why the retailer should charge more for eggs than the Householders' League. This causes them to distrust the retailer without just cause. It is therefore unfair and should not be tolerated by the authorities of any city.

DIVIDING AN INSOLVENT ESTATE.

A Grocer reader sends in a typewritten copy of the assets and liabilities, list of creditors, amounts owed, etc., in an insolvency case of recent occurrence in Western Ontario, in which are one or two facts well worth mentioning.

The total assets of the merchant were $515.86, which were exactly taken up by the total of the preferred claims. The balance was simply a big zero to be divided among the unsecured creditors whose claims totalled $2,398.41, the unsecured creditors therefore receiving no cents on the dollar.

In the list of preferred claims are some interesting items. The solicitor's bill of costs "including taking out order for examination of insolvent before Clerk of Court at ———, and attending on examination, etc.," $140.28. The assignee's fee amounted to $130, and disbursements with respect to Deputy Clerk of the Crown, subpoena, etc., $24.67.

The total of these three items is $294.95—the amount collected by lawyers and other officials in winding up the estate—leaving a balance of $220.91 for the other preferred claimants.

It is a peculiar "coincidence" that the total amount of estate was entirely eaten up by the amount of preferred claims. Looks as if someone had apportioned the balance to himself after the other preferred claimants had been paid off. An inference, too, that might be drawn is that it costs a lot of money to fail these days. Everyone should avoid it.

TWENTY-FIVE DOLLARS IN PRIZES.

In the rush of the holiday trade, retailers are urged not to forget having their Christmas windows photographed and entered in The Canadian Grocer's window dressing competition. As has been previously stated, photographs must be sent in not later than Dec. 31. This gives everyone plenty of time between Christmas and New Year's to have the photograph taken, if it has not been secured beforehand.

In sending in the picture be sure that a description is also forwarded, so that the judges will be able to follow the construction closely. Any number of windows may be entered, provided, of course, they are all trimmed by the grocer or his clerks. They must be "amateur" displays. Those displays which do not happen to be among the six winners, but which have merit in them, will be reproduced in The Grocer during 1913. Twenty dollars will be divided among the trimmers of the six best, there being three in each class.

To enter in the ad-writing contest, all that is necessary is to clip the Christmas advertisements from the newspapers and send them in. See that the borders of the ads. are not cut. A short article giving the ad.-writer's view on the value of advertising, what should be taken into consideration in writing copy, etc., should be sent in with the clippings. Winners of this contest will receive $3 and $2 respectively.

WHAT THE BOOKS SHOULD SHOW.

Now that the year is drawing to an end, dealers will soon be closing their books for the year and taking stock. In view of this contingency, a number of merchandising problems suggest themselves. The totaling up of profits for the twelve months will provide the merchant with material which he can use to good advantage. He will find just where he has stood for the year and what he will be called upon to do next year in order to equal or better the records established in 1912.

An important point is to determine what percentage the overhead expense bears to the total turnover. By finding out each year what the percentage has been, the dealer can decide how to regulate expenditures for the year ahead. If he finds that the percentage is bigger than he deems compatible with a continued profit, he applies the pruning knife to judiciously reduce the expense to a proper basis. If, on the other hand, he finds that the percentage has been low, he will probably feel justified in putting in improvements and otherwise paving the way for a bigger turnover.

In closing the books, it is important also to go carefully into the matter of accounts. Where business is done on the credit basis, it is necessary each year to write off a certain number of bad debts. Accounts still deemed collectable should be kept carefully in sight. Closing the books for the year should be the prelude to an active collection campaign.

BATTLES WON BY FOOD SUPPLY.

That the matter of food has greater importance in a war than fighting strength, has been well exemplified in the present Balkan uprising. Prominent military men have expressed the opinion that what drove back the Turk was not so much the artillery and bayonet of the Bulgar, but the inefficient commissariat of the Turkish army.

Whereas the Turks were unable to obtain supplies sufficient to sustain their health and strength, the opposing armies on the other hand, had always their food up in the thickest of the fight.

It has been claimed that the pen is mightier than the sword, but in the Balkan War, it has been demonstrated that once hostilities break out, the sword is surpassed by the food supply.

We must eat to live, and the retail grocer the world over is the great distributing channel through which the consumer is reached. Years may come and go, but he will always be a necessity. He cannot be done without—his calling is perpetual.

HOW LIVING COST IS RUNNING.

A report from the Department of Labor, Ottawa, indicates a slight advance in living cost during November over the previous month.

The index number of wholesale prices rose approximately one point in November, standing at 134.3, as compared with 133.1 in October and 129.4 in November, 1911. The advance was due chiefly to higher prices for fish, textiles, hides and leathers, fuel and lighting, while Ontario grains, dairy products, metals, lumber and miscellaneous building materials were slightly upward, with Western grains, cattle and beef, paints and oils, downward.

As compared with the same month last year, grains and fodders, fruits and vegetables, were lower, while animals and meats, dairy products, fish, textiles, hides, leathers, boots and shoes, metals, fuel, house furnishings, and miscellaneous commodities were higher than in 1911. In retail prices, coal, wood, butter and eggs were upward; potatoes also were higher in Ontario, while there was a downward movement in flour, sugar, prunes and evaporated apples.

DEVELOP THE COUNTER TRADE.

There is a good deal of truth in the remark made the other day by an old grocer, that in order to make any kind of a success in the grocery business one must have a good counter trade. The telephone was all right in its place, he argued, but it should be the aim of every grocer to get the buyers into the store.

The retailer knows that with an inviting store where goods are carefully displayed he can sell a good customer more than over the phone. What the eye sees attractive the mind wants.

This is the principle upon which the large department stores work. They know that a customer with money in the store is worth two at the end of phones. Their object is, therefore, to bring the people to their establishment.

Why should not the retail dealer do the same? By following similar methods he can accomplish similar results. The greatest of these is advertising. The department stores run large advertisements in the daily papers; they frequently state that such and such an article can only be secured by a personal call; they advise shopping early; they make attractive interior displays and they arrange goods so that they must be seen. So that when the customer calls for the article advertised, other goods bearing perhaps much greater profits are sold. The counter trade means much to them.

Grocery Stock Turned Over Twelve Times

An Interesting Item Referred to in Inventory—Dry Goods and Shoe Stock Slower—Dealers Business Statement Analyzed — Looks as if Money Were Being Made But Several Details Are Lacking—What Application of Brain Power Means to a Business.

*By Henry Johnson Jr.

Here is another partial statement:

Saskatchewan, Dec. —, 1912.

Henry Johnson Jr.,
Dear Sir:—

My stock inventory,

Crockery and hardware .....$	328.90
Shoes	874.70
Rubber	202.09
Dry Goods, Staples and Notions	3,247.15
Groceries	593.69
Flour and Feed	1,643.11
Total ....$	6,889.64

Bought in last year, total, $31,821.86 Freight, express, postage and all such included in cost of goods purchased.

Sold in last year, total $36,788.10

About $600.00 more taken out from stock for my own use, no track. Same would show better profit.

My total expense to date including everything, clerk hire, taxes, insurance and interest; delivery and all, $11.72.

My own family trade averages $50.00 per month, is taken without charge, so virtually my sales would be $600.00 more per year, but on the other hand, I don't figure my own wages in expense at all. I work for nothing except the family trade.

My grocery stock I turn full twelve times a year.

My flour and feed the same.

Dry goods stock I turn only 1½ times a year.

Shoe stock only 1¼ times a year.

Are those last two items turned sufficient to pay? and is my business prospering proportionately to business in general?

Please pass your opinion on above.

Considerable Information Lacking.

That is something of a conundrum and, from the figures given, it may be answered or solved in two ways:

1. If the stock at this time is the same as the stock at the beginning of the year and if all other resources are equally stationary, the expense account, as given, would indicate that there had been a net profit of $4,954.52 over and above this man's living. But such is not the case, I am sure; so we have

2. If all other factors are stationary, the expense account intended to be written as $1,172 will show net profit of $3,794.24, or more than 10 per cent., inclusive of owner's salary and exclusive of owner's living expenses.

But who can tell anything about it? We have no point of starting and know nothing of the condition of the business at the beginning of the period covered, so all we can draw is the most general kind of inference.

Conclusions From Knowledge Supplied.

IF everything is stationary, as aforesaid, then we have some very interesting figures in this statement:

1. Let us add the $600 to sales, and we shall have sales of $37,388.10.

2. Then let us correct that $11.72 to $1,172 and add the proper expense for the owner's salary, out of which he will, of course, pay all his bills, including those for his household supplies from his own store. As the fair ratio for this size of business may be said to be $75 per month for management, this man's salary will be $900 per annum. The total expense will thus amount to $2,072.00.

3. The first result from this computation is the percentage of gross margin. This is certainly modest at 14.88 per cent.

4. Next, we find that the expense of doing business is the ridiculously low one, of 5.54 per cent., and then we finally find that

5. The remaining gain, properly called net profit, is $3,494.24, or 9.34 per cent. on sales.

Some Items Missing.

All of which is, you will remember, predicted on the supposition that all factors are absolutely the same this year as last year at this time. That is something so exceedingly unlikely to be the case that we shall have to hold all this in abeyance until we know more about the actual condition. Then we shall have to inquire whether

1. Interest on Investment has been charged off.

2. Depreciation is taken account of.

3. Rent is figured against the business.

Probably we shall think of other things when we hear further from this correspondent. Meantime, I can only generally discuss the remainder of his letter.

Should He Drop Dry Goods and Shoes?

He turns his dry goods stock only 1½ times annually. But my idea would be to study conditions before I should pass judgment on the advisability of cutting out dry goods. Same applies to his shoe stock. If the conditions indicated by his statement and my analysis are really founded on fact, then I should advise making no change, or at least, no sudden change, for here is a business altogether too profitable to fool with. I should advise to let well enough alone in this case.

I hope to have further details from this man. If he is as well off as these meagre figures would indicate, he can well afford to let us in on more details. If he is not so well fixed but has overlooked something, then he wants to get right, so should surely write. In any event, therefore, I hope to hear from him.

Knowledge Better Than Guessing.

The one thing to remember always is, that the "way" is of secondary importance to the fact that we make money. If this man is so well fixed as he may think he is, then it makes very little difference whether he charges himself a salary or not. In fact, if I were running a neat, profitable little business like that, and had it so well in hand, with things under my own eye all the time, I do not think I should worry much about keeping very strict account with myself. It is very necessary that one study one's business in all details and learn all its peculiarities fully. This, so one may actually KNOW and not guess. But after one is satisfied that he knows what is going on and is backed up by the solid evidence of actual money earned and in the bank, why, it matters very little how he "figures."

I am saying this to show that I am not a mere stickler after form. Forms are intended to aid us to find out things. Systems are to help us to ends without swamping us in detail. Study of business problems is necessary that we may digest those problems. After we have arrived at the destination, however, after we have reached the clearing and know it really is the clearing—why, then, we may cut out a lot of mere routine just as we should lay the compass on the shelf and forget it.

A Man With a Big Business.

I have before me another letter, this time from a man who does not want to be even remotely known, and I hesitate to refer to it, even slightly less what I say may lead to his being recognized; but part of what he says reminds me of Burgess of Colorado Springs. The similarity lies in his suffering from poor health, so that he is physically almost incapacitated, yet, like Burgess, he does a big business.

*The writer of this article is one of the most successful dealers on the continent. He has spent almost 30 years in the retail grocery business and is well equipped to answer questions and smooth out difficulties with which others may have met. If a special request is made names of inquirers will be omitted when their letters are printed for discussion.

The big, fine merchant at the "Springs" went to his present home as a desperate sort of "last resort" matter. Whether he had to do something to make a living or whether he simply worked from choice, I do not know. I only know that he has one of the finest and most prosperous stores on the continent.

Depends on Accurate Accounting.

This man is a good example of Getting Others to do Your Work; and he does it in a way that the Saskatchewan man could not do at all; for Burgess must have lots of accurate accounting and well developed system, or he could not delegate all the detail the way he does; and if he did not delegate the detail, he could not do the business at all. What then shall we say? That Necessity is again the Mother of Invention? That because the business must be carried on and the man cannot do the work himself, he actually finds and devises ways and means such as he probably could not devise if he really had that physical strength which we all commonly regard as a blessing? And is it not funny to note that the man who loses his strength so that he has to delegate work to others often thereby rises above the common run of merchants and enjoys pleasanter, while also more profitable, work than the man who is a horse for muscle? Why are not these examples instructive to us all? Why do we not learn that brain work is the most important work we can do, so that we put up with the less efficient work others will do for us, but which, even so inefficiently done, is yet more profitably done for us than we could do it for ourselves because of the freedom it gives us to do better things?

Efficient Managers Wanted.

I find this present correspondent hard up for really good, efficient managers—men who will take the load off his shoulders and handle the selling end of the business. If good men see this and are interested, I shall be glad to have them write to me—even if they have, some of them, written before. The business in question is large and prosperous. It offers plenty of field for the best that is in any man and nobody need think that he will not find suitable employment for the highest talents he may own, if he takes up this work.

So if YOU happen to be the man who is looking for a bigger, better field, write to me.

Stratford Merchants Favor the Market

Would Urge All Citizens to Support it Strongly—Resolutions Passed in Favor of Scale Inspection and Garnishee Law Amendments— Officers Elected For Ensuing Year.

Stratford, Ont., Dec. 18.—At the last meeting of the local Merchants' Association many questions in connection with the retail trade were discussed and officers for next year elected. Following are the new officers:

President—Angus McDonald.

Vice-President—Jos. R. Myers.

Secretary-Treasurer—Frank Macklin, the present secretary, George Trow, declining re-election.

Executive—The officers and D. M. Ferguson, P. J. Kelly, J. H. Gordon, W. J. McCully, C. N. Greenwood.

The officers were authorized to sign a petition seeking reform of the Weights and Measures Act so that merchants would be relieved of the inspection fees. Even where scales had passed tests without a flaw, vexatious inspection fees were levied, which was thought unfair.

Want Garnishee Law Changed.

Another petition was sanctioned seeking amendment to the Garnishee Act whereby the exemption would be reduced from $25 to $10. At present, it was pointed out, with the almost universal practice of weekly payment of wages, the Garnishee Act offers little security to creditors.

Irregularities in respect to closing on week nights were discussed and the suggestion was advanced that the labor interests might help to bring about reform by not patronizing merchants who persisted in keeping open nights when the great majority were closed. They could thus aid in securing better hours for storepeople. The view was that regular closing should be general.

The association agreed on procedure for the holiday season, recommending keeping open from Monday, December 16 to Christmas eve.

Proposed New Market Discussed.

A discussion ensued on market matters in view of impending opening of new market. The suggestions resulting may be crystallized into the following: Some are talking as if the new market was established, which was not the case. The market should be a favorite meeting-place of producer and customer, and it is to be demonstrated how these two classes will turn out. Hopes were expressed that the attendance from both sides would expand, and that townspeople who had not been in the habit of attending market would begin to do so in the new building. The first thought should be to establish and build up a fine market, and to go easy on regulations at first, so as to give no chance for friction. Earlier marketing, more like they have in Berlin, should be encouraged, and by that means the hour for merchants to be admitted to buy could easily be made 10 a.m. The Stratford present practice is carried too far on in the day, giving a late trend to Saturday trade which affects the whole day.

In Berlin, too, the prominent men of the town frequent the market, as well as the wives, etc.; that habit should be developed here. The 11 o'clock hour for merchants to be admitted to buy might have a bad effect, as that hour is late for effective selling afterwards. The new market might get a black eye if a large supply of stuff came on, or if buyers were few, and they had to peddle produce around afterwards or take it back home, again.

Raising Standard of Quality.

An object of the market should be to raise the standard of quality. It should be remembered that merchants often helped to make the price, in order to induce people to come to town; hence merchants are interested in making the market a success, altogether apart from any question of their own admission to buy. It was suggested that all merchants should join to boom the new market in their newspaper advertisements, and urge all the people—absolutely all, of all classes—to go on the market.

No formal resolution was passed, but Messrs. McDonald, Ferguson, Dingman and Greenwood were appointed a committee to interview the Hall and Market Committee and also to confer with a view to co-operation with the new Ratepayers' Association.

FIREPLACE WINDOW.

Mulholland's grocery window on Yonge Street, Toronto, contains a very attractive Christmas display in fireplace design. The mantel is cleverly built up with packages of sugar, leaving an open fireplace. Stockings hang from the mantel laden with Christmas gifts, while on the floor of the window dried fruits, nuts, candy and other Christmas goods are shown. The window has attracted the attention of crowds.

United Interest in Garnishee Amendment

Merchants in All Lines of Trade Found to be Signing the Petition—Its Importance Referred to by J. S. Bond at Grocers' Meeting—Municipal Politics in the Air—Grocers Backing Up Two Candidates—Election of Officers at January Meeting.

(Special Staff Correspondence)

Toronto, Dec. 19.—Among the questions up for discussion at the regular meeting of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association on Monday night were again those of the proposed amendments to the Scale Inspection Act and Garnishee Law. President R. W. Davies occupied the chair.

Petitions Meet with Favor.

W. C. Miller, secretary of the Ontario Retail Grocers' Association, stated that the petitions sent out in regard to the above mentioned amendments were being largely signed. They were coming in from all parts of Ontario, some grocers being so enthusiastic that they clipped the resolutions out of The Canadian Grocer, passed them around among other merchants and sent them into the secretary. Not only were grocers signing the garnishee amendment petition, but they were getting merchants in every line of trade to do so.

Mr. Miller has both petitions neatly printed and will send copies of them out to anyone for the asking. His address is 632 Yonge Street. Copies of these were distributed among the members present, who were asked to get the signatures of the dealers in their district.

Difficult to Garnishee.

J. S. Bond spoke enthusiastically on the great need of lowering the amount of garnishment. "Now we cannot garnishee a delinquent," he said, "unless he has more than $25 coming to him, and with wages paid usually weekly or semi-monthly, it makes it very difficult for us to obtain our own. If we can only get the $25 limit reduced to $10—and we can if everybody helps—it will give us a chance we never had before. Merchants of all classes should boost it and there should be no lack of money when the time comes to present this petition to the Ontario Government."

Election Talk Strong.

Municipal politics were ventilated to a considerable extent, led by Frank Johnston. The Association is naturally very much interested in municipal affairs, having one of their number, David Bell, in the aldermanic field for ward 3. Mr. Johnston and Mr. Bell announced that prospects were splendid for election. The Association is getting out circulars to be distributed among the trade endorsing Mr. Bell's candidature and pointing out why he, as a business man, is needed in the council to look after the affairs of business men.

The candidature of Controller Maguire, who is in the field for re-election, will also be endorsed by the Association in the circular above referred to. The members remember how he helped them in their fight against the peddler calling out his wares on the street and which comes to an end at the first of the year. Controller Maguire was present after the meeting last night and gave an address. He was, he said, in favor of legislation fair to the retail trade and he could be counted on to support the dealers in all things which were legitimately theirs. He also favored a reduction of the business tax.

J. J. Ward also addressed the Association in view of his candidature for a controllership. He pointed out that the merchants of Toronto paid 43 per cent. of the taxes and that they therefore should be represented better in the councils of the city. He referred to the unfairness of the present system of business tax, favoring a reduction from 25 per cent. to 10 per cent. He also claimed that the affairs of the city were sadly bungled during the past year.

On December 30 there will be a meeting in St. George's Hall, Elm Street, in the interests of David Bell.

Nomination of officers took place, several being named for each office. Nominations will be concluded at the January meeting, when the election will also be held.

Discrimination Against Grocers Alleged

Members of London R. G. A. Claimed that Miller Was Selling Flour to Flour and Feed Men Cheaper than to the Grocers—Committee Dealt with and Settled Question Satisfactorily—Council's Pure Food By-Law Considered.

London, Ont., Dec. 17 (Special).—At the last regular meeting of the London Retail Grocers' Association the most important discussion took place on the consideration of the Pure Food by-law now being considered by the City Council. A copy of the by-law was read by the secretary and was discussed clause by clause, several amendments being suggested. The most objectionable features to the grocer were the suggested sizes of fruit baskets and berry boxes, and the covering of goods, the by-law not being explicit enough.

As the bill was only in the committee stage with the city fathers, a committee from the Association was named to confer with number three committee of the City Council and have the alterations suggested. The committees have since met and conferred with each other and arranged everything satisfactory to the Association.

The committee consisted of Pres. Diprose, Thos. Shaw, G. B. Duke, H. Fountaine and J. A. McFarlane.

Charge Against a Miller.

Another matter taken up at the meeting that caused a lot of discussion was the complaint that a local miller was selling goods to exclusive flour and feed stores for ten cents per hundred less than to grocers. It was claimed that those merchants sold their goods for ten cents per hundred less than the grocers. Many of the grocers on the outskirts of the city claimed to sell as much feed as the flour and feed merchants complained of but had to pay more for their goods, which they thought was unfair. A committee consisting of Pres. Diprose, Adam Palmer, W. J. Dalgliesh, Thos. Shaw and J. A. McFarlane was named to wait on the firm mentioned and try to settle the matter.

A meeting was later held and the contention was arranged satisfactorily to all parties.

After the business of the meeting was concluded the Excelsior Male Quartette gave several selections for the entertainment of the members.

Certain packers of peas in the United States are already out for future contracts on 1913 peas, despite the fact that deliveries of 1912 peas have just been completed.

Freight rates on flour from Canadian ports are from 30 to 50 per cent. higher than they were a year ago. Space in Montreal vessels was sold out weeks ago and that from Maritime Province ports has been nearing that condition. This state of things causes the flour trade to be seriously handicapped, when otherwise it would have a very favorable opportunity in Europe.

Methods of Preventing Window Frosting

The Time is Now Close at Hand When This Problem Will be to the Fore With Every Merchant—The Best Method is to Have Cased-in Background and Air Vents at Edges of Window—This Equalizes Temperature Within and Without.

Although the weather in most parts of Canada has been unusually mild up to the present time, it will not be long before the rigors of winter are felt in full force. A question which faces every merchant, therefore, is the providing of some adequate means to prevent the frosting of his store windows.

The difficulty is a serious one. When the windows become frosted up, their usefulness for display purposes ceases for the time being. Business slackens appreciably, for a store with windows covered with frost does not present a very inviting appearance.

The reason for the frosting of windows is that the temperature varies inside and out. When the air inside the window is warmer than the air without, moisture forms and is turned into frost. If the temperature suddenly moderates, it is not uncommon to find store windows with frost on the outside, due to the fact that the air without has become warmer than the air on the other side of the plate glass.

Equalizing Temperature.

The correct theory to work upon in preventing frosting is to keep the temperature equal on both sides of the glass. This has been done in many cases by placing ventilators at top and bottom of the window. This results in a current of air circulating throughout the window and keeps the temperature sufficiently equalized to have the desired result. There are certain disadvantages connected with this plan, however. Dust and snow is allowed to blow in and the goods in the window suffer accordingly.

The most essential feature of any scheme to prevent frosting is to have a cased-in background. This keeps the warmth of the store from reaching the glass. It is much easier to keep the temperature equalized when the windows are cased right in.

An Original Idea.

A splendid and original idea to ventilate the windows has been embodied in the new store of the Mills Co., Hamilton. Small openings have been provided above the plate glass in the sides of the windows. The openings are about 6x16 inches and are hinged at the top. They swing inward and are operated from the interior of the windows. They can be kept open long enough to keep the temperature within the windows on a par with conditions outdoors. At the same time, being on the sides, they are not exposed to the street and do not admit dust or snow in quantities. A further advantage is the fact that they are not seen from the outside and do not detract from the appearance of the store front.

In view of the loss which frosting of windows entails on the merchant, the question of the proper construction of store fronts becomes one of much importance. Theoretically, what is needed is to reduce the humidity and thus prevent moisture from condensing on the glass surface by means of the circulation of cool, dry air. In a general sense, this sums up the situation, but several conditions must be taken account of.

First, the windows must be enclosed from the store proper and the enclosure must be quite air tight. Second, air from the outside must enter the windows near the edges and at the surface of the glass, in order to make the circulation greatest at the glass surface. Third, a sufficient amount of dry air must be admitted, in order to absorb the moisture.

These conditions have been borne in mind in the construction of modern store fronts, where vent holes are provided in the metal sash.

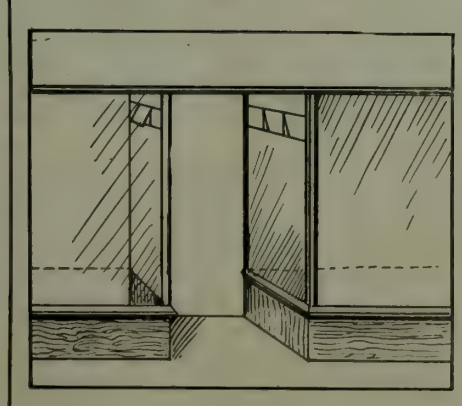
Other Remedies.

Numerous other remedies have been attempted with varying results. Rubbing the glass with glycerine has been tried but this method always leaves the glass smeared. A solution of alcohol or methylated spirits is sometimes used but the disadvantage here is in the expense involved. The cost is too great to make this method feasible for general use.

Other merchants have adopted the plan of keeping "foot lights" along the window base, gas jets being kept lighted to melt the frost off. This method is an expensive one and it does not always produce the desired results.

Still another method is found in the use of double windows. By placing a second plate of glass with narrow sash either inside or outside the window, it is possible to keep the surfaces of both clear from frost. There is the disadvantage, however, that the view into window is somewhat obstructed by the double glass.

Summing it up, the best method is to have the background closely cased in and the store front provided with air vents to allow the free circulation of cold air on both sides of the glass.



Method adopted by Mills Company, of Hamilton, to prevent frosting of windows—The openings in sides admit cold air and the temperature is thus equalized.

ALLEGED BUTTER TRUST INDICTED.

Chicago, Dec. 18.—The Elgin Board of Trade, popularly known as the "Butter Trust," and the American Association Creamery Butter Manufacturers, were attacked by the federal government in a civil anti-trust suit filed here to-day for the dissolution of both concerns.

Sweeping charges of a conspiracy to fix arbitrarily the price of butter in the interest of big manufacturers and cold storage concerns and to the detriment of the farmer, other small producers and the consuming public are made by Attorney General Wickersham against the trust, which he would destroy as a violation of the Sherman law. Butter making, it is claimed, has drifted to the large manufacturers, the natural increase in volume of business has been curtailed, and prices to the people of the country have been enhanced, especially during the winter, by the operation of the "conspirators" according to the government's petition in equity.

A. Mr. Ballantine urges the above standard for the purpose of using sugar bags that are at present useless as soon as the sugar is emptied, because of their size. They will hold 75 pounds of potatoes. It is also argued that delivery boys could handle a 75-pound bag of potatoes much easier than a 90-pound bag. The matter was laid over.

So far as membership was concerned they had now between 600 and 700 members. The improvement of the mercantile agency service was under consideration, and if necessary the whole subject would be brought before the whole of the members.

TOTALS OF SALMON PACK.

Victoria, B.C., Dec. 18.—During the past year 996,576 cases of salmon were packed at the various canneries of British Columbia. This pack included sockeyes; spring, red and white; chums, pinks and cohoes. The total pack on the Fraser River was lower than that of the Skeena this season, the northern canneries putting up a total of 254,256 cases. The Fraser came next with 173,921 and Rivers Inlet was next in line with 137,697. On the Naas 71,162 cases were put up.

The pack of sockeyes was, as usual, the largest, the total being 444,762 cases, of which 107,784 were put up on the Fraser; 122,884 on Rivers Inlet; 92,498 on the Skeena; 36,037 cases on the Naas, and 94,559 cases at other points. The pack of Cohoes was next to that of sockeyes with a total of 165,309, of which 39,835 cases were contributed by Skeena canneries, 28,574 from the Fraser, 12,468 from the Naas, and 11,010 from Rivers Inlet, and 73,442 from outlying canneries.

The other totals were: Pinks, 247,743 cases; red springs, 62,345 cases; chums, 58,325 cases, and white springs, 18,092 cases. The Skeena canneries led largely in the pack of pinks and red springs.

Raisin Market Firmer---Beans Easier

Both Californias and Valencias Are Stronger—Importations of Austrian Beans Tend to Ease the Market—Wholesalers' Business Running Slack as Retailers Have Now Little Time to Buy—When Books Are Closed Season Will Likely Show Up Well.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS:—
California Raisins.—Higher.
Valencia Raisins.—Firmer.
Shelled Walnuts.—Higher.
Beans.—Easier.

Toronto, Dec. 19.—A general easing off is noticed in the markets this week. The rush for the jobber caused by the holiday trade is now practically over. Sorting orders are still coming in for many lines of goods but the main bulk of business has been transacted for 1912. Now is the time when the retailer gets his chance in the hustle and bustle of the Christmas trade.

Prospects for a big year in the grocery business look even brighter than ever. Jobbing houses are already beginning to take inventory and will soon find out exactly how they stand on the year's business. Very general satisfaction seems to prevail throughout.

SUGAR.—The sugar situation is without special feature this week. Difficulty is being experienced in getting enough raws to last out until the new crop comes in. Latest reports state that the Cuba beet crop is still very favorable and 41 Centrals have already started to grind. The European beet crop, according to latest despatches, is rather more unfavorable. The estimate has again been reduced 145,000 tons but even at that it is ahead of last year. While the European crop estimate has been reduced the Cuban crop is the greatest ever seen, so that the general tendency is towards steadiness in the market. Prices this week continue unchanged.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES.—Prices here are low with very little chance to rise. Last year there was a big sugar crop in the West Indies and again next year a big crop is anticipated. The Barbados crop on the other hand is smaller than last season. A good movement is being felt in higher grades syrup and molasses and in these, prices are likely to be maintained.

The corn crop this year has been a record one and this will no doubt have a rather depressing effect on all corn products.

DRIED FRUITS.—Some lines of dried fruits, more specially peels, are well sold up and supplies are becoming very scarce, even to a shortage.

Seedless varieties of California raisins have all advanced in price about ½ cent. Stocks in these, too, are being well cleaned up. Valencia raisins are also reported as higher this week.

Prunes even in the smaller sizes are hardening up and quite a change is noted in medium sizes. Large sizes are practically off the market. Peaches and apricots are very scarce and are daily becoming almost unobtainable.

Evaporated apples in fine quality are scarce and very hard to get. Quality on the whole market is said to be somewhat better than last year.

All stocks are now pretty well cleaned out. A few sorting orders are still coming in but for 1912 most of the business has already been transacted.

TEA.—Very little change is noted in the tea market this week. Market continues quite strong, neither a drop nor yet a stronger tendency being experienced. Buying has been quite heavy this week on account of there being no sale on the London, England, market either next Tuesday or the week following, owing to the holidays.

COFFEE.—Little or no change has taken place in the coffee market during the past week. While there were several slight fluctuations, the general trend of the market remains unchanged. New crop coffee coming in now shows an improvement over last year's shipments with regard to quality. Prices are likely to remain stationary till after the middle of January.

CANNED GOODS.

Toronto.—Still some complaints are being made about slowness in delivery of canned goods, also about the condition in which shipments have been received. The situation has now been very much relieved, however, and those whose demands were most urgent have been supplied. Although canners have delivered only 60 per cent. of the tomatoes there are still lots to follow. Quantities in all lines seem to be large and as yet no complaints have been made with regard to quality of goods.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

Winnipeg, Dec. 17.—Retail trade in Christmas stuff has at time of writing been a little disappointing but there is ample time during the next week for sales to catch up. In wholesale circles things are quiet but there is a fairly good demand for staples and considerable sorting trade in holiday specialties.

Colder weather will no doubt stimulate trade in all lines and an advance in butter will bring about a brisker demand for syrups.

Collections have much improved and the amount of cash trade being done both in the city and in rural districts is reported as satisfactory.

No changes are reported in staple lines. Teas, coffees and dried fruits are steady in the primary markets and there is no change in the local situation.

The business outlook is considered to be satisfactory and manufacturers and wholesalers are confident that there will be a healthy development of business in 1913. Latest estimates place the wheat yet to be marketed in the West at some 60,000,000 bushels—a good reserve. The price is still much below what all the West would like to see it.

SUGARS.—The sugar market has remained unchanged since the last review and no one seems able to predict what the next change will be. The local demand for this commodity is excellent.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, Dec. 18.—Business at present particularly during past week, has been decidedly brisk. A last appeal is being made this week to dealers to "look over your stock of fruit syrups, jelly powders, extracts, icing sugar, spices, figs, dates, currants, raisins, peels, etc., prompt deliveries are promised on late orders.

Local supply of flour is still scanty. It is now opinion of dealers that market has reached a more settled state and no changes are looked for at least until New Year. Fancy Barbadoes molasses is decidedly scarce and the price is steadily increasing. Casks are now offered at 38 cents but without warning the price may advance any day as before next season's crop is offered higher prices are certain to come.

Lower prices are looked for by St. John dealers in sugar market soon after the New Year, and advices to the trade at present are to purchase only for immediate requirements.

The Eastern Tea Trade During November

An Anxious Month for the Grower on Account of Arrival of Cold Weather—Subsequent Reports However Were Favorable —Russian Buyers Strong in the Market—Effect of Balkan War.

The following information on the tea trade during November as seen through the eyes of a large London, Eng., and Calcutta firm will be interesting to the trade:—

"In many respects the market during November was a repetition of that during October, larger quantities of tea being offered than for the corresponding month of last year and the general average of quality being of a nondescript character.

"The Durga Poojah holidays took place during the month which usually marks an anxious and important time to the grower, for about this period which is the commencement of the cold weather, the seasons estimate may be considerably curtailed if the temperature suddenly drops. Therefore, the sale after the holidays is a most important one, however this year there was no news other than quite favorable to the growing community and as the quantity on offer was large and news from the London market very depressing it was not to be wondered at that prices generally showed a decline.

"There was little support given to the market throughout the entire month other than from the Russian buyers who must have taken considerably more than 50 per cent. of the entire offerings. The war in Turkey was responsible for the withdrawal of support of the Persian Gulf buyers who usually take a large quantity of stylish teas of all grades.

"The Australian buyers, however, were well represented.

"Fine Tea.—This grade was again noticeable by its absence, but whenever an isolated parcel came on offer buyers were plentiful.

"Medium Tea.—Teas of this grade with useful liquors were well supported throughout the month by all buyers, but nondescript liquoring sorts marked a decline in values week by week.

"Common Tea.—Useful clean Pekoe Souchongs kept fairly firm throughout while the common sorts sold at rather lower prices. Fannings showed no material alteration although all common Broken Pekoes met a declining market."

A carload of canned goods en route to Estevan, Sask., was partially burned in Portage la Prairie, Man., recently. The cause is attributed to an oil heater in the car.

Reducing the Difficulties of Delivery

Quick Service is Demanded, and This is Exceedingly Hard to Give—System the Only Salvation—How One Merchant Secures Three Deliveries a Day—Frankness Absolutely Necessary to Keep Customers—A Good Joke But Bad Business.

Distribution is one of the big problems of business life to-day—perhaps the biggest of all problems. It is the great question in West and East alike. To market his grain is the problem of the prairie farmer. To market his product is the study of the manufacturer; and to distribute his goods is undoubtedly one of the great problems of the retail hardwareman.

Delivery seems absolutely necessary. Men may dream of a blissful state in which people pay cash for what they buy, and carry off their purchases with them; but such Utopian conditions do not exist in many places. No. The great majority of dealers must make arrangements for delivering what is bought of them, and according as their arrangements to this end are good or bad will their business grow or diminish. Delivery, of course, is only one factor in a retail business, but it is an exceedingly important as well as a worrisome factor.

Friends Made and Lost.

Prompt delivery service can, and does, do a store almost incalculable good, and a bad service may cause much damage. Prompt delivery gives people faith in a store. It causes them to speak well of it when others are complaining of some other establishment where they have done business. Thus friends are made for the one store and lost for the other.

Dealers need little reminding of the harm done by poor deliveries. Perhaps all have intimate knowledge of customers lost because of this. Sometimes the slow service was inavoidable. Perhaps it was due to the carelessness of a delivery man. However, that may be, the evil results followed.

It is very evident that the question of delivery is one which requires careful study. System is necessary. There is absolutely no use attempting to deliver goods over any considerable area in a hit-or-miss fashion.

How System Was Arranged.

There are firms, of course, which employ a number of wagons. These have an opportunity to divide their territory into districts, giving one driver charge of a particular district. The majority of dealers, however, have but one rig, and have to give the best possible service with this. Moreover, if the work is properly regulated, a very good service may be given under these circumstances.

One man, doing business in a place of 20,000 inhabitants or a little more, has arranged to give three deliveries a day. He has found that it is possible to cover the territory this often, as it seldom happens that all the extremes have to be touched at the one time. If there are orders from all four extremes, then some of them have to be taken at each delivery. It would be impossible to attempt to make the full circuit at one time.

This man sends out his first load about 10 o'clock in the morning. This includes all the telephone orders of the early morning, and all the orders placed after 5 o'clock the night previous. These last, by the way, are the only orders of the day before left over.

The driver will make his round in about two hours, and then will attend to his horse and be back again very shortly after one o'clock. There will be more parcels to go out. If any urgent call has come it will be delivered first. The driver can start delivering either way. That is, he can go to the end of his run first, and work back; or he can commence delivering at houses near the store. If the hurry up calls do not come from widely divergent points the prompt service asked may usually be given.

Touching the Extremes.

This trip is usually over about 5 o'clock, and then there comes the late afternoon delivery. It is very seldom as heavy as the one o'clock round, yet the territory to be covered is often as great. Sometimes, indeed, it is greater —for a parcel may be left off the early delivery, because, it was for a district apart from that to which the rest of the goods were going. It has to go on the late delivery, and perhaps by the time this is made up there is an order in for goods to be delivered to some place on the other side of the city. If all are to go out that night, both extremes have to be touched.

Indeed the task is not an easy one, and the worst of it is that many people are thoughtless—to put it mildly. All naturally regard the delivery of their purchase as of the greatest importance.

A Case in Point.

The dealer who has arranged his three deliveries in a day, tells a story which has occurred to him in the past month. In his city is a residential district located on what is called the high level. As the name implies, it is on a plateau, to reach which a steep hill has to be climbed. A lady telephoned from one of the fine houses here, asking for a box of tacks. "And," she said," I must have them immediately." The merchant explained that his delivery was out, and that he could not get the tacks around until nearly six o'clock. Then the lady gave the merchant a piece of her mind. She wanted what she wanted when she wanted it. Probably, the merchant thought a lot. Indeed he admits as much, but he only said he would get the tacks around at the earliest possible moment. As he says: "It would not have mattered a great deal if we had lost that customer, but she would have talked. I saw how she could talk. She would have said we could not give a decent delivery service, and of course she would not have explained the circumstances as they really were. Her talk would have hurt us."

A Good Joke But Bad Business.

This incident brings to mind another which occurred to a grocer. A lady demanded a cake of yeast. Cakes of yeast cost 2c and yield the grocer ½c. profit. She insisted that this be sent around immediately. Well, the grocer determined to send it. He wrapped it up a dozen times. Then he wrapped it up some more. He put it in a bushel basket, and the driver, entering into the spirit of the joke, got another man to help him carry it into the purchaser's house. It was a good joke but bad business. The lady was offended. She told her friends—not of the joke, but of the supposed bad service—and several customers were lost.

Delivery is not only a troublesome part of the business, but an expensive part. It is estimated that a horse's keep comes to approximately $20 a month. Then there is the cost of keeping up the wagons, and the cost of the horses. It is a good horse that lasts more than six or seven years on delivery work, and horses are rising in value rapidly.

Frankness Absolutely Necessary.

Probably the one essential in connection with delivery is that there should be perfect frankness. Few customers will become annoyed when they are kept waiting a little time, if they have been told in the first place that the goods can not be sent earlier. It is the broken promises that make store enemies. Only the other day a hardwareman lost a customer because he had promised to have goods delivered by night. They did not come. The next day he said they were on the way. They did not come. The purchaser, the third day, found them still in the store.

An Experienced Sales Manager Wanted

On the first of December, Geo. D. Davis, a cut of whom appears on this page, joined the staff of Hardware and Metal, as associate editor. His acquisition will strengthen Hardware and Metal's organization where it was already strong, and make it possible to render even better service than in the past.

For a young man, Mr. Davis has the backing of a splendid experience to assist him in his new position.

Born in Stratford, Ont., he received his education in the public schools and collegiate institute of that city. His first hardware experience was gained with Duncan L. Myers, in the store now conducted by the Myers Hardware Company.

During the nine years that he was in the employ of Duncan L. Myers, Mr. Davis thoroughly absorbed the rudiments of hardware retailing, and gained an excellent business experience.

He now felt qualified for larger fields of endeavor and accepted a position with the Purdom Gillespie Hardware Co., London, Ont. It was at this time that Mr. Davis became intensely interested in newspaper advertising as a means of developing retail trade.

After being with Purdom Gillespie Hardware Co. for a year and a half, Mr. Davis had an opportunity of going on the road for the Hobbs Hardware Co., of London, and he accepted it.

GEO. D. DAVIS,
Hardware and Metal's New Associate Editor.

For two years he showed his samples from Milton to New Liskeard, and from Sudbury to the Soo. He made good as a traveling salesman just as he had previously made good as a stove salesman.

And his knowledge of hardware was growing apace.

By that time Mr. Gillespie had withdrawn from the Purdom Gillespie Hardware Co., which had changed its name to Purdom Hardware Co. Mr. Davis was invited to rejoin the firm, in an important position, and he did so.

For the past three and a half years Mr. Davis has been buyer for this firm, and has had charge of the sales and advertising departments. He has visited New York twice a year to buy new goods and has, in other respects, gained an intimate knowledge of the hardware trade, which will be invaluable to him as associate editor of Hardware and Metal.

Before leaving London last week, Mr. Davis was presented with a handsome traveling bag by Alex. H. Purdom, on behalf of the firm.

The appointment of Mr. Davis to the staff is in line with the progressive policy of Hardware and Metal, in maintaining a staff capable of giving an unrivalled service to its readers. With a big newsy issue every week, edited by men who are making a life work of studying conditions in the hardware trade, Hardware and Metal is bending every effort to maintain its prestige as the only trade paper which is really indispensable to Canadian hardwaremen.

The Canadian Grocer, which is published by the same firm who publish Hardware and Metal, has an opening on Montreal staff for a man with somewhat similar experience in grocery business to what Mr. Davis has had in hardware line. Applicants for this position should state fully experience they have had, and various men they can give for reference as to character and ability.

The Canadian Grocer has made many improvements in its appearance during the past year, and we have in view a number of new features which we are anxious to add during the year 1913. We are anxious to secure the services of a man who is familiar with all phases of grocery business.

Heavy Christmas Trade in Oranges

Wholesalers Report Demand From Retail Trade Quite Keen—Some Japanese Oranges Arrive in Eastern Canada—Grapefruit Still Plentiful But Price is Well Maintained—Vegetables a Little Easier This Week on Account of Attention Going to Fruits.

Plenty of Florida oranges have been offering this week. Sizes have been quite desirable and the eating quality excellent so that dealers have been turning their attention towards these and have made a specialty of them. There seems to be large crop in the south but in spite of that it is stated that prices on all better grades will be mainained. Florida packing houses are closing down on Saturday so as to have everything cleaned up by Christmas.

Grape fruit keeps coming in still in good quality and desirable sizes for this market. Here, 64's and 80's seem to be most preferred. At the shipping points prices remain firm and at present it is difficult to state just what the future will be. No decline is anticipated, however.

Large shipments of navel oranges are coming up both from Northern and Southern California. In Southern California especially, the crop is heavy. The color in these has been very good but quality is not all that is to be desired. Many are said to be rather sour and coarse. Better quality is expected later in season.

One of the difficulties which many of the dealers have found this year has been that oranges have been shipped in before sufficiently matured to send out again to the trade. This has caused large stocks to be held over until they should become a little riper and has thus put dealers to considerable inconvenience.

MONTREAL.

FRUITS.—A large trade is passing in all these lines, dealers now putting in supplies for Christmas and New Year trade. There seems to be enough apples to meet all demand, while cranberries are firming up considerably stocks being reported as getting low.

VEGETABLES. — Wholesalers are now more satisfied with trade, the dullness noticeable during past few weeks having given away to decided activity. Potatoes are in better supply and market is easy while all other lines are moving freely. A fair demand has set in for higher-priced vegetables, namely imported such as California celery, Borton lettuce, etc. Prices are not out of reason either, but compare favorably with certain other lines now selling.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS.—"Fruits are all selling well and prices are quite reasonable," was the statement made by one dealer in sizing up trade conditions this week. Oranges are commanding large sales now with the Christmas trade. Some of the navel oranges are reported as being rather sour. Floridas, however, are of excellent quality and are plentiful. "There are more Floridas this year than ever before and they're selling better," said one dealer.

Rather a novelty on the local market is the Japanese orange. These are very small, red oranges with a very thin skin and fairly sweet flavor. For some time they have been sold in the West and Pacific Coast, but are only now being introduced here. They come in straps, 6½ to 7 dozen in each section or from 13 to 14 dozen in a strap, and sell wholesale at $1.50 per strap. These come direct from Japan by way of Vancouver. Large quantities of holly and mistletoe are now being handled. Prices are quoted as follows: Holly, per case, $4.25; Holly wreaths, per doz., $1.75; and Mistletoe in boxes, 40c per lb.

VEGETABLES.—The whole vegetable market is stated by some dealers locally to be slightly easier this week. Owing to holiday trade more attention has been paid to fruits thus pushing vegetables rather to the background. But trade is still brisk and all lines are moving out fairly well.

The potato market is rather easier this week. Not so many have been offering as formerly.

Large sales are being made in onions, and plenty are offering. Quality, both in Ontario and Valencias is said to be very good.

FRUITS AND VEGETABLES.—Native vegetables are becoming scarce and dear. A considerable quantity of imported stuff is now on the market. Navel oranges, grapefruit and lemons are all reduced in price. Some lines of Ontario apples are a little stiffer. There is a fair demand for table fruits and good cranberries are in demand.

How Big Trade Was Worked Up in Apples

Adams Bros., Lindsay, Ont., Have Made Special Feature of This Trade and Now Have Big List of Apple Customers—Plan Ahead for Stocks and Sell in Advance of Arrival—Exemplifies How a Particular Line Can be Sold if Given Special Attention.

Lindsay, Ont., Dec. 19.—(Special).—Adams Bros., grocers, of Lindsay, Ont., have succeeded, by continual effort for a number of years, in building up an enormous trade in apples. Planning ahead in regard to purchases and sales, and attention to giving satisfactory stock has been responsible in no little part for their success.

Plan Early for Supplies.

They do not wait until customers begin to ask for apples, before purchasing, as some grocers are known to do. They arrange in the early fall for their supplies. Their trade has grown to such an extent that not only do they purchase from the surrounding farmers but also from distant points.

This year, the firm purchased the output of an orchard as the fruit stood on the trees. It was in another section of the country, and the firm arranged for picking and had them shipped to Lindsay. J. E. Adams, one of the members visited the orchard, and personally superintended the packing and grading of the fruit himself, so that the quality would be such as could be depended on.

Take Advance Orders.

When they are getting a shipment in by freight, or even from the surrounding farmers, Adams Bros. try to arrange to sell as many as possible in advance, so that they can be delivered right from the car, without being stored. They urge customers to give their orders in this way, pointing out that they will get the best choice and the cost will be less with the one moving because it is not necessary to put them into storage.

Thus, the plan is to the advantage of both the seller and the buyer. Previous to receiving a shipment, they get in orders by advertising in the local paper, and also by talks to customers when they come into the store.

Use Windows to Make Apple Sales.

The firm also have a corner window which is used at times in promoting apple sales. Generally the full barrels are used in the display, merely the tops being removed. The different varieties of apples are arranged so as to give the proper color scheme. Such a display always brings good results, a big quantity being disposed of in this way. Display is almost constantly maintained in the store by means of two or three sample barrels.

Quality Brings Back Customers.

Making a feature of apples and showing them in considerable quantity brings considerable business of itself. Then, again, Adams Bros., have always given particular attention to the quality of their stock. People are satisfied and come back year after year to leave their order for apples.

Grocers' Letter Box

The Canadian Grocer solicits enquiries for this Column on Trade Questions. If you wish to know the name of the manufacturer of any line of goods, or where any article can be secured, etc., write us.

Editor Canadian Grocer.—Please give me name of manufacturer (Canadian) or Canadian agent of American firm selling or manufacturing enamel signs of all sizes.—C. A. R., Dunnville, Ont.

Editorial note.—The Day Sign Co., 149 Victoria Street, and J. E. Richardson, 147 Church Street, both of Toronto, manufacture enamel signs.

Editorial note.—Some time ago an inquiry was sent to this column for names of firms manufacturing or handling collapsible wooden boxes for delivery. A Grocer reader has kindly forwarded the following names of manufacturers: Keenan Bros., Owen Sound, Ont., and Hessin & Co., Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

Editor Canadian Grocer.—We have a lot of honey that looks like half sugar. Where could we have a sample analyzed and about what would be the cost?—A. S. J., Exeter, Ont.

Editorial note.—If this is sent to H. J. Dager, 278 Jarvis Street, Toronto, an Ontario food inspector, it will be forwarded to the proper authorities at Ottawa. The cost of analysis may be $8 or $10.

Following items are from The Canadian Grocer of December 23, 1892:—

"Some of the Toronto merchants are endeavoring to get the Hamilton and North-Western to handle goods more promptly. It takes a couple of days more to get goods from Toronto than from Hamilton."

Editor's Note.—It was ever thus. Complaints against the railways for delays are heard to-day as was the case 20 years ago.

In our Montreal market report of December 23, 1892, sugar is quoted at $4.50 per cwt. In this week's issue best granulated sugar is quoted at $4.75—only a difference of 25 cents a hundred or ¼ of a cent a pound existing.

* * *

"A grocer must not always measure his profit by what he makes out of the sale he makes, but by the possible sales in the future. Human nature, we know, is so apt to regard the value of a business transaction by the amount of profit that is made upon the sale itself. But is this wise? Not always, we are sure. And there are abundant reasons why this cannot be considered anything but suicidal. Impressions in this world go a great way, and once you secure the confidence and respect of a person dealing with you a great step has been taken toward success."

Editor's Note.—This little bit of philosophy is more true to-day than 20 years ago. Confidence in the grocer and in his honesty to supply good goods is what is doing most to bring him success.

Heavy Demand for Cereals Continues

Manufacturers of Package Goods Say There Is Shortage in Supplies—Rolled Oat Decline Not General—Cornmeal Not Yet Down but Expected to Decline—Flour Situation Dull—Western Farmers Have More Wheat but Are Holding Back Waiting for Better Prices.

While last week's report regarding a further decline of 20 cents in the price of rolled oats has been confirmed by one miller, the large mills claim that no reduction in price was made whatever. The price most generally quoted, and which may be taken as the standard, is that given two weeks ago. Business keeps brisk and competition has been keen. Supplies are being kept down by the large demand, and in some lines dealers are sold right out. The shortage of package goods mentioned last week has been relieved very little.

This year's corn crop has been a record one and perhaps the largest in history. Some difference of opinion is expressed with regard to the future of cornmeal. While some millers state that as soon as larger supplies come in prices will be reduced, others state that bottom of the market has already been reached and prices will go no lower.

The flour market has been rather dull for the past week. Rather more Ontario wheat has been coming in of late on account of colder weather bettering the condition of the roads. Complaints have been received from several parts of Ontario to the effect that wheat is too soft. Much of it was harvested in a damaged condition and contains too much water. Bakers are complaining that it is not nearly strong enough.

Quality in Manitoba wheat is excellent and has perhaps never been better but prices are low and farmers are holding back.

No change of price has been announced this week and the present lull in the market will certainly effect no advance. In sympathy with lower prices in wheat, rolled wheat has taken a decline of 5 cents this week.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR.—There is a good demand from country points for spring wheat flour and dealers are evidently laying in good stocks. Of course, the country roads are in better condition of late. Winter wheat flour remains the same, price being fully maintained. The demand seems to be in excess of the supply coming from Ontario millers.

CEREALS. — Market remains unchanged, there being a better demand at prices mentioned. Mills are pretty busy with good stocks and competition seems likely to cause an easing in price. Decline mentioned last week was not made by the large Canadian millers, standard prices being same as quoted two weeks ago.

TORONTO.

FLOUR.—For this season of the year local demand is very strong and export is good. Flour is a little out of line with the wheat market at present but a few days will likely right conditions again.

Down grade markets for some time past have at last begun to make people think there is no bottom to be reached. All ginger is being taken out of the market and the result is a lull in business. But this is only as expected at this season as from the middle of December to the middle of January the flour market is generally pretty quiet.

CEREALS. — The report published last week that rolled oats had made a further decline of 20 cents a barrel while confirmed by one miller does not seem to have been general. So that prices most commonly quoted still remain at figures quoted in The Grocer two weeks ago.

There seems to be no necessity for lower prices in rolled oats, claimed one miller. "If feed were to go up prices of rolled oats might go down," he said, "but at present feed is declining continually."

Supplies of package goods are reported by some as very low and one miller states that he is practically cleaned out.

New supplies of corn goods have not arrived yet. "Our car is a week overdue already," said one dealer. "When it arrives prices will decline." Other millers state that although the corn crop this year has been the biggest in history, the present basis is considered quite legitimate and that the market is as low as it will go.

Good Business Passing in the Fish Line

Advent Has Meant Increased Sales in All Lines on Market—Wholesalers Kept Busy Filling Orders—Oyster Trade Has Been on a Large Scale.

Still great demand keeps up for fish of all kinds, and supplies are changing hands very rapidly. Large orders due chiefly to Advent trade have been coming in briskly and dealers have been kept busy making shipments.

More favorable weather during the past week has encouraged fishermen and large catches have been made especially on the inshore ground. Halibut are reported as very scarce in Nova Scotia and selling at high prices.

Quality in oysters is slightly better this week. More vitality and strength is noted than formerly by some dealers. There seems to be much fear especially amongst the smaller growers that conditions of last year are likely to repeat themselves. Sudden cold weather coming on would freeze up all bays making it almost impossible to gather oysters at all. Large growers, while also anticipating this, are not experiencing so much fear on account of being provided with ice crushers, and in every way being better capable of meeting conditions.

QUEBEC.

MONTREAL.—The holiday trade has so far been bright and country dealers are putting in strong orders for future delivery. Prices are varying but little and there seems ample stock to meet all requirements. Haddies, kippers and bloaters are chief sellers along with fillets while boneless cod is also on the move.

ONTARIO.

TORONTO.—Local conditions have improved greatly since last week and trade is now quite brisk. Quality in all lines is said to be exceptionally good. Frozen fish are now coming in in large quantities and are moving out freely. Cold weather of the past week has aided the fish trade greatly and now everyone is looking forward to a record season.

Oysters are reported as coming in larger quantities and much better quality than last week.

NOVA SCOTIA.

HALIFAX.—Fresh fish continues in good supply. The weather the past week has been favorable for fishermen operating on the inshore grounds, and good catches of cod and haddock are being made for season. There is scarcity of halibut 4,000 pounds of halibut landed at Gloucester this week sold for 18½ cents per pound—the highest price paid this season.

AN ERROR CORRECTED.

In last issue an error was made in the advertisement of Laporte, Martin & Co., Ltd., Montreal. The total amount of dried fruits advertised at 1,000 packages, should have been 20,000. The trade, no doubt, knowing the volume of business handled by this firm, have already realized this was simply a typographical error.

Butter Situation Somewhat Puzzling

Dealers Find it Difficult to Determine Just What the Market Conditions are—Storage Stocks are Apparently Heavy and if Market Here Were to go Up New Zealand Stock Would Likely Play More Important Part—Provisions Comparatively Quiet—New Laid Eggs Still High.

The situation in the butter market although somewhat better than last week is still a little disappointing to holders. Large stocks of storage are said to be on the market and these are likely to keep prices from soaring to the high mark reached last year. It is stated that some of the larger retail dealers have cut deeply into their stocks and will have to replenish soon. That they will find prices as firm as ever, or even more so seems to be what is expected.

Receipts have kept up remarkably well and some dealers speak hopefully of the future stating that before the new make they would not be surprised to see prices rise to the high mark of 40 cents. Before that takes place, however a tremendous advance will have to be made in England. As matters now stand the slightest advance on present prices here would cause Australian and New Zealand to flow in and flood the market.

Eggs, speaking of the strictly new laid article, are scarce and higher prices are being reached. Supplies are beginning to come in a little more freely. U.S. dealers report fresh receipts from the Southern and Middle States and even in some parts of Canada more are offering. Dealers are supplying the trade to great extent from their stocks of storage. Prices in these have been rather easier lately on account of methods adopted in American cities to get rid of them. In Philadelphia and New York storage eggs have even been sold in the streets. This fact gives some insight into the quantity which must be held in stock before such courses could be adopted.

Poultry trade has been much more active this week and supplies have changed hands very rapidly. An advance on prices all round before the holiday trade is over would not be a bit surprising.

The improved conditions in the cheese market reported last week still hold good and are even more pronounced this week. More business has been done and at advanced prices. This improvement in demand was not looked forward to till after the beginning of the New Year. At that time English importers take stock and are in a better position to judge the amounts they will require both for present and future. With this turn of affairs great activity in the cheese market is expected at any time now.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS.—Christmas rush is on and all lines are moving freely and as stocks are in good shape it does not look as if change in prices will result. BUTTER.—There has been less activity in this market than during previous weeks and while demand is fair, nevertheless, it is somewhat disappointing for this time of year. Of course they can hardly do anything else, as new laids are scarce and fetching fancy prices so that the demand for cold storage stocks is more marked, and at that there is a fairly large hole already made in the latter.

TORONTO.

PROVISIONS.—This week provision market is reported as slightly quieter than last, owing chiefly to effect of the Christmas demand for poultry. It is expected that this condition will prevail till after holiday season is past and that there will then be a marked improvement. At present supply coming in is quite ample for demand, and the quality is all that is to be expected at this time of year.

Cooked hams are quoted slightly lower this week. Apart from that there has been no change in price of smoked meats. Some dealers are receiving as much as 18 for light hams, but 17 seems a more general price.

Practically no change has taken place in the hog market. Early in the week few were offering. Prices remain unchanged.

BUTTER. — Butter market has this week taken on slightly firmer tone and present conditions are likely to prevail for some time. Deliveries while not large have been quite heavy enough to take care of current trade. Owing to large profits made in butter last year greater storage stocks were laid in for this season and now these are evidently tending to keep market down so that no great advance such as came last year is expected. Fresh butter is scarce and little of it is being made.

EGGS.—Mild weather of past few days has not been at all encouraging to storage stocks. Both storage and pickled are quoted as slightly easier this week. Women selling these on the streets in Philadelphia, New York and other American cities is claimed to have done much to weaken the market, and effect lower prices for the time being.

Strictly new laid eggs are still a scarce article, and prices locally have been advanced 10 cents. Recently more have been offering, however. American dealers have been quoting fresh receipts which mean that supplies are coming up from Southern and Middle States.

POULTRY. — Stocks in poultry for past week have not been large, and as a rule supplies have been snatched up about as fast as they came in. Rather more business has been done than last week. Supplies are both coming in and moving out freely. Early this week no change in prices had been made but some dealers look forward to higher prices ruling before week is over.

Dealer Loses $100 in Egg Deal

Out of Case of 36 Dozen Supposedly Good Stock 16 Dozen Found to be Rotten—Net Loss on the One Case Figured at Over $4 and 30 Cases Had Been Purchased—A Problem That Should be Taken Up Seriously by Food Authorities.

If parcel post legislation comes into effect in Canada will buyers of eggs be assured of getting what they pay for? Should this be the case, a great many would be pleased to see it come. The following letter indicates the sort of trade going on in a great many instances in the egg business:—

Editor, Canadian Grocer.—In a recent issue of your paper I read of a wholesale provision merchant in Toronto who felt that he had been imposed upon in an egg transaction because of the enormous waste—72½ doz. on a lot of 1,000 doz.

The writer of this letter has had an experience that should make this merchant feel that he got off "easy."

I bought, the latter part of May, from a biscuit manufacturer in an Ontario town, 30 cases of eggs that were guaranteed to be of first-class quality; in fact, fit to be immediately sent to cold storage. He claimed that his nightwatchman had repacked every case, throwing out the rots, splits and dirty eggs. The following is a sample case and this is the manner in which I figure out my loss:—

1 case of eggs, 36 doz. @ 23c		$8.28
Cold storage charges		.30
Freight		.20
16 doz. rotten and ½ doz. splits leaves 19½ doz., for which I will receive, at 32c per doz., $6.24.
15% on selling price to cover store expenses		.90
		$9.68
19½ doz. @ 32c	$6.24
½ doz. splits	.10
		6.34
		$3.34
10% net profit eliminated		.73
Total net loss on one case (36 doz)		$4.07

The vendor no doubt acted in good faith, and deception, if any, was on the part of a lazy night watchman, but for all of that, why should I be put to such a loss—approximately $100.

Yours truly, GOOD FAITH.
Montreal, Que., Dec. 10, 1912.

Here then is still another letter indicative of the conditions existing in the egg traffic. Absolutely rotten eggs are sold for first-class stock in all parts of the country and there is no law which can get at the vendors.

Law Gets After Similar Offences.

Imagine a retailer selling decomposed fruit or rotten vegetables; or even a farmer on the maket selling tainted meat. How soon would the pure food authorities be after him! Yet there are scores of egg raisers to-day selling many eggs unfit for human consumption. They evidently feel they can take a chance on not being discovered because of the protection the shell supplies.

Every wholesale commission man can give scores of instances where rotten eggs are sold as fresh. Probably few will mean such a loss as in the case of the Montreal grocer who wrote the above letter.

Egg raising in Canada is not keeping pace with consumption in view of our ever increasing population. But with the waste of eggs now going on, due to eggs being held too long, the supply falls still further short, and at the same time, eggs are more expensive than they otherwise would be.

Waiting for big prices.

During the fall of the year when hens are laying a restricted number of eggs, it has been found that these are often held over until winter when the high price for new laids is in vogue. They are then placed on the market at the high figure but when the candler is reached, the price of the stale stock must fall and this necessarily raises that of the good unduly high.

This egg question is one that should be given closer study by our government and food experts. The waste is too great and action against it cannot be taken too soon.

SALES MANAGER GETS WATCH.

S. H. Small, sales manager of the Postum Cereal Co., Battle Creek, Michigan, at a recent conference of brokers handling the company's products was presented with a handsome watch—one claimed to have few equals in the world. The gift came as quite a surprise, as Mr. Small did not even know of the coming of the brokers to the city. R. S. McIndoe, the Postum Cereal Co.'s representative in Toronto, was at Battle Creek for the event.

CRESCENT BM&Co. TRADE MARK. BRAND

SODA-CRYSTALS (WASHING SODA)

Foreign Soda Crystals—and some of English manufacture—are being extensively offered for sale in this country which are grossly adulterated with Glauber-Salts (Sulphate of Soda), a cheap product which is not only entirely useless for washing purposes, but is even likely to injure the fabrics with which it comes in contact. The Adulterated Soda-Crystals, although nominally lower in price than BRUNNER, MOND'S PURE SODA CRYSTALS, are in reality much dearer owing to the large quantity of useless and injurious matter which they contain.

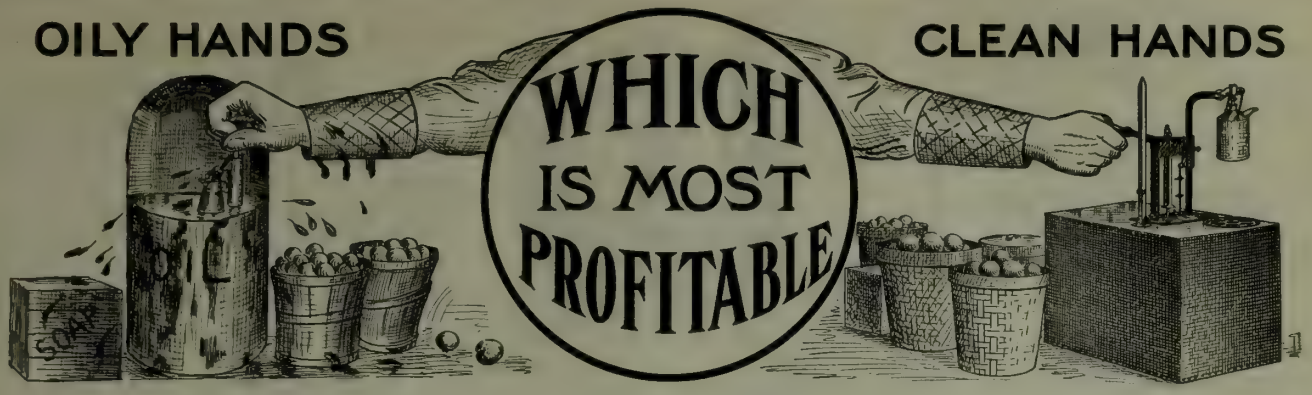
OILY HANDS



CLEAN HANDS

Loss of oil means loss of other articles as well, because oil taints everything it touches, and even the odor will taint butter, lard, bread and many other foods. You will increase your whole business, besides making money on oil when you get a

BOWSER

SELF-MEASURING OIL TANK

because it will please your customers by its cleanliness and accuracy. Unless you have a BOWSER OUTFIT you not only lose money on the oil itself, but you also permit the oil nuisance to drive customers off to trade with your competitor who has a BOWSER. The grocer who uses the old style tank pays for BOWSER OUTFIT without getting it. The BOWSER OUTFIT does away with measure and funnel, tells the right price to charge for any quantity of oil, tells how much oil is left in your tank. If you want an oil "business" instead of an oil "nuisance," write us for free book No. 222, and full particulars.

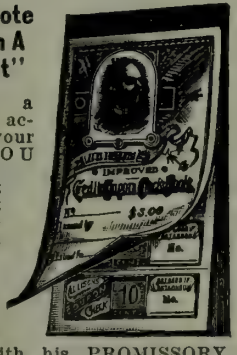
A Promissory Note Is Better Than A "Book Account"



When you let a man "run an account" he has your goods and YOU HAVE NOTHING, except YOUR account of his indebtedness. When you use
ALLISON
Coupon Books
you START with his PROMISSORY NOTE, and HE starts with the understanding that you mean business. Allison Coupon Books save thousands of dollars a year for merchants like you.

HOW THEY WORK

A man wants credit. You think he is good. Give him a $10.00 Allison Coupon Book. Have him sign the receipt or note form in the front of the book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with $10.00 — no trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten cent coupon, and so on until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10.00 and gets another book. No pass books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes. Allison Coupon Books are recognized everywhere as the best.

Will you have a creditable amount in the right column or will you come out with a very meagre total to show for another year of hard work?

Business Development

Do you ever feel that your present occupation prevents the development of your business talent?

Many a young man is engaged in office or store clerking. Owing to the nature of the business, he has but a narrow range in which to exercise his talent. He cannot relinquish his position to seek one giving better opportunities and paying a larger salary. To do so would be to give up his only source of revenue, and some one may need his support. Yet it is imperative that he increase not only his business, but also his salary.

We will solve the problem for you. We have need of part time salesmen. Men who can devote spare hours to our work and make as much, and in many cases, more money than they can from their regular occupation. Many of these men we develop into regular road men, with a high salary. Do you feel that there are latent forces in you, waiting for an opportunity to assert themselves? If so, we want you to let us show you how to discover them. Write at once for the particulars.

Not an Enterprise for the "Quitter"

¶ "If there is one enterprise on earth," says John Wanamaker, "that a 'quitter' should leave severely alone, it is advertising. To make a success of advertising one must be prepared to stick like a barnacle on a boat's bottom.

OLD TEA IS BAD TEA

Tea of all growths deteriorates rapidly, and is never as good as it is on the day it arrives here from the gardens.

Some of our retail friends, without considering the above facts, buy enough bulk teas to last for a year or more. They are persuaded to do this by the wily salesman, who always has a "bargain" to offer. This "bargain," perhaps, has been in the wholesaler's stock for a year or over, and, even if it was originally good, has lost all its goodness. It is on account of this deterioration in tea that we are always eager to take back "SALADA" when it has been on your hands for over three months. We empty it out of the packets and sell it as bulk tea for what it will bring.

In this way is preserved the good name of

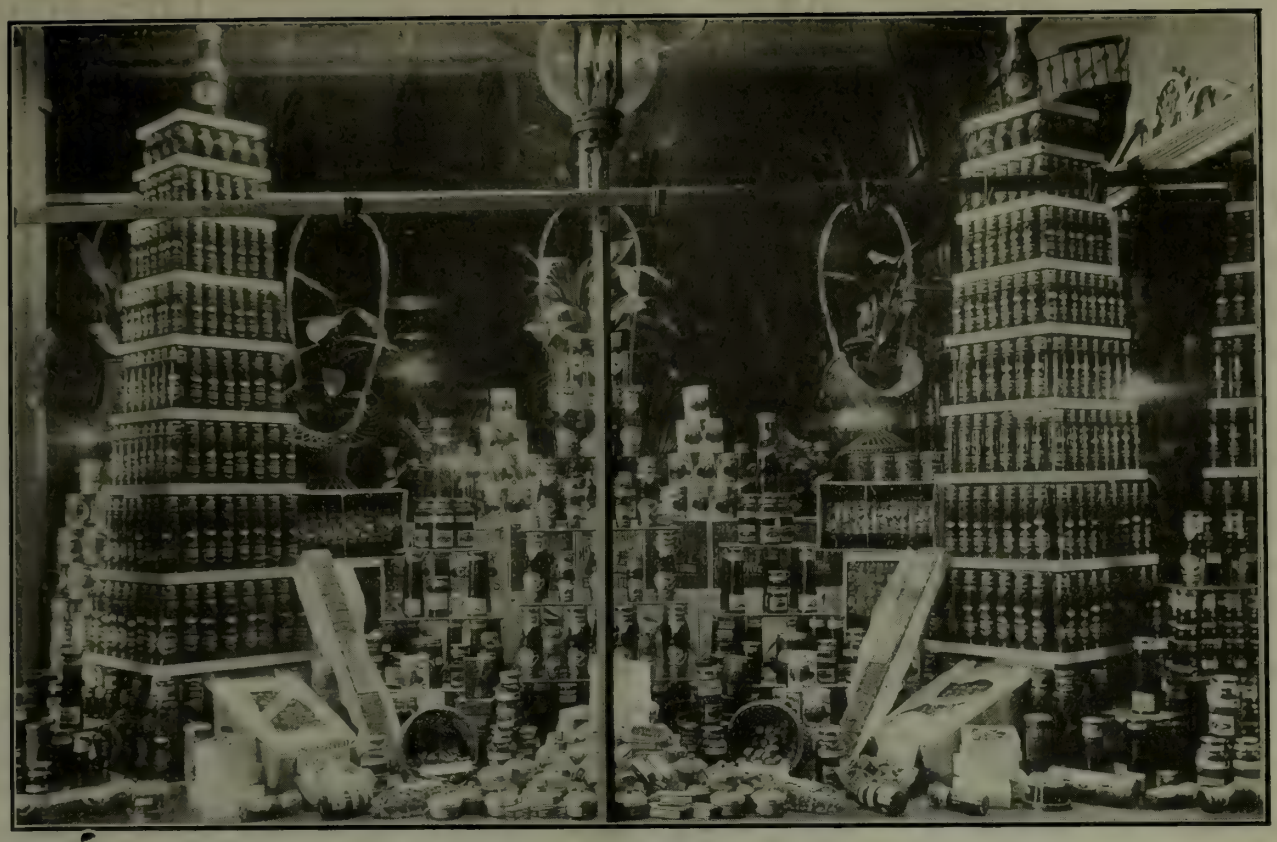
MONTREAL—CARDINAL—TORONTO—BRANTFORD—VANCOUVER



Display of high class goods arranged attractively and evenly balanced, recently shown by F. Simpson & Sons, Yonge Street, Toronto, grocers.

Symmetry Always Tends to Attractiveness

The Window Which Is Trimmed with Some Regularity Has Usually Good Appearance—A Splendid Example Showing Olives, Fruits in Glass, Fancy Nuts and Other High-Class Lines—A Display That Can Be Followed in Almost Any Store.

"No doubt that window has sold a considerable quantity of goods for you?" was a query put recently by The Grocer to a member of F. Simpson & Sons, Toronto, retailers of groceries, fish and game.

"that's what we put it in for."

This question of window display is an everlasting one so far as the retail business is concerned. Since the window must be dressed and since time and attention must be spent on it, then it is profitable to do it properly. The window of F. Simpson & Sons, which is shown herewith, bore fruit because it was an attractive, well-arranged selling window. There was money in it for the firm because it contained high-class goods which carried with them good profits.

How Display Was Arranged.

The arrangement of the Simpson window is striking. The attention of the passerby is immediately attracted by the pyramids of olives on either side. The fixture they are placed in is built of wood with an axis running up through the centre. The steps become smaller as the top is neared, giving a fine effect to the eye of an onlooker.

The symmetry in this window is another feature to be noted. There is no conglomeration of goods, the window is not lop-sided nor unevenly balanced, but arranged with a regularity that makes one look at it as a work of art. In this respect Simpson & Co. have carried out to the letter a fundamental principle in good window dressing.

Three fancy baskets each containing a plant hang in the background and give an extra attractive touch to the display. On glass pedestals in front are shown fruits in glass flanked on either side by boxes of crackers. A long box of figs leans against each olive display, and open boxes of Malaga table raisins may also be seen. Other goods shown include package dates, delicacies in stone jars and oblong tins, baskets of fancy nuts, and nuts in glass dishes, preserved ginger, etc.

An Example for All.

Such high-class goods are sold by F. Simpson & Sons as they cater to a high-class trade. Any dealer, however, can dress a window on same principle by using goods in stock. It can be made both attractive and a strong seller.

Year in Sugar Marked by Many Declines

Past Twelve Months Present Unique Situation in This Respect—Highest Price of the Year in January and Lowest Towards End of Year—Some Interesting Contrasts With 1911—Declines Occurred Down Through Preserving Season——Weak Market Due to Heavy European Beet and West Indian Cane Production.

With the end of the year in sight, it is an appropriate time to review probably the most important grocery market of the lengthy list—the Sugar market.

The past year has seen a considerable change in comparison to many others of the past inasmuch as sugar did not firm up during the busy preserving season, but continued throughout the year, with one exception, on its downward ride. By referring to the 1912 chart on the opposite page this will be immediately observed. At the first of January sugar was really $5.65 per cwt. on Montreal basis for best granulated, but before the first issue of The Grocer was off the press, it had begun its gradual drop. A decline of 10 cents had occurred—the beginning of the year's reduction of 90 cents per cwt.

1911 Contrasted With 1912.

A comparison between the sugar charts of 1911 and 1912 bring out the following well defined contrasts:—

1.—In 1911 the lowest prices of the year were experienced between January and April, whereas in 1912, they have come at the end of the year.

2.—The highest price of the year 1911 was in December and the three months preceeding. This year it was in January.

3.—Last year prices practically began at the bottom ($4.60 in January and $4.20 in February) and soared upwards ($5.85 in December), while in 1912 high prices began in January $5.65) and dropped gradually to the end of the year ($4.75) in December.

4.—The difference between high and low price in 1911 was $1.65 per cwt.; in 1912 it was only 90 cents.

5.—The high price of 1911 was $5.85; of 1912 it was only 20 cents lower The low price of 1911 was $4.20 or 55 cents lower than in 1912.

Heavy Crops Explain.

During the past year the gradual declines have been due to splendid crops of both the European sugar beet and West Indian sugar cane. Early in the year things began to look bright for a weakening market, but it was not until on in March and April that sugar men could feel at all certain as to what the crop would be.

At the end of January was the Brussels sugar convention talk. Would England succeed in having the sugar exports of Russia increased? If Russia were allowed to increase her exports 300,000 tons, Britain would not find it necessary to draw supplies of cane from the West Indies.

Just at the end of the month sugar went down 10 cents but this was recovered again during the week of Feb. 9, while another advance was recorded two or three days later, bringing sugar up to $5.55 again. These proved to be the first and last advances of the year. About this time it was announced that the Brussels convention would allow Russia to increase her exports 150,000 tons.

The $5.55 Montreal price held steady from the middle of February until practically the end of March. In the intervening time, the market was a little strong and a little weak, the latter condition finally holding sway and towards conclusion of March developed into a decline.

Market Continued Weak.

Raws still continued easier and the absence of buying on the Canadian market made the situation here weaker. The strike in England closed some refineries and consumption of sugar there weakened greatly.

Early in the season an estimate of the Cuban yield was placed at 1,800,000 tons. Towards April it began to appear that this would be realized. Market continued weaker and weaker until another decline of 10 cents occurred last week in May. In spite of the revival of consumption with the preserving season coming on, a decline was registered middle of June and still another the last week of the month.

This brought the Montreal market down to $5.05 which held until middle of August. In July it has been calculated that the Euuropean beet crop might be a million tons ahead of previous year. This naturally caused weaker feeling and through all our markets at this time this condition was pointed to. The only thing in Canada to have a tendency to check decline was the splendid consumption and consequent short supplies. Refiners were behind in delivery. Nevertheless the decline of August came. Price was then down to $4.95. All through September business was done largely on a hand to mouth basis. A steady feeling had shown itself near beginning of the month when refined advanced in New York. However Canadian market did not respond.

Last Drop of the Year.

About first of October the market again sagged, due to the splendid crops of raws. In The Grocer of Oct. 25 the last decline of the year was announced, bringing the price down to $4.75, which has held until the present time. In October the European beet crop was estimated to be 2,400,000 tons in advance of last year and with a large West Indian cane crop, the weak market was inevitable.

Total stocks and afloats of sugar at end of last week according to Willett & Gray, showed a visible supply of 3,204,845 tons against 2,511,824 tons last year or an increase of 693,021 tons. This would indicate that in immediate future sugar market will not advance. The Cuban crop weather seems as a whole to be favorable. The European beet crop has met with some unfavorable conditions and one authority has reduced his estimate for Germany alone 145,000 tons, bringing the total for Europe to 8,790,000 tons, against 6,346,000 last year, and 8,105,000 tons in 1910-11.

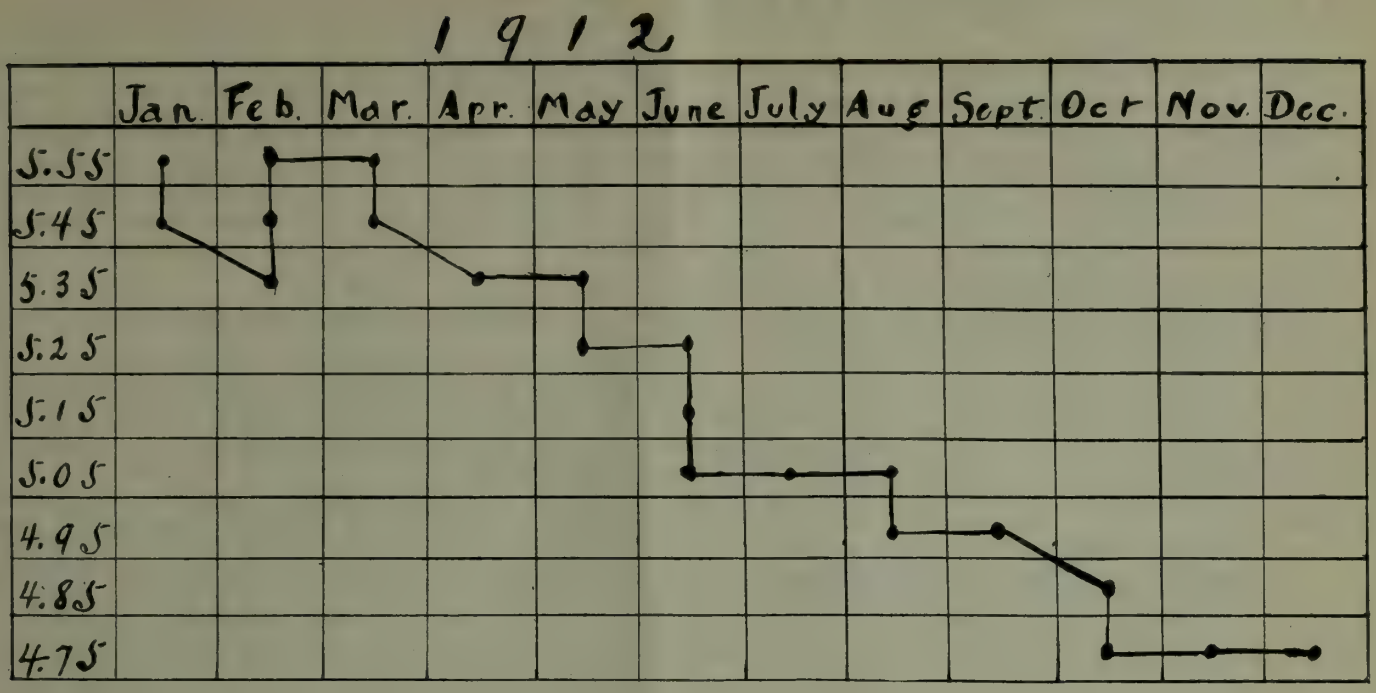
The 1912-13 Cuban crop is estimated at 2,250,000 tons as against 1,895,984 last year showing an increase of 354,016 tons. Willet & Gray's estimate of the total cane crops of the world is 9,034,000 as against 9,023,783 last year, allowing the small increase of 10,217 tons. When both cane and beet are considered, however, the total world's yield is 18.449,000 tons as compared with 15,910,884 in 1911-12, leaving an increase of 2,538,116 tons.

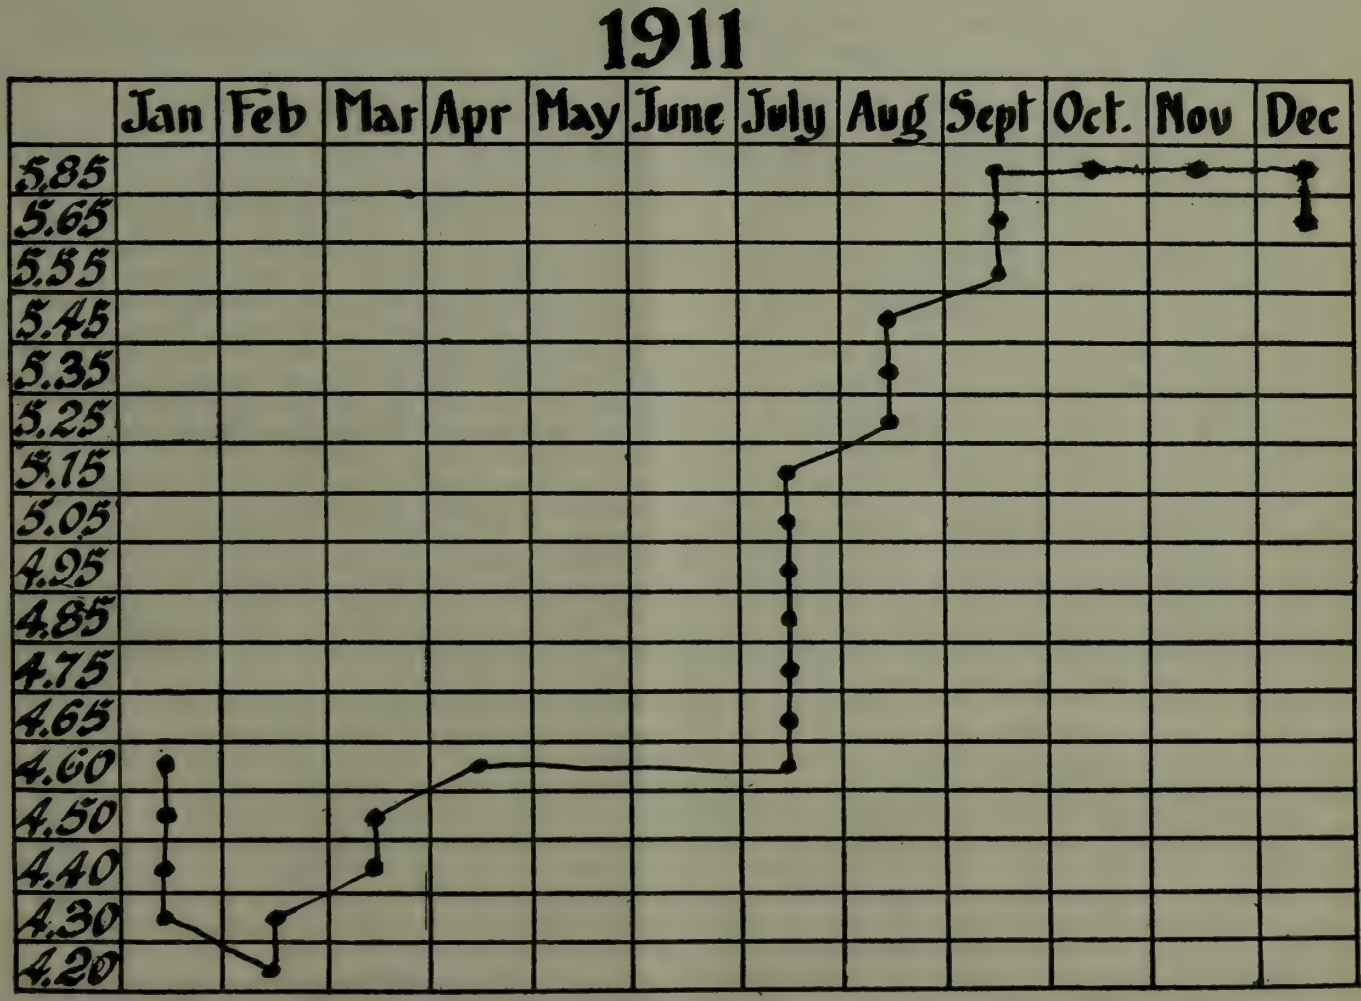
Explains Lower Market.

The inevitable result of this increase is reflected in prices of Canadian refined. One year ago cane refined on the Montreal market was $5.65 per cwt. To day it is $4.75.

With such an increase in production as above tabulated, and advance in the near future can scarcely be looked for.

In 1911 rice to the value of $52,160,204 was exported from Rangoon, Burma, Asia. From other ports in Burma, $17,672,952 were exported making a total of $69,833,156 altogether. In 1910 this total was $70,386,856.





The Canadian Grocers' sugar charts, showing fall and rise of sugar during 1911 and 1912. If kept on file this will come in handy for reference during 1913.

DON'T NEGLECT THE INVENTORY.

It is some satisfaction to know in dollars and cents what the net profits of the business are from year to year. This cannot be secured unless the dealer knows his sales, cost of goods sold, his overhead selling expenses and the goods on hand at beginning and end of the year.

The majority of good business men, of course, know these things. They go into business at the beginning of each year with their eyes open, knowing what they have spent the preceding year, to get what they have now.

This should not be the case with a number, or even a majority. Every dealer should have his annual financial statement at the end of his finger so that he can account for everything. What's the use of spending one's best efforts along lines that bring little remuneration? A close inspection into the operation of the business will reveal the mistakes and clear away the obstacles for the year to come.

If there is anyone who has not a financial statement prepared for the past year, or in the course of preparation, why not begin now for next year. Take an inventory of the goods on hand to-day. Follow this up by totalling invoices from week to week and month to month; do the same with sales; tabulate the overhead expenses, and when January 1, 1914, comes round, your stock inventory then will show you where you are at.

There is no better motto, no better New Year resolution, than "I must know these things."

BARRICADING THE WINDOW.

What's the use in dressing good windows and then barricading them up? "Barricaded" is the proper term to describe a number of windows noticed last week by The Grocer. In one case the retailer had quite an attractive display of Christmas goods, but this was considerably offset by a display of Christmas trees piled on boxes in front One could scarcely see inside except through the side window.

In a number of other instances, windows were observed half hidden behind kegs of fish, barrels of apples, etc., so that the effect was almost wholly lost.

Frost on the window is still another detriment in getting best results. Now that the winter season is coming on, every effort should be made to prevent frost. In last week's issue methods were enumerated by which this could be done.

Greater care and judgment should be used in regard to the above points. When the dealer or clerk has gone to the trouble of arranging a good display, he should see that everything tends to produce the maximum results commensurate with the selling power of the window.

PARCEL GOODS PROPERLY.

One of the first lessons for the new clerk in the store is the proper parceling of goods. No one wants to carry an ill-arranged parcel along the street. The particular customer too, will often judge the dealer by the sort of parcel he delivers.

Hundreds of customers scarcely ever see the interior of the stores at which they deal. They do their shopping by phone. They have no way to tell the character of the store or of the dealer, but through the delivery man and the parcels. If a poorly wrapped and poorly tied parcel is thrown inside the door, a feeling of distrust towards the merchant naturally arises. If the same carelessness continues to be shown, the dissatisfaction will gradually grow until the climax is capped by some glaring case. The loss of the customer is the inevitable result.

The proper wrapping of parcels may seem to be an insignificant thing, but if carelessness in this regard loses but one customer a year, it means considerable loss.

A DETRIMENT TO THE COMMUNITY.

Since the editorial, "Unfair Competition," which appeared in last week's issue, was written, an editorial in a supposedly broad-minded Canadian paper has appeared advocating the fly-by-night policy of anybody who can lower the cost of living. It seems this question has got on the brain of a great many daily newspaper writers. They want the "middleman" eliminated—something that is beyond all accomplishment with trade conditions as they are to-day—and nothing else seems to appease their anger over the high cost of living problem.

Here are some of the intelligent statements in the newspaper editorial:—

> "For the courage and ability that the ladies of the Philadelphia Householders League are displaying in a public cause, there must be hearty admiration. They can scarcely hope, by a spasmodic distribution of necessaries at low prices, to effect any permanent lowering of prices. When their supplies cease, prices must resume their usual level."

No one can get over the fact that the retailer is a necessity. If he is a necessity, the more healthy his business becomes by charging fair, legitimate profits, the more stable becomes the town or city in which he does business. If he is harassed by peddlers who pay little or no taxes, or by such misguided women as the Householders League of Philadelphia, who sell eggs to-day and are dispersed to-morrow, he is not going to make money, and he is not going to be an asset in the building up of the town or city.

Of course, these Philadephia women cannot hope by a spasmodic distribution of anything to lower its price permanently. They can undoutedly sell eggs cheaper because they have no taxes to pay, no store to rent, no delivery to maintain, no clerks to pay, no light, fuel or anything else but eggs to purchase, and no accommodation to offer. They kill the retail grocer's trade while they are in the business, and like the ordinary price cutter soon pass away. They are a detriment to any community because they disorganize things.

Any civic authorities that would tolerate such operations without charging stiff business taxes, either do not know trade conditions, or they are afraid of their heads when election day comes round.

THE MERCHANT AND HIS CREDIT.

Guard your credit. The success of many a merchant has rested very largely on his ability in carrying out that injunction, bringing him prosperity where other men, equally able in merchandising, have failed because they did not realize the importance of carefully conserving their credit. Merchants should not hesitate to give statements to commercial agencies or in the case of pertinent individual enquiries. How is the jobber or manufacturer going to be able to do justice in extending credit if one refuses to inform him honestly and frankly concerning his financial condition?

Many a man who is entitled to unlimited credit is handicapped immeasurably by his refusal to make a statement to the commercial agencies, and remains a small dealer all his life, when with the proper credit rating he would have a more advantageous purchasing power. The business of this country is conducted largely upon credit or confidence, and individual co-operation with organizations that make the gathering of credit information their business, should be looked upon with favor by every retailer. It is ultimately to his advantage to impart this knowledge.

"SHOWING" THE VENDOR

The State of Missouri has most aptly been termed "show me land." The Missourian wants to be shown every time; he does not take anything for granted nor allow conditions to exist just because he is too lazy or indifferent to find the remedy. And so with itinerant vendors, the native Missourian wanted to be shown why they were allowed to peddle goods around the country, taking trade away from the local merchants and then taking all their gains away with them.

A new itinerant vendor law has been passed in Missouri, which provides that all vendors must first deposit $500 with the Secretary of State to serve in the nature of a bond and pay $25 annually for a license. The $500 in cash is held as long as the holder of the license operates in the State. It thus serves as indemnity in case the vendor is found to be selling worthless goods or working a swindle on citizens. The dupes can secure indemnity from the Secretary of State. As a further bar, the vendor must pay the license fee of every county and municipality that he enters. Truly, the way of the itinerant vendor is hard in Missouri.

As a result of Missouri's desire to be "shown" some of the vendor's cash, the species is becoming almost extinct in that State. Legislation along similar lines, if introduced generally, would soon eliminate itinerant peddling almost entirely.

WHAT ORGANIZATION IS DOING.

In last week's issue, an account of the last regular meeting of the London Retail Grocers' Association was given. This showed, as readers will remember, that certain retail grocers had to pay more for a particular brand of flour than exclusive flour and feed dealers. The association as a body discussed the matter, appointed a committee to interview the miller, with the result that the trouble was satisfactorily adjusted.

Not long ago an article in this paper pointed out how the Retail Grocers' Association of Vancouver, B.C., had prevented credit losses to a considerable extent. This was accomplished through unity and co-operation with one another.

The Toronto R. G. A. last summer took up the question of peddlers calling out their wares on the street. They went after the city authorities and soon had the by-laws governing peddlers so amended that after the New Year they must forbear their noises.

These are but a few instances showing the usefulness of the association. Every town and city should be organized. There are questions arising from time to time that require united action if the retailer is to get his rights. The individual has little power to adjust these things. They need the backing of the entire trade.

Where most towns "fall down" in association work is that they fail to back up their organization once it has been formed. A good resolution for the New Year would be to determine to attend association meetings and help elevate conditions of the trade.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

May each and all of our readers have a Happy New Year.

* * *

Nineteen twelve has been a record year as far as total business is concerned. If you haven't an increase to show, something must be wrong.

* * *

If an inventory has never yet been taken, begin now. What it shows the retailer, easily justifies the time and work spent on taking it.

* * *

To make 1913 a better business year than 1912, the errors of the past must be avoided. Sit down and think over them.

So far as sugar is concerned, the cost of living is 90 cents per cwt. below this time last year.

* * *

A photograph of that Christmas window should at once be entered in The Grocer's contest. Those who can send it before December 31 are eligible.

* * *

Now that Christmas has come and gone for another year, the next big day of excitement in many parts of Canada is municipal election day. Exercise your franchise and help your native town by electing business men.

* * *

Even before the rush of Christmas business had been concluded, photographs and newspaper advertisements began to arrive for The Canadian Grocer's Christmas contests. This indicates the degree of interest being shown in the competitions. Every dealer and clerk who has dressed a good window should get into the race.

The Value of Good Store Equipment

Mechanical Tools Do Their Work More Precisely than Human Beings—Their Location in the Store Should Be Studied to Save Steps, Time and Money—The Equipment in a New Store To Be Discussed—How Basement Is Laid Out.

By Henry Johnson, Jr.

I do not remember when I did not believe in the best scales. My faith in them was inculcated by the elder Johnson 'way back in the beginning—say about 1880. How good the selection was may be indicated by the fact that I have scales now in use which were bought at that time, or thereabouts, which are as efficient to-day as they were then.

When I began to travel around a bit, taking vacations during which I visited other towns and stores, other things attracted my attention, and I put them into my own store. The old ball of twine was discarded as soon as I got next to the cones. Then I put in more cone holders than we had formerly had ball holders; and the cones were located at the most convenient points, so that false and waste motions might be eliminated.

Bought the First Meat Slicer.

In 1904 I visited a large store in another city and saw the first meat slicing machine, one of the very first in the country. When I got home, I looked into that thing. It cost $135 net, and for a little time I hesitated. I soon concluded, however, that soon somebody would get one and I should have to follow, if I did not lead. So I led and got mine. It put me out just a trifle when my hardest competitor bought one a few months after for $90, the price having been put down in the meantime; but I had accomplished what I was after, for I then had the nicest trade in sliced beef, bacon and ham in the town. The slicer had more than paid for itself.

So it has gone on until I am almost somewhat "daffy" on the use of mechanical appliances of all kinds and I have to-day, I believe, one of the most completely equipped stores of its kind and size on the American continent. That's "going some," so I may have to prove what I say. Moreover, I shall have to justify my contention that investment in such tools and appliances is about the wisest investment a merchant can make—as rapidly as his resources will enable him to make it. All right; I feel that I can furnish the proof.

*The writer of this article is one of the most successful dealers on the continent. He has spent almost 30 years in the retail grocery business and is well equipped to answer questions and smooth out difficulties with which others may have met. If a special request is made names of inquirers will be omitted when their letters are printed for discussion.

EQUIPMENT TALKS FROM EXPERIENCE

This is the second of a series of articles on Store Organization by Henry Johnson, Jr. In it he deals with Store Equipment—a most important phase of every dealer's business. Mr. Johnson, having been in the grocery business for 30 years, and having recently moved into a new store which he has equipped in fine shape, has something worth while to say in this and future articles. He talks from experience, so that his articles will be all the more valuable. He begins at the basement and shows what system and proper equipment mean there in cutting down expenses. Two weeks hence he will continue his talk on Store Equipment.

Human and Mechanical Tools.

Now let me revert to my talk of two weeks ago. You will recall that the idea was that we must Work With the Tools We Have at Hand. That referred to Human Tools. The makeup of Human Tools is beyond our control; we are in this regard mostly victims of circumstances.

The fundamental difference between human and mechanical tools lies in the fact that a ten-horsepower man may or may not deliver ten horsepower, and one day his rating may be way down to two horse so far as effective work is concerned; but the ten horse electric motor will deliver ten horsepower so long as we supply the current and keep it in proper condition. In other words, human tools may deliver their quota of efficiency and they may not; but mechanical tools DO THEIR WORK! You may turn your back on the motor. You may start it running and go to sleep. It will continue to run, faithfully delivering its quota of efficiency, until you shut off the current.

Using Cement to Stop Rat Ravages.

Again: A cellar floor left bare, so the goods are placed on the ground, will "do," and one may accomplish a lot with it. Also, if a man of an exceedingly faithful and tidy habit of mind have charge of the cellar, he may keep it up in pretty good order, keep stock neat and clean, avoid waste and reduce the ravages of rats and mice to a minimum. But such a man is a jewel of such rare occurrence that cellar floors generally are things to be kept down cellar and as much out of sight as possible. A concrete floor, on the other hand, will shut out rats and mice forever, so far as access from the bottom of the building goes; and the stock is automatically better kept. Moreover, dirt is immediately made evident to almost anybody and can be taken care of with the minimum of labor, which means time, which means MONEY.

With this introduction by way of preface, I feel that I may go on and tell about my own equipment, as it is the one I know most about, even though the telling take more than the usual single article and run over the instalment of two weeks from now. I think this is justifiable, however, on the ground of its paramount importance.

Planning for Two Years Back.

The new home of Johnson's was laid out and planned many times over in the two years during which we owned the premises before we began to get them ready for our occupancy; so many things about the store were laid out and executed with a thoroughness not always possible in the case of premises in regular, steady occupancy. But I am sure that if a merchant plans sufficiently ahead in these matters and does one thing at a time, he can gradually revamp his place of business. And you can take my word for it that, if he does this wisely, conservatively, logically and thoroughly, he will congratulate himself daily thereafter.

Cost? Certainly it costs. Certainly, too, one must have the needful accumulations to do it with. But, having the accumulation of, say, $5,000, if that sum can be invested in appliances, devices and fixtures which will make and save him $1,000 annually, to what better use could it possibly be put? In practice, if wisely laid out, $5,000 will come nearer to saving from $2,500 to $5,000 annually, so it will be a still better investment.

Last summer, then, I had a bare store to reconstruct. There were excellent stone walls, with splendid foundation which had stood over half a century without developing weakness, and good timbers. That was all I had, so there was a clear field. The cellar floor was bare dirt. There were no excavations under the sidewalk. But the building fronts on two streets, so there was ample opportunity to develop the space along such lines as seemed good to me. My sidewalk excavations are big now, yet I have room for fully three times more under-sidewalk space which I am reserving for future requirements.

Beginning at the west end of the rear walk, I excavated the entire space, 11 x 50 feet (about) and lined it completely with concrete—concrete walls to sustain the earth on the street side and to reinforce the old foundation walls; concrete partitions; reinforced concrete walks overhead and concrete floors. The first division is a potato cellar, about 20 feet long, and under the floor of that cellar, at the extreme west end, are the oil and gasoline storage tanks. The pipes to fill and also leading to the pumps run under the entire length of that floor. The tanks are then filled from the walk above and the liquids are drawn off through the pumps in the cellar or basement proper. Looks like a safe and permanent arrangement to me.

Cellar Divided Into Departments.

Next division is the coal cellar, about 8 feet. Next the boiler room, into which the front of the boiler projects from the foundation. This room is about 14 feet long. Next comes the ash pit, about 6 feet long, where ashes can be thrown all winter and taken out in the spring in one big job. Finally, the cheese and dried fruit cellar, about 13 feet long. Each of these rooms is completely separate from all the others; there is access to the potato cellar, the boiler room and the cheese room from the main basement, and each room is lighted by a big iron skylight set with glass eyes and insulated through the suspension of old sash, salvaged from the old building, against the skylight.

There are manholes through which goods can be taken in and also for ventilation. The whole is arranged for economy of motion, as in the boiler room, where the fireman takes his coal from one side and shovels his ashes out the other side—all from left to right, the natural way.

Cuts Down the Manual Labor.

This may seem elaborate, but the arrangement enables one man to do the work of two in an ordinary basement. Also, while the investment might look big for any small business, I cannot but feel that it is so complete and so permanently done and finally finished that it would pay even the man who might run his own small business almost by himself.

Consider that the man who fires the boiler has a place to put the empty boxes, barrels and other rubbish which we burn, where he can break it up readily; that he needs to do very little breaking because of the ample fire-box in the boiler; that the few shovels of coal are put on by a simple swing of the back; that he can run a truck over the entire basement, in and out of each room on a level; that the light is so perfect that he can see every corner of each room as well and as long as he could on the upper floor—then the economy of operation—that is it, ECONOMY OF OPERATION—is very great. Then the wisdom of this foresight and confident expenditure will perhaps be apparent.

See? I told you it would take space to tell this story; but I believe you will be willing to bear with me. Therefore, more two weeks hence, but meantime comment is invited.

Past Year's Business Well Ahead of 1911

Wholesale Grocers Pleased With the Results—From 20 to 25 Per Cent Advance Made, According to Several—Flour Mills Increase Profits—Wholesale Fruit Men Ahead — Many Complaints Regarding Delays in Shipping—1913 Promises Well.

From inquiries made by The Grocer from all branches of the grocery trade, business during 1912 has exceeded by a good deal that of previous year. It is, too, the general consensus of opinion that, had shipments by the railways been more prompt, the turnover would have been still greater. The railways are getting the blame for decimating 1912 trade to a considerable extent.

Evidences of the progress made in all branches of the grocery trade during past year are on every hand. From all accounts 1912 has been the banner year. Moreover it ends with every prospect of being surpassed by 1913.

While the retail trade have not yet had time to fully check up their business of the past twelvemonth, there is little doubt that the total volume throughout Canada considerably exceeds that of last year. Some retail grocers of course have not secured their share; the others have exceeded the 1911 business and some to a great extent. Undoubtedly the business existed; it remained for the aggressive men to go after it while others waited.

Away Ahead of 1911.

Wholesalers have been checking up their totals and invariably those seen by The Grocer report a splendid trade—better than a year ago.

"Our turnover this year," remarked a Hamilton, Ont. wholesaler, "has been away ahead of 1911; and it would have been still better if delays in shipments could have been avoided or greatly lessened."

This seems to be the general opinion among Hamilton, as well as other wholesalers. The year has been a bright one from a business standpoint, and had the railways handled shipments better results would have been even more satisfactory.

To illustrate the annoyance caused by slow freight, the Hamilton wholesaler related a glaring instance.

"We shipped a carload of goods to St. George less than 15 miles away," he said, "and it took just 13 days to get there."

This is an exceptional case, but there have been hundreds of others where the undue length of the delay has caused bitter complaints and loss of orders.

The Best Year on Record.

A manufacturers' agent and importer, with head office in Toronto, and doing a Canadian business told The Grocer that his turnover in 1912 was considerably ahead of 1911, and easily the best he ever had. It was up in the seven figure column.

"The West is growing fast," he said, "and this meant a lot of business for us, but you must not suppose we did not increase business here in the East. One of our men in Toronto did the biggest year's business on record in selling one particular line."

So far as shipping delays were concerned, some trouble was experienced by this firm, but not much more than usual. A particular case was the belated receipt of a carload of Christmas goods which had previously been sold but which arrived too late. They will now have to be sold over again.

"It seems to us," remarked this importer, "that prospects for 1913 are good. Already we have had an especially good big order signed for delivery in January, and it came with little effort on our part. We have considerable others in for delivery during first couple of months."

A Page of Value to the Grocery Clerk

The Clerk of To-day is the Merchant of To-morrow

By Bruce McDougall.

Enthusiasm is a necessary attribute to the successful clerk. The young man who looks after the welfare of the store and of the customers is going to have his usefulness observed. Reading between the lines of the article on this page one will readily notice enthusiasm in the author, Mr. McDougall. He is keen on window dressing, on interior display and on increasing sales, and is undoubtedly a good acquisition to his father's store in Ingersoll, Ont. His article is well worth reading by both clerks and dealers.

Window trimming is one of the most important parts of the grocery business. To-day, no matter where you go, the up-to-date business men are doing more of that kind of work. You will find nine out of every ten who are looking after their windows are the successful grocers and business men. You often hear a grocer remark, "Well, so and so have a pretty nice window in this time, but what good does it do—a lot of trouble and work for nothing." If that grocer would stop to think that the well-dressed window attracted the attention of the public where often otherwise they pass right by his store without even glancing in to see what he has got, perhaps he would try to be a little more careful with the next window he puts in. What looks better than a nice clean decorated store and a nicely dressed window giving the people the inclination to buy?

Taste and Patience Required.

Window trimming is an art by itself and to be a successful window dresser you must have two things: First, taste; second, patience. You will find there is more to bother you than just merely throwing in your goods. You have got to get the idea into your head and then place your goods so as to show up and sell to the best advantage.

In dressing a window, do not pile it up with a lot of different things such as a window of salmon with cereals as a background. Use a little judgment in showing lines that will sell another. For instance, last spring just after the snow was gone and everything seemed to be waking up after the long cold winter months were over, an idea came to me that a spring window would look nice and tasty, so I proceeded to build my window, giving it as a title, "The Kiss of Spring." I had a big pan made so as to hold a quantity of water. Placing this in the window I built sod all around it, banking it up so as to hide the pan. I then brought out every kind of canned meats, placing these in front and on either side of the window. I went to the woods and got a lot of small evergreen trees, placing them at the back. I then built a half circle, placing on it my cooked and smoked meats with a lot of lettuce and celery banked around. I then strung chicken, sides of bacon and other meats from the ceiling and let them hang among the bushes. Having quite a few stuffed birds I placed them on the grass under the trees and around through the window.

This made a very attractive window and helped to increase our sales in the smoked meats of which we handle a lot. Such windows as these get the people talking, and once you have the people talking, it's as good an advertisement as you can get.

Assign Window to One Clerk.

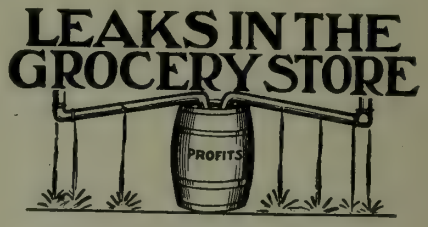
I think in every store there should be one clerk to do this part of the work. He should look after the window, the interior trimmings and the general cleanliness of the store. If he accomplishes these things satisfactorily his employer will have a successful business.

Our business here has increased wonderfully in the last few years and we attribute much of this to the fact that our store is kept clean and nicely decorated. Our window is always attractive and our goods are the best, and that's what people like to see and have. Our sign is QUALITY, and QUALITY COUNTS.

Methods of Increasing Sales.

A successful clerk to my idea must be energetic, clean and tidy, and always willing to do something for the store's customers. In selling goods I believe in bringing before the customer the quality of the article. A judicious attempt is made to induce her to buy something new that has just come in. If she purchases and likes the article, she will tell others. To me this is one of the best methods of introducing goods.

Three years ago, I established an order route calling on many people in the town who hadn't phones. On the first round I secured three who would deal with us steadily; to-day I have sixty, none of whom had ever been in our store. This is another method to increase business and a very good one for the dull summer months.



BROKEN PACKING BOXES.

By a Grocery Traveler.

So far, I have not noticed that anyone has referred to the leak in the grocery store caused by carelessness in handling packing boxes. For instance in the warehouse of a store the other day, I observed eight or ten packing boxes broken so badly that they would be unfit for anything outside of kindling wood.

Since the retailer has to pay something for these boxes, one would think he would get as much as possible out of them. Wholesale grocers are always after boxes, and he could easily dispose of any surplus to them. Boxes would sell all the way from 5 cents up to 25 cents. Supposing a hundred of the latter are handled in a year;- that would mean $25 if all were taken care of properly. I would say many grocers could sell $50 or $75 worth of boxes every year, all of which is that much more added to the sales sheet in the year.

Your "Leaks in the Grocery Store" column will do a great amount of good. Hope to see many of your readers represented with suggestions.

Century and a Half In Business

An Old Quebec Firm Founded in 1766—Early Trials and Tribulations — Have Now Twenty-six Stores in Eastern Canada.

Paspebiac, Que., Dec. 26.—(Special)—On the left hand corner of the photograph on this page may be seen the figures "1766." This is not the street number of the store. It marks the year of the foundation of Robin, Jones & Whitman, Limited, which was established in that year—146 years ago—by Charles Robin.

Those of you who have read the early history of New France, or Canada as it is now called, will recall that around 1766 there were some stirring times. Mr. Robin found it so. He came to this country in that year from the Island of Jersey in a small brig called the "Seaflower."

Met Early Reverses.

After exploring the Bay des Chaleurs, he decided to settle at Paspebiac, where he started a trading and fishing business. At the outset he met with many reverses, having his stores plundered and vessels captured by American privateers, and he was in fact forced to leave the country for two years. He returned in 1783, and from this period prosperity followed his efforts. He gradually extended his business, opening up branches at several places along the Gaspe Coast, as well as in New Brunswick and Cape Breton.

In the year 1896 the company amalgamated with J. & E. Collas, of Gaspe, under the name of the C. Robin Collas Co., Limited. In 1904 they took in Collas Whitman & Co., of Halifax, and made Halifax their headquarters—heretofore the headquarters had always been in Jersey, Europe. Some two years ago the company further took in A. G. Jones & Co., of Halifax, and the Atlantic Fish Co., Lunenburg, N.S., and the company is now carrying on business under the name of Robin, Jones & Whitman, Limited. They are now operating twenty-six branches in the Provinces of Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

The company have always kept to the old initials of "C.R.C.," which is their registered trade mark and by which they are best known on the Gaspe coast.

A History With Few Rivals.

Few retail or other businesses can look back 146 years in Canadian history so that Robins, Jones and Whitman, Ltd., hold a unique place in the trade to-day. The firm has certainly prospered. Half a million dollars would be a conservative estimate of its assets.

TWENTY YEARS AGO IN THE GROCERY TRADE

Following items are from The Canadian Grocer of Dec. 30, 1892:—

"F. W. Fearman is a candidate in the election in Ward No. 1, Hamilton, Ont."

Editorial Note.—Mr. Fearman, of F. W. Fearman & Co., packers, is to-day a well-known figure in Hamilton.

"Barbadoes molasses is firm and fairly active while stocks are not large and nothing good could be had under 32½c for a round lot."

Editorial Note.—To-day, fancy Barbadoes molasses is quoted at from 40 to 47 cents and choice from 35 to 42 cents.

* * *

"The following have been elected officers of the Montreal Wholesale Grocers' Association: President, Geo. Childs; vice-president, Chas. P. Herbert; treasurer, D. T. Tees; Directors, Chas. Chaput, W. W. Lockerby, and J. C. Rose; committee of arbitration, Geo. Forbes, Wm. Kinloch, H. Laporte, and H. H. Regan."

ADVANCES IN FOOD PRICES.

Finley Acker, the large Philadelphia, Pa., grocer, has the following to say on what foods have advanced in recent years and why:—

"How do the prices of the same kind and quality of food products compare with their market prices, ten, twenty or thirty years ago?

"Statistics show that such necessary staples as flour, sugar, syrup, tea and chocolate, and the modern staple of confectionery, have cost approximately the same for some years—except as the prices fluctuated with the varying market prices of wheat and raw sugar. It is interesting to note that the important items of flour and sugar are both lower in price to-day than they were thirty or thirty-five years ago.

"Coffee is lower in price that it was thirty years ago, although higher at present than it was several years ago. The varying prices in coffee will be found, however, to have been caused mainly by the fluctuations in supply and demand, although the present high prices are partly due to the coffee valorization scheme which is based upon the principle of safeguarding and developing the coffee industry by preventing ruinously low prices, during periods of overproduction and exorbitantly high prices during period of underproduction."

Siebert & Co., general merchants, Dashwood, Ont., have sold to G. Kellerman & Son.

The Dominion Railway Commission has ordered railway companies to furnish heated refrigerator cars for the carrying of perishable freight in less than carload quantities. The order is in the nature of a compromise. The shippers asked that the minimum be an aggregate of 10,000 pounds. The Railway Commissioners set the minimum at 12,000 pounds, and the applicants for the order are pretty well satisfied. Under the old conditions the railway companies were only required to supply heated cars for carload lots of 20,000 pounds to the one destination. Now the minimum for a car is placed at 12,000 pounds, and the freight can be divided between not more than five points.

Practically every bone in his body had been broken but nevertheless he recovered and lived for seventeen years.

WHAT BUSINESS ASSESSMENT IS.

Editor Canadian Grocer.—Can you tell me what is the law regarding the business assessment in Ontario?—Ottawa Retailer.

Editorial Note.—The Assessment Act says: "Every person carrying on the business of a retail merchant in cities having a population of over 50,000 shall be assessed for a sum equal to 25 per cent. of the assessed value. In other cities and towns having a population of 10,000 or over for a sum equal to 30 per cent. of the assessed value, and in other municipalities for a sum equal to 35 per cent. of the said assessed value."

The Denver Retail Grocers' Association have opened a bank. It is owned and operated by the association.

Canada at the present time obtains 75 per cent. of her supply of raw sugar from the British West Indies, whose total production for export is about 300,000 tons a year. In 1911 Canada imported 280,000 tons of raw sugar.

QUEBEC MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Hotel Mushrooms—Up $1 per case.

Montreal, Dec. 24.—Wholesalers are on the hop filling orders, the rush being heavy and difficulty in getting goods delivered embarrasing.

Some wholesalers have lowered Canadian canned peas due to the fact that the imported peas are lower in price, while the demand for former is also slow.

Some quantities of brooms are also lower by 25c per dozen, while prices on mushrooms are firmer.

SUGAR.—Demand is on the proper side so far as refiners are concerned, though, however gratifying it may be it is said that some confess to being behind a few days in orders. Evidently the trade have been buying from hand to mouth and on finding no decline would take place came along with substantial orders before Christmas. It would seem that the raws now being melted are high priced so that no decline is likely to take place till these are worked up. On the other hand with the heavy trade over, the market should become dull and concessions may be made to stimulate buying.

MOLASSES.—Market remains very as stated in previous issues no reason can be seen for any decline owing to decided shortage of fancy stock. The demand for all grades is good, the holidays having stimulated trade considerably.

Syrup trade is also lively, dealers taking up supplies readily.

DRIED FRUITS.—Market is active as far as certain lines are concerned and a good trade is passing.

California seeded raisins are none too quick to move, though, but yet there does not seem to be any very great pressure to sell and consequently little likelihood of any concessions being made. Currants are firm owing to limited supplies, while dates in cartons are selling freely. Figs are now being brought up as eagerly as is expected at this time of the year, and prices are unsteady, though there is no sign of a decline.

Prunes have declined one cent per lb., the crop evidently being larger than expected, while California loose muscatels, 4 crowns are up to eight cents.

NUTS.—As would be expected at this time of the year the demand is brisk and dealers are showing no hesitation in taking up good stocks.

Tarragona almonds have advanced two cents per pound, thus proving our recent statement to the effect that supplies were limited in spite of the easiness prevailing in market last week.

COFFEE.—Trade so far this month has been well up to mark and the demand at present is satisfactory. Primary markets are strong and though the sale of valorization coffee is looked to to produce lower figures, yet of course even if this should come about, local prices will be unaffected, as it is necessary for the market to drop a considerable number of points before prices here change.

RICE.—No change in price to note, firmness being the chief feature. Orders from country points are being received but are not large enough to prove that the outside trade have any confidence in the situation. Prices are certainly high and a slight drop would mean larger business, yet conditions according to local authorities would not justify a drop.

POINTERS:—

Coffee.—Firmer.

Tapioca.—Weaker.

Toronto, Dec. 24.—Complaints with regard to delayed shipments are numerous and louder than ever. Goods in many cases are taking from three days to two weeks longer than the usual time to arrive at destination, and much indignation is being felt against the railroads, especially since the extra demurrage rate was struck.

Business for 1912 has been very satisfactory. The number who report a decrease from 1911 standard are very, very few, and most are able to report a very substantial increase. This is due not particularly to the fact that greater gains are being made on goods sold but more goods are also being consumed. Where people have the money there is a very general tendency to spend more on eating. In another week more definite calculations with regard to increase will be possible.

SUGAR.—The sugar situation is changed but little this week. The beet crop estimate has again been decreased slightly, but chiefly in Russia. This will have very little effect, as the crop is still very large. Prices locally remain as quoted last week.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES.—At present there is little likelihood of prices, especially on corn syrups, advancing. Corn according to latest reports is very weak in Chicago and chances for it advancing are very slim. On higher grade syrups and molasses prices are likely to be maintained for some time at present level.

DRIED FRUITS.—California fruits are a little firmer this week. Bottom at last has been reached and with things getting into a little better shape higher prices are expected to rule soon. At present prices are very reasonable. Seedless varieties have all been closely cleaned up with the Christmas trade.

Valencia raisins have again slumped in England. Spain is completely sold out and the new crop is reported as the smallest on record for many years.

Next year's crop in currants is expected to be rather short. The attention of all the Greeks has been turned towards fighting rather than agriculture and thus the crops have been greatly neglected.

TEA.—On account of there being no sale in London either of Indias or Ceylons until January 7 considerable quantities of tea will be accumulated but the fact that people have been unable to buy for two weeks will tend to make the competition keener than ever.

Some of the offerings now are said to be stocky and autumnal. Gardens are now closing down owing to cold weather.

COFFEE.—No change in price has been made this week but a much better tone exists in the market. Imports are likely to be higher. So far as the Brazil crop is concerned higher prices between now and next crop will likely be realized. Direct shipments are not showing the quality of former years. On the whole the crop is not up to the level but in the better grades good quality is being received. "Judging from present conditions this should be a good time to buy. Certainly coffee wont see a lower price," said one dealer this week.

NUTS.—Nuts of all kinds have been pretty well cleaned up with the Christmas trade. "We have scarcely a pound of filberts or Brazils in the house," said one man this week. All have sold exceedingly well. Shipments coming in now are all likely to demand higher prices while succeeding shipments, it is expected, will be lower. Shelled almonds are likely to be much higher. These are scarce in Spain and are bringing much better prices.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, Dec. 23.—Local dealers had a great week. Business was better than it has been for many years; large orders were the rule and receipts were satisfactory. Trade in holiday lines, particularly, fruits, candies, Christmas groceries, etc., was well above average and those dealers who stocked heavily in this connection were fully repaid for their enterprise.

Speaking generally the market was quiet. There was decline of ten cents in Ontario flour which came somewhat unexpectedly with different dealers. It is regarded by those who keep in touch with the situation that now is a good time to buy in fair quantities and to attend to matter of storage. It is believed that the present prices will prevail until about the New Year or after both in Manitoba and Ontario patents, and that between now and that time is the best time to place large orders. As in the case of Christmas shipments by local grocers, so with flour,—transportation difficulties set in, and the consequence is the finding of St. John merchants with very little stock upon their hands, and with orders given but not delivered.

PAST YEAR'S BUSINESS WELL AHEAD OF 1911.

His western representatives are exceedingly enthusiastic over next year's prospects on account of healthy conditions out there.

From 20 to 25 per cent. increase is the amount named by a number of wholesalers.

In the flour milling business the three large, old-established firms had substantial increases. The increase of one is placed at $44,858, a second of nearly $40,000, and the third $77,000. Newer mills are pleased with their turnover, one showing a profit during the first year in business of more than $62,000. In considering the above figures it must be remembered that season of 1910-11 was a poor one for the milling interests, keen competition and adverse circumstances combining to lessen profits.

The output of flour is great but so is the overseas demand, and under ordinary conditions 1913 prospects are good.

The Christmas season always means heavy fruit sales. This year has evidently shown better sales than last.. One wholesale fruit dealer estimates week prior to Christmas brought 50 per cent. more business than corresponding week last year. During 1912 he figured business had increased 25 per cent. above 1911.

Fruit wholesalers found the same difficulty in getting shipments made promptly as wholesale grocers. "Many shipments," declared one, "to Ontario points have been from three to five days longer than usual."

Everyone is looking forward to 1913 with confidence. Good business until harvest time at least is assured and then everything will depend on the crops.

Low-Priced Goods Not Permanent Attraction

Peterboro, Ont. Dealer a Strong Believer in Drawing Power of Quality Lines—Illustrates How Trade Can be Secured by Sticking to Selling of Best Sugar—Advertises That No Better Can be Bought—Gets New Business From the Window.

"That low priced goods may attract for a time, but not for long if quality is lacking," is the opinion of W. H. Hamilton, a Peterboro, Ont. grocer. "People of to-day are above all demanding high quality goods, and the merchant who hopes for continued success must aim to give his customers articles of a high grade."

If the list of merchants of to-day who are prominent in their respective fields, were reviewed, one would find the majority have built their business on quality rather than prices.

In Mr. Hamilton's estimation, there are those who have appeared to make marked headway for a time on bargain goods, but their's has been the way of the sky rocket—a brilliant flare and then the drop.

Never Cuts Sugar Prices.

During his tenure of business, Mr. Hamilton has stuck persistently to quality goods. While sugar has been a favorite article of cut price in many places for many years, he has always maintained prices at a figure that gives a fair profit, always making certain that he sold sugar of quality. While competitors may sell low grade sugar, he handles one as pure as he can purchase. The bag contains a guarantee to this effect and Mr. Hamilton makes use of this as an argument in selling the sugar at a normal price.

Mr. Hamilton states that some competitors are occasionally prone to advertise the same kind of sugar at a cut price and then tell customers that they are just out. Their plan is to get the people into the store, express regrets at not having that sugar in stock and to attempt to sell them something else—"the just as good brand." On finding out the ruse, capital can be more effectively made from it.

Quality a Strong Magnet.

"The people of to-day are certainly demanding quality goods," says Mr. Hamilton. "Low prices at other stores attract some of my customers but the majority eventually drift back again. I somewhat welcome low-priced goods of other dealers. When people really want to be sure of the quality of goods they come to me. There is coming a gradual change, however. Grocers are beginning to realize that quality wins out in the end, and some of the most strenuous price cutters are going in for quality goods at fair profits."

He believes in selling a large package where possible. He points out that if a customer purchases a small package, she may go to the other grocer for additional supplies, "but when you sell a woman a large package, you make sure that she is going to use your goods for a considerable length of time at least."

"For instance," says Mr. Hamilton, "if I have a customer who has been buying olives in 15-cent bottles, when he runs out he may go to the nearest store to buy and I lose that sale. If I sell him a $1.25 bottle, he will not need to buy again until he can get a chance to come back to me. In addition, having a large quantity on hand, he is likely to use more.

"Besides, I find that the larger package pays the best profit. Here is an example, take washing ammonia. I have a 25-cent package which gives me a profit of 9 cents. On the other hand a certain five-cent package will only give 1½ cents profit. It also costs less to sell 25c worth of goods at once than in several installments."

Window Attracts Buyers.

Aside from handling of quality goods, a method used by the Hamilton store to attract business is by means of window display. Early in the fall, a display that attracted attention was one of housecleaning goods, such as soap, brushes, etc. In the centre of the window was a little house with chimney, etc., built out of soap. The end facing the street was made of red paper, and with an electric light inside, it showed up to good advantage at night.

"The window brings a good deal of business. A considerable trade has been built up in crocks and flower pots in just this way. At the proper season a display is put in the window, and this of itself attracts many purchasers," said Mr. Hamilton.

Good Season in California Dried Fruits

In Practically All Lines Production Was Heavy—Prices Opened Lower Than Usual—Estimate of the Yields.

In total tonnage the 1912 output of dried fruits in the State of California was exceedingly heavy. All of the principal varieties were produced in California this year in large quantities—larger than usual.

Looking at the market for all dried fruits in a broad way, the general tendency of the season just closing has been toward more conservative values than for the past few years. Growers generally have objected strongly to what they considered were too low prices in every one of the more important lines. The prospect, however, for heavy crops in California this year and the opinion of all branches of the trade that values had gotten beyond limits in many lines, combined to start this year's market out on a lower level, and even at that, prices in some lines have sagged right along.

There has been less of a speculative interest in any of the dried fruit staples this year than usual, and most business has been done against actual demand. This leaves the California dried fruit market at the present time in a rather better position than is usual at this time of year, and particularly so when the size of the output is considered.

After a very careful consideration of this year's movement and the figures and ideas of the different operators, the tonnage in the various dried fruit varieties in California for 1912 has been estimated as follows:

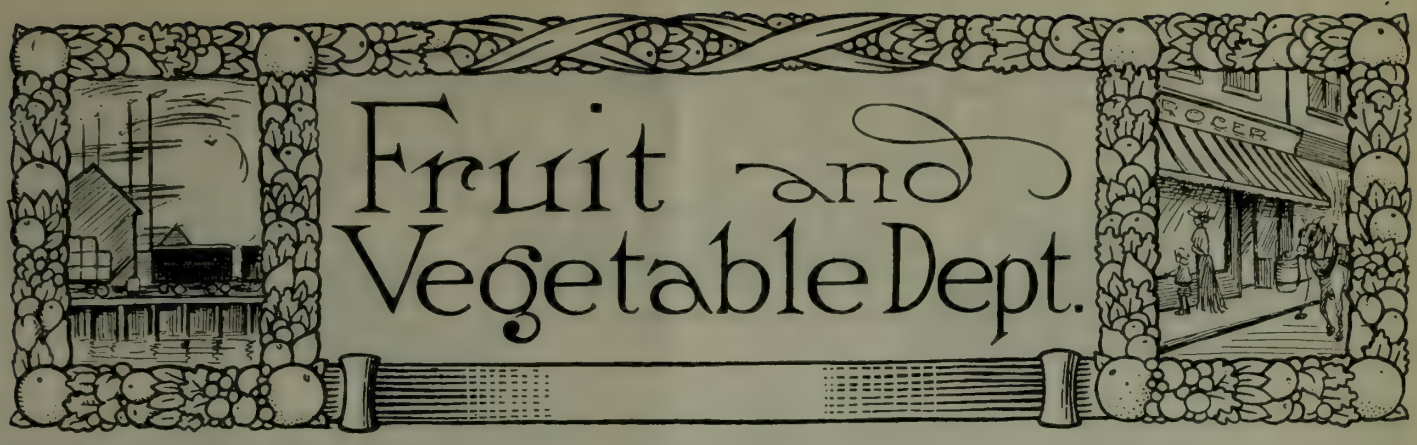
Apples	3,500 tons
Apricots	18,500 tons
Figs	5,000 tons
Peaches	27,000 tons
Prunes	97,000 tons
Raisins	85,000 tons
Various other	3,000 tons

It must be borne in mind that figures at this time of year are largely estimates and are subject to a revision a little later.

If it is an effort to be pleasant to customers, just remember that you are being paid good money just for making that effort.

Take all the good luck that comes your way but don't let yourself spend any time waiting for it.

What is a dollar or two a year for a trade paper if you get out of that paper one good practical idea for developing your business.



Fruit Demand Heavy for Christmas Trade

Wholesalers Report Good Sales— Florida Oranges Arriving Freely—Slight Advance in Cranberries — California Celery Moving Well—Southern Strawberries Here With Price Exceedingly High—Selling at $1.25 Per Quart—Marmalade Oranges on the Way.

Large shipments of Florida oranges have been arriving during past week. One Toronto dealer received three carloads Monday and one Saturday. Eating quality in these is said to be fine; color is good, and sizes all that are to be desired. Christmas demand has been very heavy this year, and in many cases greater business than ever has been done.

Sicily bitters for making marmalade are now picked and ready for shipment. Leaving Sicily about the end of this month they should arrive here about the third week in January. Advance orders for these have already been very heavy.

Cranberries have advanced slightly this week. Supplies are becoming scarce as only late varieties are coming on now.

California celery is now on the market and selling well. One dealer got rid of a whole car in half a day. Quality is said to be the finest in years. Stock is clean and entirely free from rust.

Fresh strawberries have been introduced on the market this week merely as a curiosity. Only one box containing 100 quarts was imported and these are moving out at $1.25 per quart. Quality is only fair and were it not that these were such a novelty at this season difficulty would be found in getting rid of them at prices quoted.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS.—As would be expected at this time of the year goods are moving out freely and prices are not at all unreasonable considering high level reached by certain other lines. Jamaica oranges are not over plentiful, in fact decidedly short, the scarcity being due to destruction of young fruit by hurricane. A considerable quantity of Floridas and Californias therefore have been brought along to fill the gap. As a result prices have advanced considerably.

Nova Scotian apples are selling freely and as they have a flavor absolutely peculiar to themselves it is likely that this variety of apples will soon take foremost place on the market.

Jamaica bananas are not on the market while other Jamaican fruit is scarce.

GREEN FRUITS.—There has been an excellent movement in all green fruits lately. Florida oranges have been moving out rapidly and in large quantities. One car of Florida pineapple oranges has been received this week. Eating quality in these is excellent. Being almost entirely free from fibre and containing much juice they make a very palatable orange.

Grape fruit is still coming in in fine quality; 64's and 80's continue to hold first place on the market, although all grape fruit has been rather cheap this year.

Prices in lemons are expected to hold firm for January shipment. No decline is anticipated. Demand has been heavy and consumption good in all parts of the country.

Onions are slightly easier this week and prices have been dropped considerably. Many Ontario's are on the market and are tending to keep out the Valencias.

The potato market has been dull of late and prices quoted are somewhat easier. Few vegetables of any kind are offering as all attention has been turned towards fruits for the holiday trade. With the new year a better movement in all lines is expected.

Mill Feed Prices Have Taken a Slump

Heavy Stocks and Quiet Demand the Cause—Flour Market Claimed To Be Growing Firmer—Fear Is Felt for Safety of the Fall Wheat as There Is Not Enough Snow—Business Generally Quiet Owing to Christmas Trade.

The most striking feature of the market this week has been the slump in mill feeds. Bran has been reduced to $20.00 and shorts to $23.00. Middlings are quoted at $25.00. Two reasons are given for this decline. Prices on corn have been very low and supplies have been known to be large. Then there has been a surplus of mill feed on the market. Farmers are still using their coarse grains and as yet have not begun to buy feed to any great extent. Further declines are not now anticipated and it is expected that prices will remain at present level till after the opening of the new year.

Some uneasiness has been felt on the primary wheat market of late. Large crops of growing winter wheat both in the States and Canada for want of snow covering are exposed to frosts. This fact has done much to put the wheat markets on firmer basis. Flour markets in Montreal are reported as firmer and even higher prices are expected. In Toronto there is as yet little life in the market.

More cereals have been coming forward of late and have relieved the shortage of the past couple of weeks. Trade has been more or less affected by the stock-taking on the part of wholesalers, and retailers devoting all their time to Christmas lines have been buying very easily of late.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR.—There is now a firm undertone to this market, the business being done in spring wheat flour both for local and country consumption being up to a satisfactory mark. There has been an upward tendency noticeable in prices for raw material of late and the present firmness in the market may be due to this move. Winter wheat grades are becoming firmer all along as Ontario millers are slow to make shipments, and as stocks on spot are light there is considerable strength in the market, and should the present heavy demand continue without a corresponding increase in supplies, it is almost safe to say that a higher range of prices will come into force.

ROLLED OATS.—Demand has been increasing all along since decline took place, country dealers evidently having anticipated this drop and held back orders. Many millers, however, cannot cope with the rush and are behind in orders and in spite of the fact that new oats will soon be delivered, it would not be surprising to see the market stiffen a little. Cornmeal demand is good and market is easy.

FLOUR.—The flour situation is practically without change this week. Business has been dull with no prospect of it stiffening till after the middle of January. Between the Christmas trade and prices continually declining all life has been taken out of the market.

CEREALS.—Although there has been much talk about the record corn crop this year and though the reason for prices dropping so low has continually been given as due to immense supplies, still cornmeal locally is very scarce and hard to get. All mills are oversold and unable to take care of the bulk of orders which have been flowing in. Under present conditions prices are likely to remain very steady.

More rolled oats have been offering of late and the scarcity of the last couple of weeks has been very greatly relieved. Business, however, has been quiet owing to stock-taking by millers, and the attention of the retailer being turned to Christmas lines.

MILL FEED.—A very decided drop has taken place in price of all mill feeds this week. But it is stated that rock bottom has now been reached and that prices will go no lower. Demand lately has been very slight owing chiefly to fact that farmers are still feeding their coarse grains and have not begun to buy extensively.

The world's visible supply of lard on December 1 was 146,444 tierces as compared with 195,699 tierces on November 1, a decrease of 49,255. The visible supply on December 1, 1911, was 207,360 tierces.

J. T. May, a London, Ont., grocer, lost a valuable horse on Monday in the yard of a hotel where it strayed after getting out of its stable in the morning. Citizens trying to catch it chased it into the hotel yard where it slipped on the snow and fell against the corner of a building, killing itself. It was valued at $150.

Advance in Halibut is Expected Soon

Catch Reported To Be Quite Small—Prices May Go Up from 1 to 2 Cents per Pound—Salmon Catch Also Small—Advent Season a Good One—Oysters of Good Quality for Christmas Trade.

Fish trade during the past week has been good. Demand for all lines of frozen fish has been heavy and with the holiday season oysters have been moving out better than ever.

Large quantities of Newfoundland herring in pickle are now being stocked by the trade. Quality in these is fine and a good price is easily obtained.

With a heavy demand, and limited supply, halibut have become a scarce article on the market. Catches this year are said to have been almost a failure. Advanced prices are expected shortly.

Still some uneasiness is being felt about the future in oysters. Judging from the weather map to-day there is nothing in sight which should cause much fear at present, but last year's experience has not yet been forgotten. Quality in oysters is said to be the best for Christmas trade for some years and plenty have been offering.

QUEBEC.

MONTREAL.—Market is easy under good demand and large supply. All kinds of prepared fish are selling well while haddies, kippers, bloaters and fillets are all being bought up steadily. Prices are remarkably steady.

ONTARIO.

TORONTO.—Both the halibut and salmon catches have been well-nigh failures this year, result being great shortages and higher prices expected in the near future. Halibut, very scarce now, are in heavy demand and are expected to advance from 1 to 2 cents per pound, while salmon will likely go up about 1 cent per pound.

Trade has been remarkably brisk during the past week and all lines have been moving out freely. The holiday has done much to stimulate trade in oysters and just now there is an excellent movement in these. "Oysters are of excellent quality—the finest stock we've had for Christmas for years," was the remark made by one man this week.

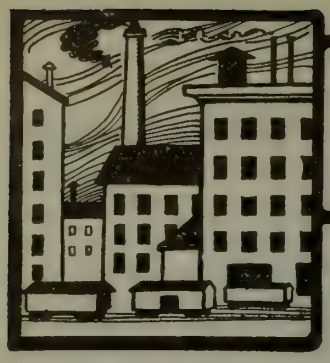
NEW BRUNSWICK.

ST. JOHN.—Week in fish has been good, with three fast days. Fresh stocks were in chief demand and run on cod and haddock particularly heavy. Smelt also shared in the sales and finnan haddies as well. The trade is now stocking in good quantities of Newfoundland herring in pickle at about $5.00 a barrel. They are nice fat stock and should sell well. Regarding shore fish, advices are to effect buyers do not want to buy at old figures and there has been consequent weakening of about 25 cents a quintal.

NOVA SCOTIA.

HALIFAX.—Lobster fishing season was opened on Nova Scotia coast this week, and the catch so far has been ahead of expectations. Weather has been favorable for fishing, and the fishermen are meeting with good success. The lobsters are of larger size than usual on the opening, and as a result the price is higher. On the local market they are retailing at $3.00 per dozen.

There is good supply of fresh fish, haddock being unusually plentiful. They are in good demand. Fresh codfish are also plentiful. Halibut are scarce and commanding 18 cents per pound.



Produce & Provisions

Butter Arrives from the Antipodes

Shipment Reaches Montreal at End of Last Week—Duty of 3 and 4 Cents Per Pound on New Zealand and Australian Butter Respectively—Provisions Remain Quiet—Poultry Well Taken Up.

In spite of a duty of 4c per lb. on Australian and 3c per lb. on New Zealand butter as well as heavy freight rates, about 500 boxes of New Zealand and Australian butter arrived in Montreal late last week from England. This is the first installment of imported butter this season and although no one doubted there was great likelihood of butter being imported within very short time still supplies were not known to be so near at hand. The quality of the New Zealand stock is said to be very choice as it is all grass make.

Demand from the Northwest and Vancouver appears to be over for the present. After being caught last season by having to pay high prices and in some cases extra express rates dealers throughout the West took precautions against such conditions this season and purchased enough butter while at lower prices to tide them over the winter.

Several complaints are still being made about the quality of creamery butter now offering. In some cases as much as 2c a lb. is being taken off on account of strong stably flavor or greasy texture.

The situation in eggs has changed but slightly. Many storage still flood the market and are tending to keep prices down. Report from the other side states that conditions in some of the larger centres are more unsettled than ever this week. Few newly laids are being offered but such as do come in are bringing very good prices.

Poultry trade up to the end of last week was quite brisk and in some cases continued on into this week but the rush for the holiday is now over and the market has taken a quieter turn.

During the next week, or until after the opening of the new year all markets are likely to be pretty quiet, and very little change in conditions of any is expected.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS. — Packers are more than busy filling orders and are finding the holiday rush even heavier than last year. Smoked meats are firm owing to considerable reduction in stocks following on unusually heavy demand both local and country orders coming along heavily. Dressed hog market is active but prices remain unchanged. Bacon and hams are also well looked after, prices having if anything, an upward tendency.

POULTRY. — The expected advance has not yet taken place so that prices may now become steadier. The demand is chiefly for turkeys, but chickens are in the limelight. TORONTO.

PROVISIONS.—The provision market has been rather dull during the past week and prospects are that it will continue so till after the holiday season is over. Offerings have been light, all attention having been turned to poultry for the Christmas trade. Prices, however, remain steady with no sign of change.

For the past week lard has been slightly easier and prices quoted by some have been about ¼ cent lower. Others have maintained original prices. It is not expected that a lower mark will be reached.

Offerings in hogs have been quite light and demand is very much easier. While some have maintained last week's prices, others quote $8.25 local, and $7.90 at country points.

BUTTER.—Practically no change has taken place in the local butter situation this week. There is still the regular trade but even that is easing off on account of the holiday. EGGS.—Strictly new laid eggs are still a scarce article on the market. A few are steadily being offered and these are rapidly being snatched up. But storage eggs are here in large quantities with still greater reserves in the United States cities. Late reports from the other side state a more unsettled tone in the market. Here both butter and egg markets have been dull during past week and all attention has been turned towards poultry which now that the rush is over is quiet too.

POULTRY. — Poultry has all been cleaned up pretty well and business for 1912 is practically over. One local firm called in their road staff last Saturday for fear they would have a large cargo arrive here Monday evening and not be able to get rid of it. Till well on in Monday business continued fairly heavy. By that time demand was pretty well filled and most stocks well cleaned up.

WHAT EGG CANDLING SHOWS.

In last week's issue the experience of a Montreal retail grocer with candling of a case of eggs was given showing that a large quantity were bad. Since then the same dealer has written The Grocer to the effect that he has had another 30 dozen candled and found about 23½ dozen selects, almost six dozen rotten and eight splits. These eggs were bought as selects.

Resolve to Establish Provision Counter

Aim to Get as Much of the 1913 Business as Possible—Cleanliness Essential in Attracting as Much Trade as Possible—Keep Enough Varieties to Please Every Customer.

With the arrival of 1913, every dealer should resolve to give the provision department more attention than in the past year. Now that advent is over there will be a good call for bacon, hams, etc., and every dealer should take advantage of this fact.

In every town and city, aggressive dealers give attention to provisions by having a special provision counter in a conspicuous part of the store. Many have this counter marble-topped so that it can be kept as clean as possible. Cleanliness must be made a feature. No dealer can expect to sell much bacon or ham if the counter is always littered with meat-ends, rinds, etc. Bacon or ham stored in a dirty box or basket as sometimes is the case, is hard to sell. The meat slicer or meat knife, too, should be kept in spotless condition to insure best results. The wiping of a knife on a dirty apron is another thing to be avoided. A special wiping cloth could be kept without much trouble.

How Competition helps Trade.

Many dealers think that a provision market will not pay if there is an exclusive provision firm nearby. The experience of a Montreal dealer in this regard is convincing proof that the department can be made to pay in face of such competition.

"Why the provision house on the corner helps me," he said. "It attracts people to this section for meats, and while they are here they come in to buy groceries from me. My provision counter sells them goods. I keep it as clean and inviting as possible, use a computing scale and give the very best of service.

"No, no, I don't want to see the exclusive provision house leave; it brings me trade I would not otherwise get."

Many others have found similar results. If they operate their provision counter properly they know they can get results.

Handle Different Varieties.

As a representative of a wholesale provision firm remarked recently, many retailers do not keep sufficient varieties to hold their grocery customers. They have probably one kind of bacon and cooked ham. People get tired of too much of anything and soon want a change. If they cannot get breakfast bacon, or potted tongue at their grocer's, they go where they can secure it. This is quite likely to cause them to transfer all their provision trade.

Summing up the various points: the retail grocer should during 1913 establish, if he has not already done so, a provision counter; it should be kept spotlessly clean, being topped with marble if possible; meat slicer and knives should be carefully cleaned and sufficient varieties should be handled to please all customers.

CALENDARS AND BOOKLETS.

The 1913 calendar of Connors Bros., fish canners and packers, Black's Harbor, N.B., is entitled "Flowery Spring." It is a reproduction of one of Savage Cooper's best efforts, depicting an early spring morning in England. The young lady of the house is shown strolling through the meadow gathering apple blossoms. The trees, fields and small lake in the background make the scene a very attractive one.

Libby McNeill & Libby, Chicago, Ill., have sent out an attractive 1913 calendar. The illustration is that of a pretty little country girl carrying a bunch of sweet peas. In the background may be seen the home among the trees, driveways and green fields.

The N. K. Fairbank Co., Montreal, have issued an interesting Christmas card showing the Gold Dust twins carrying packages of washing powder.

The United Refining Co., Ltd., have received a Dominion charter to manufacture sugar, syrup, molasses, soaps, etc., with head office at Louisville, Que. Among the provisional directors are Armand Lavergne, Charles Smith and Ernest Taschereau. The capital stock is placed at $150,000.

J. Ogden Armour, defending packing-house methods at a luncheon in Chicago, is reported to have said:—

"We eat, thanks to the packers, more wholesome meat than we formerly did. My father used to tell a story about a farm boy who once called at a house and took an order for a leg of mutton. Then a day or two later the boy called again.

"'You'll have to countermand that mutton order, ma'am,' he said.

"'Yes? Why so?'

"'The sheep's improvin',' said the boy."

Why Don't You do Like Him?

H. J. Buckley, of Moberly, Mo., who bought a No. 84 Kingery Corn Popper with Peanut cylinder extra for $94.00.

He writes that the machine is doing fine. I pay $40.00 per month rent and have four people employed, and machine pays rent and help.

Now to get at his profits in this little, big business, let's do a little figuring. Rent $480 per year. Four clerks at $5.00 per week each, $1,040, total $1,520, or 15 times the cost of his machine. Did you ever add anything to your business that beats it? In some cases they have earned more net profit than that of the business of the entire store. Furthermore, its attractiveness turns the eyes of passersby upon your store. Often it is the agent of sending them in. It helps the business in the store. The Kingery Peanut Roasters and Corn Poppers are of many kinds and styles—Steam, Electric, Spring and Hand Power. Ranging in price from $8.50 to $350.00. Sold on liberal instalments.

You should have Kingery's Book of Possibilities and Catalog No. 39. They are free.

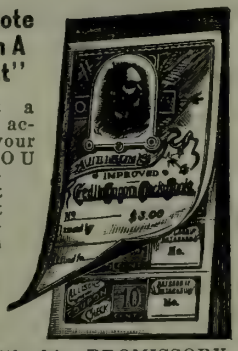
A Promissory Note Is Better Than A "Book Account"

When you let a man "run an account" he has your goods and YOU HAVE NOTHING, except YOUR account of his indebtedness. When you use



ALLISON
Coupon Books

you START with his PROMISSORY NOTE, and HE starts with the understanding that you mean business. Allison Coupon Books save thousands of dollars a year for merchants like you.

HOW THEY WORK

A man wants credit. You think he is good. Give him a $10.00 Allison Coupon Book. Have him sign the receipt or note form in the front of the book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with $10.00 — no trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten cent coupon, and so on until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10.00 and gets another book. No pass books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes. Allison Coupon Books are recognized everywhere as the best.

For Sale By The Jobbing Trade Everywhere.

Manufactured by ALLISON COUPON CO., Indianapolis, Indiana, U.S.A.

One of the most successful retailers of late years says: "When a firm advertises in trade papers it is getting into good company. As I pick up one of a dozen of these periodicals here in my office, and glance through it, I find that the best people, the successful firms, are represented in such a way as to reflect their importance in the trade."

Add $5.00 to Your Weekly Salary

DO you want to increase your salary by at least $5.00? If you do, we can help you. We want to engage the services of a large number of wideawake, energetic representatives. No matter what size your town may be, there is plenty of opportunity for a circulation representative of the MacLean Publishing Co. to earn $5.00 every week, in addition to his present salary.

The work is pleasant and does not require experience. You can devote your spare hours to it without interfering with your present occupation. If you are enterprising and intelligent, you will make the work very remunerative.

Leaving aside the cash profit, the handling of MacLean's Magazine by our methods is a proposition which will appeal to anyone, because it teaches salesmanship.
